St. MATTH. xiii. Ver. 52.

Then said he unto them, therefore every Scribe which is instructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven, is like unto a Man that is an Householder, which bringeth forth out of his Treasure Things new and old.

IN this Chapter we have a large Discourse from the great Preacher of Righteousness; A Discourse fraught with all the commending Excellencies of Speech; delightful for its Variety, admirable for its convincing Quickness, and argumentative

Clofeness, and (which is seldom an Excellency in other Sermons) excellent for its length.

For that, which is carried on with a continued unflagging vigour of Expression, can never be thought tedious, nor consequently long. And Christ, who was not only the Preacher, but himself also the Word, was undoubtedly furnished with a strain of Heavenly Oratory far above the Heights of all Human Rhetorick whatsoever: His Sermons being of that Grace and Ornament, that (as the World generally goes) they might have prevailed even without Truth, and yet pregnant with such irresistible Truth, that the Ornament might have been spared; and indeed it still seems to have been used, rather to gratify, than persuade the Hearer. So that we may (only with a reverential Acknowledgment both of the Difference of the Persons, and of the Subject) give that Testimony of Christ's Sermons, which Cicero (the great Master of the Roman Eloquence) did of Demosthenes's Orations, who being asked, which of them was the best, answered the longest.

Accordingly, our Saviour having in the Verse here pitched upon for my Text, finished his foregoing Discourse, He now closes up all with the Character of a Preacher, or Evangelist; still addressing himself to his Disciples, as to a designed Seminary of Preachers; or rather indeed, as to a kind of little itinerant Academy (if I may so call it) of such as were to take his Heavenly Doctrines for the sole Rule of their Practice; and his excellent way of Preaching, for the standing Pattern of their Imitation; thus lying at the Feet of their Blessed Lord, with the humblest Attention of Scholars, and the lowest Prostration of Subjects. The very Name and Notion of a Disciple implying, and the Nature of the Thing itself requiring both these Qualifications.

Now the Discussion of the Words before us shall lie in these following Particulars:

1st, To shew, What is here meant by the Scribe.

2^{dly}, What by being instructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven. And

3^{dly} and lastly, What by bringing out of his Treasure Things new and old; and how upon this Account he stands compared to an Houholder.

And I. Concerning the Word Scribe. It was a Name, which amongst the Jews was applied to two sorts of Officers.

1. To a Civil; and so it signifies a Notary, or in a large Sense any one employed to draw up Deeds or Writings. Whether in an higher Station or Degree, as we read in the 2 Kings xxii. and the 3^d Verse, That Shaphan was γραμματεὺς βασιλέως, the King's Scribe, or Secretary; or, as in a lower Sense, and Acceptation of the Word, we find this Appellation given to that Officer, who appeared in quelling the Uproar at Ephesus, as we read in Acts xix. where in the 35th Verse, he is called γραμματεὺς, which (I think) we may fitly enough render, (as our English Text does) the Town-Clerk, or Publick Notary of the City. To this sort also some would refer those mentioned in Matth. ii. and the 4th Verse, who are there called the Scribes of the People; as if they were such Notaries, as we have been speaking of; but the Business, about which we read in that Chapter, that Herod called them together, seems to evince the contrary; which was to enquire of such as were skilled in the Writings of the Prophets, When and where the Messiah was to be born. The Resolution of which, was very unlikely to be had from those who were only Notaries and Journey-men to Courts, to draw up Inditements, Bonds, Leases, Contracts, and the like. And from whence we may, no doubt, conclude, that this sort of Scribes was quite of another Nature from the Scribe here alluded to in the Text; and which shall be next treated of: And therefore,

2. This Name Scribe signifies a Church-Officer, one skilful, and conversant in the Law to interpret and explain it. For still we find the Scribes reckoned with the great Doctors of the Jewish Church, and for the most part joined with the Pharisees in the Writings of the Evangelists; and by St. Paul, with the Disputer of this World, 1 Cor. i. 20. and sometimes called also, Νομικοὶ, Lawyers, as in St. Luke vii. 30. and in St. Luke xi. 52. that is to say, Men skilful and expert in the Mosaick Law. Not that these Scribes were really, and properly any Part of the Pharisees (as some have thought;) for Pharisee was the Name of a Seēt, Scribe of an Office: And whereas we read in Acts xxiii. and the 9th Verse, of the γραμματεῖς, there said to be τῆ μέρους τῶν φαρισαίων, of Part of the Pharisees; the Word [of Part] is not to be understood in respect of Distribution, as it signifies a Correlate to the whole, but in respect of Opinion; as that they were of the Pharisees Part or Side, or (in other Words) joined with them in some of their Opinions; as possibly others of them might join with the Sadduces in some of theirs: By Scribe therefore must be here meant a Doctor or Expounder of the Law to the People; such an one, as Ezra that excellent Person, so renowned amongst the Jews; who in Ezra vii. Ver. 6. is said to have been a ready Scribe in the Law of Moses. For though, indeed, the Word Scribe in the English and Latin imports barely a Writer, and the Greek γραμματεὺς, by its Derivation from γράφω, strictly signifies no more; yet by its nearer Derivation from γράμμα, which signifies a Letter, it seems to represent to us the Nature of the Office from the Notation of the Name, viz. that these Scribes were Men of the bare Letter, or the Text; whose Business it was to explain and give the literal Sense and Meaning of the Law. And therefore, that the Men here spoken of, whom the Jews accounted of such eminent Skill in it, should by their Office be only Writers, or Transcribers of it, can with no more Reason, I think, be affirmed, than

if we should allow him to be a skilful Divine, who should transcribe other Mens Works, and, which is more, preach them when he had done. But

2. As for the Meaning of that Expression of being instructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven. By the Kingdom of Heaven is here signified to us, only the Preaching of the Gospel, or the Condition and State of the Church, under the Gospel; as repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at Hand, that is, the Gospel is shortly to be preached: Now we are to take Notice, that it was the Way of Christ in his Preaching to the Jews, to express the Offices, and Things belonging to his Church under the Gospel, by alluding to those of the Jewish Church under the Law, as being known, and familiar to them. Hence he calls a Minister, or Preacher of the Gospel, a Scribe; and this from the Analogy of what the Scribe did in the Explication of the Mosaick Law, with what the Gospel Minister was to do, in preaching and pressing Home the Doctrines of Christianity upon the Heart and Conscience; much the harder Work (God knows) of the two.

Now the Word, which we here render instructed, in the Greek is μαθητευθεις, one who was taught, schooled or disciplined to the Work by long Exercise and Study. He was not to be Inspired, or blown into the Ministry, but to come to it by mature Study and Labour. He was to fetch his Preparations from Industry, not Infusion. And forasmuch as Christ's Design was to express Evangelical Officers by Legal, there must (as I shew) be some Resemblance between them; and since the Matter, or Subject they were engaged in, was wholly diverse, this Resemblance was to hold, at least, in the Qualification of the Persons, viz. That as the Scribe of the Law did with much Labour stock himself with all Variety of Learning requisite to find out the Sense of the same, so the Evangelical Scribe, or Preacher, should bring as much Learning, and bestow as much Labour in his Employment, as the other did in his; especially since it required full as much, and deserved a great deal more: And so pass we to the

3. Thing proposed, which was to shew what is to be understood by bringing out of his Treasure Things new and old. By Treasure is here signified that, which in Latin is called Penus, a Store-house, or Repository; and the bringing out thence Things new and old was (as some are of Opinion) a kind of Proverb, or proverbial Speech amongst the Hebrews, expressing a Man's giving a plentiful or liberal Entertainment to his Friends, and such as came about him. And accordingly, as here borrowed from the Householder, and applied to the Gospel-Scribe in the Text, it makes the Drift and Import of the whole Parable to amount to this: That as the former, if a Man of Substance and Sufficiency, of a large Stock, and as large a Mind, will entertain his Friends and Guests with Plenty and Variety of Provision, answerable to the Difference of Mens Palates, as well as to the Difference of the Season; not confining them to the same standing common Fare, but, as Occasion requires, adding something of more Cost and Rarity besides; so our Gospel-Scribe or Preacher, in the Entertainment of his Spiritual Guests, is not always to set before them, only the main Substantials of Religion, whether for Belief, or Practice, but as the Matter shall require, to add also Illustration to the one, and Enforcement to the other, sometimes persuading, sometimes terrifying; and accordingly addressing himself to the afflicted and desponding with Gospel Lenitives,

and to the Hard and Obstinate with legal Corrosives; and since the Relish of all is not the same, he is to apply to the Vulgar with plain familiar Similitudes, and to the Learned with greater Choiceness of Language, and Closeness of Argument; and moreover, since every Age of the Church more peculiarly needs the clearer Discussion of some Truth or other, then more particularly doubted of, or opposed; therefore to the inculcating the general acknowledged Points of Christianity, he is to add something of the Controversies, Opinions, and Vices of the Times; otherwise he cannot reach Mens Minds and Inclinations, which are apt to be argued this way, or that way, according to different Times and Occasions; and consequently he falls so far short of a good Orator, and much more of an accurate Preacher.

This, I conceive, is the genuine and full Sense of the Words we are now upon, and which I shall yet farther strengthen with this Observation: ‘ That we shall find that
 3. ‘ Christ’s Design all along the Evangelists was ‘ to place the Oeconomy of the Church un‘ der the Gospel, above that of the Jewish ‘ Church under the Law, as more Excellent
 ‘ in

‘ in every Particular. ’ Now it was the way of the Scribes then, to dwell wholly upon the Letter of the Law, and what Moses said ; shewing the Construction , the Coherence, and Force of his Words, only sometimes sprinkling them a little with Tradition, and the pompous Allegation of their ancient Rabbies, Ἐπέβη τοῖς ἀρχαίοις. But Christ, who (we read) taught with Authority, and not as the Scribes ; as one not only expounding, but also commanding, the Words, took a Freedom of Expression, in shewing not the Sense of Moses only, but the farther Sense and Intent of God himself speaking to Moses ; and then cloathing this Sense in Parables, Similitudes, and other Advantages of Rhetorick, so as to give it an easier Entrance and Admission into the Mind and Affections ; and what he did himself, he recommended to the Practice of his Disciples : So that, I think, we may not unfitly account for the Meaning of our Saviour in this Chapter thus : You see how the Scribes of the Law with much Anxiety and Niceness confine themselves to the Letter of Moses, but the Scribe who is instructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven, and fitted to preach the Gospel, must not dwell only upon the Letter
and

and Shell of Things, but often enlarge and amplify upon the Subject he handles, adapting his Discourse to the various Circumstances, Tempers, and Apprehensions of his Hearers; and so letting it rise, or fall in the Degrees of its Plainness, or Quickness, according to his Hearers Dulness, or Docility.

Thus, I hope, I have made out the full Import of the Words, and the Design of our Saviour in them, which I shall now more thoroughly prosecute in this Proposition, naturally resulting from them so explained, viz.

That the greatest Advantages, both as to Largeness of Natural, and Exquisiteness of Acquired Abilities, are not only consistent with, but required to the due Performance of the Work and Business of a Preacher of the Gospel.

Not that I affirm, that every one, who has not such a Furniture of Parts and Knowledge, is therefore wholly unfit or forbidden to be a Preacher; for then most of us might for ever sit down and adore, but not venture upon this Work. But in giving a Rule for any Thing or Action, we must assign the utmost Perfection, which either of them is capable capable of, and to which Men ought to aspire; not to which, they of Necessity must or can attain. We know the Copy always falls short of the Original, and the Performance of the Precept. But still the Rule must be Absolute, and highly Perfect; otherwise, we should never look upon our Improvement, as our Duty, or our Imperfections, as our Defects.

In the handling of the Proposition drawn forth, I shall shew, 1st, What Qualifications are required as necessary to a Minister of the Word, from the Force of the Comparison between him, and the Scribe mentioned in the Text.

2^{dly}, I shall shew the Reasons to evince, and prove their Necessity: And

3^{dly}, I shall draw some Inferences from the Whole.

And first, concerning the Qualifications required, &c.

I shall bring them under these two.

1. An Ability and Strength of the Powers, and Faculties of the Mind. And

2. An habitual Preparation of the same, by Study, Exercise, and Improvement.

Which Two (I conceive) contain all that both Nature and Art can do in this Matter.

And

And first, for the first of these Two.

1. A natural Ability and Strength of the Powers, and Faculties of the Mind. And what these are, is apparent, viz. Judgment, Memory, and Invention.

Now, whether these three are three distinct Things both in Being distinguished from one another, and likewise from the Substance of the Soul itself, considered without any such Faculties, but only receiving these several Denominations from the several Respects arising from the several Actions exerted immediately by itself upon several Objects, or several Qualities of the same Object; I say, whether of these two it is, is not easy to decide; and it is well, that it is not necessary. Aquinas, and most with him affirm the former, and Scotus with his Followers the latter. But yet to assert with him, that in a created Nature, Essence and Power are the same, seems too near and bold a Step to the incommunicable Simplicity of the Divine; and according to the received way of Arguing will pass for a great Absurdity. However, not to insist farther upon a Point meerly Philosophical, but supposing (at least probably) that (according to the common Opinion) the Soul acts, or works by Powers and and Faculties, as well as Habits, distinct from its own Substance; I proceed to shew the Necessity of the three fore-mentioned Faculties in the Business of the Ministry. And,

1st, For that great leading one, the Judgment: Without which, how can any Controversy in Philosophy or Divinity be duly managed, stated or determined? How can that which is ambiguous be cleared, that which is fallacious be detected, or even Truth itself be defended? How, where the Words of Scripture may bear several Senses, some Proper, and some Figurative, can we be assured, which the Writer, or Speaker of them intended them in? How also, without this, when a Scripture has been corrupted, partly by filching some Words out of it, and partly by a supposititious foisting of some in, shall the Whole be rescued from the Imposture pass'd upon it, and so restored true and genuine to itself? And lastly, how shall many seeming Clashings, and dark Passages in Sacred History and Chronology be placed in such a Light, as may thoroughly satisfy, or at least effectually silence the Doubtful and Exceptionous? All which Particulars (with many more of the like Nature) being confessedly knotty and difficult, can never be accorded, but by a competent Stock of critical Learning; and can any one (even according to the very Signification of the Word) be said to be a Critick, and yet not judicious? And then,

2dly, For Memory. This may be reckoned Twofold. 1. That which serves to treasure up our Reading, or Observations. And 2. That which serves to suggest to us, in our reciting, or repeating of any thing, which we had endeavoured to commit to our Memory before. I distinguish them, because one may be, and often is excellent, where the other is deficient. But now, were this never so large, yet Theology is of that vast Compass, as to employ and exhaust it. For what Volumes are there of Antiquity, Church-History, and other Divine Learning, which well deserve reading; and to what Purpose do we read, if we cannot remember? But then also, for the reciting or repeating Part of Memory, that is so necessary, that Cicero himself observes of Oratory, (which indeed upon a Sacred Subject is Preaching) that upon the want of Memory alone,

Primo Libro
de Oratore.

Omnia, etiamsi præclarissima fuerint, in Oratore peritura.

And we know, that to a popular Auditory

it is upon the Matter, All. There being, in the Esteem of many, but little Difference between Sermons read, and Homilies, save only this, that Homilies are much better. And then for the 3d Faculty, which is, Invention. A Faculty acting chiefly in the Strength of what is offered it by the Imagination. This is so far from being admitted by many as necessary, that it is decry'd by them as utterly unlawful; such grand Exemplars I mean, as make their own Abilities the sole Measure of what is fit or unfit, lawful or unlawful; so that what they themselves cannot reach, others, forsooth, ought not to attempt. But I see not why Divinity should suffer for their Narrowness, and be deprived of the Service of a most useful, and excellent Endowment of the Mind, and which gives a Gloss, and a Shine to all the rest. For I reckon upon this as a great Truth, that there can be no Endowment in the Soul of Man, which God himself is the Cause and Giver of, but may even in its highest and choicest Operations be sanctified and employed in the Work of the Ministry. And there is also another Principle, which I account altogether as true as the former; namely, that Piety engages no

Man to be dull; though lately, I confess, it passed with some for a Mark of Regeneration. And when I shall see these Principles disproved, I shall be ready to grant all Exercise of the Fancy or Invention, in the handling Things Sacred, to be unlawful. As Fancy, indeed, is often taken in the worst Sense for a conceited, curious, whimsical Brain, which is apt to please itself in strange, odd, and ungrounded Notions; so I confess, that nothing is more contrary to, or destructive of true Divinity; but then I must add withall, that if Fancy be taken in this Sense, those who damn it in its other sober and right Acceptation, have much the greatest Share of it themselves. But if, on the other hand, we take Fancy for that Power or Ability of the Mind, which suggests opposite and pertinent Expressions, and handsome ways of cloathing and setting off those Truths, which the Judgment has rationally pitched upon, it will be found full as useful, as any of all the Three mentioned by us, in the Work of Preaching; and consequently slighted and disapproved of by none but such as envy that in others, which they are never like to be envied for the Want of in themselves. He therefore, who thinks to be a Scribe instructed structed for the Kingdom of Heaven, without a Competency of Judgment, Memory, and Invention, attempts a great Superstructure, where there is no Foundation; and this, surely, is a very preposterous way to edify either himself or others.

And thus much for the first of the two Qualifications of our Evangelical Scribe; to wit, a tolerable Ability, or Strength of the Powers, and Faculties of the Mind; particularly of those three, Judgment, Memory, and Invention. I proceed now to the other, and

2d Qualification: Which was an Habitual Preparation by Study, Exercise, and due Improvement of the same. Powers act but weakly and irregularly, till they are heightened and perfected by their Habits. A well radicated Habit, in a lively, vegete Faculty, is like an Apple of Gold in a Picture of Silver; 'tis Perfection upon Perfection, 'tis a Coat of Mail upon our Armour, and, in a Word, it is the Raising of the Soul, at least, one Story higher. For take off but these Wheels, and the Powers in all their Operations will drive but heavily. Now it is not enough to have Books, or for a Man to have his Divinity in his Pocket, or upon the Shelf; but he must have mastered his Notions, till they even incorporate into his Mind, so as to be able to produce, and wield them upon all Occasions; and not when a Difficulty is proposed, and a Performance enjoined, to say, that he will consult such and such Authors: For this is not to be a Divine, who is rather to be a walking Library, than a walking Index. As, to go no farther than the Similitude in the Text, we should not account him a good or generous House-Keeper, who should not have always something of standing Provision by him, so as never to be surprized, but that he should still be found able to treat his Friend at least, though perhaps not always presently to feast him: So the Scribe here spoken of should have an inward, lasting Fulness and Sufficiency, to support and bear him up; especially where present Performance urges, and actual Preparation can be but short. Thus, it is not the Oil in the Wick, but in the Vessel, which must feed the Lamp. The former indeed may cause a present Blaze, but it is the latter which must give it a lasting Light. It is not the Spending-Money a Man has in his Pocket, but his Hoards in the Chest, or in the Bank, which must make him rich. A dying Man has

has his Breath in his Nostrils, but to have it in the Lungs is that which must preserve Life. Nor will it suffice to have raked up a few Notions here and there, or to rally up all one's little Utmost into one Discourse, which can constitute a Divine, or give a Man Stock enough to set up with ; any more than a Soldier who had filled his Snapsack should thereupon set up for keeping House. No ; a Man would then quickly be drained, his short Stock would serve but for one Meeting in ordinary Converse, and he would be in Danger of meeting with the same Company twice. And therefore there must be Store, Plenty, and a Treasure, lest he turn Broker in Divinity, and having run the Rounds of a beaten exhausted Common Place, be forced to stand still, or go the same Round over again ; pretending to his Auditors, that it is profitable for them to hear the same Truths often inculcated to them ; though, I humbly conceive, that to inculcate the same Truths, is not of necessity to repeat the same Words. And therefore to avoid such beggarly Pretences, there must be an Habitual Preparation as to the Work we are now speaking of. And that in two respects.

1. In respect of the Generality of Knowledge required to it. The Truth is, if we consider that great Multitude of Things to be known, and the Labour and Time required to the Knowledge of each Particular, it is enough to discourage and dash all Attempt, and cause a careless Despair. What Hippocrates said of the Cure of the Body, is much truer of the Cure of the Soul, That Life is short, and Art long. And I might add also, that the Mind is weak and narrow, and the Business difficult and large. And should I say, that Preaching was the least part of a Divine, it would I believe be thought a bold Word, and look like a Paradox, (as the World goes) but perhaps, for all that, never the farther from being a great Truth. For is it not a greater Thing, to untie the Knots of many intricate and perplexing Controversies? And to bring together all the Ends of a loose, and hardly cohering Hypothesis? To refute the Opinions, and stop the Mouths of Gainlayers, whereas some of them are so opposite amongst themselves, that you can hardly confute one, but with Arguments taken from the other, though both of them equally erroneous? In which and the like Cases to carry an Argument for

for the Defence of Truth so warily and exactly, that an Adversary shall not sometimes be able to pervert it to the Support of an Error (since though the Argument may be materially the same, yet the different Application and Management of it may produce quite different Inferences from it.) This, no doubt, is a Matter of great Difficulty, and no less Dexterity. And the like also may be said of Casuistical Divinity for resolving Cases of Conscience; especially where several Obligations seem to interfere and (as it were) jostle one another, so that it seems impossible to the Conscience to turn either way without Sin, and while it does so, must needs be held under great Distraction. To clear a way out of which, being a Work certainly depending upon much Knowledge of the Canon and Civil Laws, as well as of the Principles of Divinity, it must needs require much Toil and Labour for the Casuist to provide himself with Materials for this Purpose, and then no less Art and Skill to manage and apply them to the Conscience. And as it is highly requisite, that this should in some Measure be found in every Divine, and in its Height and Perfection fection in some, which since it cannot well be, but by the whole Employment of a Man's Time, not took off or diverted by other Ministerial Business, it so far shews the happy Constitution of such Churches, as afford Place of suitable Scholastick Maintenance (without the Trouble of a Pastoral Charge) for such, whose Abilities carry them to the Study of the Controversial, or Critical Part of Theology, rather than any other belonging to the Ministry. But on the contrary, where there is no such proper Maintenance allotted for a Divine, but by Preaching only; let us suppose, that which in such a Case we easily may. That one had a peculiar Inclination to Controversy, or to dive into Antiquity, or to search critically into the original Letter of the Scriptures; and withall had little Inclination, and perhaps less Ability, to preach, but yet knew no other Way to live as a Divine, but by Preaching. Do we not here lose an excellent Casuist, an accurate Critick, or profound School-Divine, only to make a very mean Preacher? Who, had he had the forementioned Opportunity of Encouragement, might have been eminently serviceable to the Church in any of those other

other Ways, while he only serves the natural Necessities of Life in this. And this has been observed by a Learned Knight, to have been an Inconvenience even in those Days, when the Revenues of the Church were not wholly reformed from it; that for our not then setting aside whole Societies for the managing of Controversies and nothing else, as the Church of Rome finds it necessary to do, Divines for the most part handle Controversies only as a Diversion in the midst of their other Pastoral Labours, and many of them have performed it accordingly. For as a Man's Faculties will not suffice him for all Arts and Sciences, so neither will they sometimes reach all the Parts and Difficulties of any of them. But the late Times made the Matter yet ten times worse with us, when the Rooters and Through-Reformers made clean Work with the Church, and took away all, and so by stripping the Clergy of their Rights and Preferments, left us in a fair Posture (you may be sure) both Offensive and Defensive, to encounter our Acute, and Learned Adversaries the Jesuites. For then the Polemicks of the Field had quite silenced those of the Schools. All being took up and busied, some in Pulpits, and some in Tubs, in the grand Work of Preaching and holding forth, and that of Edification (as the Word then went;) so that they seemed like an Army of Men armed only with Trowels, and perhaps amongst Thousands only a Saul and a Jonathan with Swords in their Hands, only one or two with Scholastick Artillery, and Preparation for Controversy. But this by the way, and as a sad Instance to shew how fatal it is, that when Divinity takes in so large a Compass of Learning, and that for so many Uses, the Church should be robbed of the proper, and most effectual Means of stocking herself with it.

But some perhaps will reply; what needs all this? we are resolved to preach only, and look no farther, and for this much Reading cannot be requisite, except only, for the Delivery of our Sermons: For we will preach our own Experiences. To which I answer, That be this as it may; but yet if these Men preach their own Experiences (as they call them) without some other sort of Reading and Knowledge, both their Hearers, and themselves too, will quickly have more than sufficient Experience of their Confidence, and

ridiculous Impertinence. But as there are certain Mountebanks and Quacks in Physick, so there are much the same also in Divinity, such as have only two or three little Experiments, and popular Harangues to entertain and amuse the Vulgar with; but being wholly unacquainted with the solid Grounds and Rules of Science, from whence alone come true Sufficiency and Skill, they are pitifully ignorant and useless as to any great and worthy Purposes; and fit for little else, but to shew the World how easily Fools may be imposed upon by Knaves. And thus much for Habitual Preparation in Point of Knowledge; besides which, there is required also in the

2d Place, The like Preparation as to significant Speech and Expression. For as I shew, that by Knowledge a Man informs himself, so by Expression he conveys that Knowledge to others; and as bare Words convey, so the Propriety and Elegancy of them gives Force and Facility to the Conveyance. But because this is like to have more Opposers; especially such as call a Speaking coherently upon any Sacred Subject, a Blending of Man's Wisdom with the Word, an Offering of strange Fire; and account the being Pertinent, even the next Door to the being Profane, I say, for their Sakes, I shall prove a Thing clear in itself by Scripture, and that not by Arguments, or Consequences drawn from thence, but by downright Instances occurring in it, and those so very plain, that even such as themselves cannot be ignorant of them. For in God's Word we have not only a Body of Religion, but also a System of the best Rhetorick: And as the highest Things require the highest Expressions, so we shall find nothing in Scripture so sublime in itself, but it is reached, and sometimes overtopp'd by the Sublimity of the Expression. And first, where did Majesty ever ride in more Splendor, than in those Descriptions of the Divine Power in Job, in the xxxviiiith, xxxixth, and xlth Chapters? And what Triumph was ever celebrated with higher, livelier, and more exalted Poetry, than in the Song of Moses, in xxxii. Deut.? And then for the Passions of the Soul; which being Things of the highest Transport, and most wonderful and various Operation in Human Nature, are therefore the proper Object and Business of Rhetorick: Let us take a View how the Scripture expresses the most noted and powerful of them. And here, what what Poetry ever parallel'd Solomon in his Description of Love, as to all the Ways, Effects, and Extasies, and little Tyrannies of that commanding Passion? See Ovid with his omnia vincit amor, &c. And Virgil with his vulnus alit venis & cæco carpitur igne, &c. How jejune and thin are they to the Poetry of Solomon, in the viiith Chapter of the Canticles, and the 6th Verse; Love is strong as Death, and Jealousy cruel as the Grave? And as for his Description of Beauty, he describes that so, that he even transcribes it into his Expressions. And where do we read such strange Risings and Fallings, now the Faintings and Languishings, now the Terrors and Astonishments of Despair venting themselves in such high amazing Strains, as in lxxvii. Psalms? Or where did we ever find Sorrow flowing forth in such a natural prevailing Pathos, as in the Lamentations of Jeremy? One would think, that every Letter was wrote with a Tear, every Word was the Noise of a breaking Heart; that the Author was a Man compacted of Sorrows; disciplined to Grief from his Infancy; one who never breathed but in Sighs, nor spoke but in a Groan. So that he, who said he would not read the Scripture for fear of spoiling his Style, shewed himself as much a Blockhead as an Atheist, and to have as small a Gust of the Elegancies of Expression, as of the Sacredness of the Matter. Politian. And shall we now think that the Scripture forbids all Ornament of Speech, and engages Men to be dull, flat, and slovenly in all their Discourses? But let us look a little farther, and see whether the New Testament abrogates what we see so frequently used in the Old? And for this, what mean all the Parables used by our Saviour, the known and greatest Elegancies of Speech? so that if this Way was unlawful before, Christ by his Example has authorized and sanctified it since, and if good and lawful, has confirmed it. But as for the Men whom we contend with; I see not why they should exterminate all Rhetorick, who still treat of Things figuratively, and by the worst of Figures too, their whole Discourse being one continued Meiosis to diminish, lessen, and debase the great Things of the Gospel infinitely below themselves. Besides that I need not go beyond the very Words of the Text for an impregnable Proof of this: For Christ says, that a Scribe instructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven ought to bring out of his Treasure Things new and old. Now I demand, what are the Things here to be understood? For as to the Matter, which he is here to treat of, the Articles of the Christian Religion are and still must be the same, and therefore there can be no such Variety as New and Old in them. Wherefore it remains, that this Variety can be only in the way of expressing those Things. Besides that our Saviour Christ, in these Words, particularly relates to the Manner of his own Preaching, upon Occasion of the very Sermon, which we find all along this Chapter delivered in Parables; so that by New and Old may probably be meant nothing else, but a Plenty, or fluent Dexterity of the most suitable Words, and pregnant Arguments, to set off and enforce Gospel - Truths. For questionless, when Christ says, that a Scribe must be stocked with Things new and old, we must not think that he meant, that he should have an Hoard of old Sermons, (whosoever made them) with a Bundle of new Opinions; for this certainly would have furnished out such Entertainment to his Spiritual Guests, as no rightly-disposed Palate could ever relish, or Stomach bear. And therefore, the Thing which Christ

here drive at, must needs be only variety and copiousness of sacred Eloquence.

And thus much for the first of the three General Heads proposed by us for the handling these Words; which was to shew the Qualifications necessary for a Gospel-Scribe instructed unto the Kingdom of Heaven. And these were two; first, Habitual Preparation, in point of Learning or Knowledge; and secondly, The other in point of significant Speech or Expression: I proceed now to the

II. General Head propos'd; Which was, to assign the Reasons of this their Necessity; and these shall be Three.

I. Because the Preacher works upon Mens Minds only as a Moral Agent, and as one, who can do no more than persuade, and not by any Physical Efficiency. And herein I do not say, that Conversion is caused only by Moral Suasion: For if we consider the Strength of our Corruption, and how it has insinuated itself into the very Principles of Nature, and seized upon those Powers, which are but very little under the Command of the Intellectual Part, I think it cannot be subdued by meer Suasion, which in its utmost, reaches only to the convincing of that : But the Heart must be changed by a much higher Power, even by an immediate Omnipotent Work of God's Spirit infusing a Quality into the Soul, not there before, which by degrees shall weaken, and work out our inherent natural Corruption : And this being a creating Work, is done solely and immediately by God himself, so far as Creation admits of no Instrument, as being an Effect of that infinite Creative Power, which cannot be conveyed to an Instrumental Agent.

But you will say then, if Conversion be the sole immediate Work of God, what need is there of a Preacher ? And how can he be said to be, as usually he is, God's Instrument in the Work of a Man's Conversion ; To which I answer, 1st, That God's Institution of Preaching is a sufficient Reason for it, though we knew no other. 2dly, That when the Preacher is said to be an Instrument in the Conversion of a Sinner, it is not meant, that he is such, by a properly Physical Efficiency, but only Morally, and by Persuasion. I explain my Meaning thus. A Physical Instrument, or such as is found in natural efficient Productions, is that, which partaking of the Power, Force, and Causality of the principal Agent from thence derived to it, produces a suitable Effect. As when I cut or divide a Thing, the Force of my Hand is conveyed to the Knife, by vertue of which, the Knife cuts or divides. And thus, I say, the Preacher cannot be the Instrument of Conversion, for the Reason above-mentioned; because that infinite Power, which does convert, cannot be conveyed to any finite Being whatsoever. But a Moral Instrument is quite of another Nature; and is that (as I may so express it) Non quo producente, sed quo interveniente sequitur effectus. Not that, which Conversion is effected by, but that without which (ordinarily at least) it is not. So that while the Minister is preaching and persuading, God puts forth another secret Influence quite different from that of the Preacher, though still going along with it: And it is this, by which God immediately touches the Sinner's Heart, and converts him. Howbeit, the Preacher is still said to be instrumental in this great Work; forasmuch as his Preaching is subordinate to, and most commonly (as has been said) accompanies it: God not being pleased to exert his action, but in Concurrence with the Preacher exerting his.

And

And thus having given God his Prerogative, and the Preacher his Due, by shewing, how he is morally Instrumental to the Work of the Sinner's Conversion by persuading; I infer the Necessity of those forementioned Abilities and Preparations for Preaching, as being the most proper Means and Instruments of Persuasion. See this exemplified in St. Paul himself, and in him observe, when he deals with the Jews, how he endeavours to insinuate what he says, by pleading his own Kindred with them, speaking honourably of Abraham, and of the Law, and calling the Gospel the Law of Faith; and affirming, that it did establish the Law. All which was the true Art of natural Rhetorick, thus to convey his Sense under those Names and Notions, which he knew were highly pleasing to them. But then, on the other hand, when he would win over the Gentiles; forasmuch as there was a standing Feud between them and the Jews; (the Jews, like the Men here of late, for ever unfainting all the World, besides themselves;) observe how he deals with them. He tells them of the Rejection of the Jews, and the Gentiles being ingrafted in their room: And that Abraham believed unto Justification before he was circumcised, and therefore was no less the Father of the uncircumcised Believers, than of the circumcised. He tells them also, that the believing Gentiles were his Spiritual Seed, but the Jews, as such, were only his Carnal. He takes Occasion also to undervalue Circumcision, and the Ceremonial Law, as abused by the Jews, and in themselves Things most hateful to other Nations. Now all this was hugely pleasing to the Gentiles, and therefore very apt to persuade. But had not St. Paul been a Man of Learning and Skill in the Art and Methods of Rhetorick, he could not have suited such opposite Exhortations to such different sorts of Men with so much Dexterity. And the same Course, in dealing with Men's Minds, is a Minister of the Word to take now. As suppose, he would dissuade Men from any Vice, he is to found his Dissuasives upon the peculiar Temper of the Man; so that, if for Instance, he should find it needful to preach against Drunkenness, and there were several in the Congregation addicted to several sorts of Vice, as some to Pride or Ambition, some to Covetousness, or the like; here, besides the general Argument from the Punishments of

of the other World denounced against these, and such other Vices ; if he would do his Business effectually, he must also tell the ambitious or proud Man, that his Drunkenness would disgrace him, and make him the Scorn and Contempt of all the World about him ; and the covetous Man, that it would certainly waste his Estate, and beggar him. Whereas should he, on the other hand, transpose these Arguments, and dissuade him who is proud from drinking, because it would beggar him, and him who is covetous, because it would disgrace him, doubtless he would prevail but little ; because his Argument would not strike that proper Principle which each of them were governed by. And now what can this be grounded upon, but upon natural Philosophy, and a Knowledge of Mens Passions and Interests, the great and chief Springs of all their Actions ? And upon the like Ground it is, that for a Preacher in his Discourses to the People to insist only upon Universals, is but a cold, faint, languid way of Persuading or Dissuading ; as to tell Men in general, that they are Sinners, and that going on in Sin without Repentance, they are under the Curse and Wrath of God ; all which they think they knew before, and accordingly receive it as a Word of Course, and too slightly regard it: But Conviction, the usual Fore-runner of, and Preparative to Conversion, is from Particulars, as if the Preacher should tell his Hearers, that he who continues to cheat, cozen, and equivocate, is a wicked and impenitent Wretch; and that he who drinks, and swears, and whores, is the Person to whom the Curse directly belongs: And this seriously urged, and discreetly applied, will, if any thing, carry it home to the Conscience, and lodge it there too. And now is not the Reason of this Method also to be fetched from Philosophy, as well as from Religion? For we know, that Men naturally have only a weak, confused Knowledge of Universals, but a clear and lively Idea of Particulars. And that which gives a clear Representation of a Thing to the Apprehension, makes a suitable Impression of it upon the Will and Affections. Whosoever therefore pretends to be a Preacher, must know, that his main Business is to persuade, and that without the Helps of Human Learning, this can hardly be done to any Purpose. So that if he finds himself wholly destitute of these, and has nothing else to trust to, but some groundless, windy, and phantastick Notions about the Spirit, (the common Sanctuary of Fanaticks and Enthusiasts) he would do well to look back, and taking his Hand off from this Plough, to put it to another, much fitter for him. But in the mean time, as for ourselves, who pretend not to a Pitch above other Mortals, nor dare rely upon Inspiration instead of Industry, we must rest content, to revere the Wisdom, and follow the Examples of those who went before us, and enjoin'd us the Study of the Arts and Sciences, as the surest and most tried way to that of Divinity.

2. A second Reason for the Necessity of these Preparations for the Ministry, shall be taken from this Consideration; That at the first Promulgation of the Gospel, God was pleased to furnish the Apostles and Preachers of it with Abilities proper for that great Work, after a supernatural and miraculous way. For still we find, that the Scripture represents the Apostles as ignorant and illiterate Men, and that the Chief Priests and Elders of the Jews took particular Notice of them, as such, in Acts iv. and the 13th Verse. The Text there gives them this Character,

Character, that they were ἄνθρωποι ἀγράμματαί, καὶ ἰδιῶται, that is to say, according to the strict Signification of the Word, Men unlearned, and of a mean and plebeian Condition. Nevertheless, since they were appointed by God to preach the Gospel to several Nations; a Work requiring a considerable Knowledge of the Languages of those Nations, and impossible to be performed without it; and yet no less impossible for the Apostles, having neither Time, nor Opportunity to acquire that Knowledge in the natural, ordinary Course of Study; God himself supplies this Defect, and endues them with all necessary Qualifications by immediate and divine Infusion. So that being filled with the Holy Ghost, as we read in Acts ii. and the 4th Verse, they forthwith spoke with other Tongues; and that so clearly, plainly, and intelligibly, as both to convince, and astonish all who heard them; even those of the most different Nations and Languages, as well as their own Countrymen the Jews themselves. From whence I thus argue: That if the forementioned Helps and Assistances were not always of most singular Use, and sometimes of indispensable Necessity to the Calling of a Divine, certainly the most

most wise God would never have been at the Expence of a Miracle, to endow Men, of that Calling, with them. For he, who observes that Order and Decorum in all His Works, as never to over-do any thing, nor carry on the Business of his ordinary Providence, by extraordinary and supernatural Ways, would doubtless (in the Eye of the World at least) seem to debase, and make cheap those noblest Instances of his Power, should he ever exert them, but where he saw it of the highest Concern to his own Honour, and Man's Happiness, that something should be done for both, which bare Nature, left to itself, could never do.

3. The third and last Reason for the Necessity of such Preparations for the Ministry, shall be drawn from the Dignity of the Subject of it, which is Divinity. And what is Divinity, but a Doctrine treating of the Nature, Attributes, and Works of the Great God, as he stands related to Rational Creatures? And the way how Rational Creatures may serve, worship, and enjoy him? And if so, is not the Subject-Matter of it the greatest, and the Design and Business of it the noblest in the World, as being no less than to direct an immortal Soul to its endless and eternal Felicity? It has been disputed, to which of the Intellectual Habits, mentioned by Aristotle, it most properly belongs; some referring it to Wisdom, some to Science, some to Prudence, and some compounding it of several of them together: But those seem to speak most to the Purpose, who will not have it formally any one of them, but virtually, and in an eminent transcendent Manner All. And now can we think, that a Doctrine of that Depth, that Height, and that vast Compass, grasping within it all the Perfections and Dimensions of human Science, does not worthily claim all the Preparations, whereby the Wit and Industry of Man can fit him for it? All other Sciences are accounted but Hand-Maids to Divinity; and shall the Hand-maid be richer adorned, and better cloathed, and set off, than her Lady? In other Things, the Art usually excells the Matter, and the Ornament we bestow, is better than the Subject we bestow it upon: But here we are sure, that we have such a Subject before us, as not only calls for, but commands, and not only commands, but deserves our utmost Application to it; a Subject of that Native, that Inherent Worth, that it is not capable of any Addition from us, but shines both through, and above all the artificial Lustre we can put upon it. The Study of Divinity is indeed difficult, and we are to labour hard, and dig deep for it; but then we dig in a golden Mine, which equally invites and rewards our Labour.

And thus much for the second General Head at first proposed, for the handling of the Words; which was to shew, the Reasons of the Necessity of the Preparations spoken of to the Study of Divinity. Of which we have assigned Three.

And so we pass at length to the third and last General Head proposed, which was, to shew, what useful Inferences may be drawn from the foregoing Particulars. And the first shall be a just and severe Reproof to two sorts of Men.

1. To such as disparage, and detract from the Grandeur of the Gospel, by a puerile and indecent Levity in their Discourses of it to the People.

2. To such as depreciate, and (as much as in them lies) debase the same, by a coarse, careless, rude and insipid Way of handling the great and invaluable Truths of it.

Both

Both of them certainly Objects of the most deserved Reproof.

1. For those who disparage and detract from the Gospel, by a puerile and indecent sort of Levity in their Discourses upon it, so extremely below the Subject discoursed of. All vain, luxuriant Allegories, rhyming Cadencies of similiary Words, are such pitiful Embellishments of Speech, as serve for nothing, but to embase Divinity; and the Use of them, but like the Plaistering of Marble, or the Painting of Gold, the Glory of which is to be seen, and to shine by no other Lustre but their own. What Quintilian most discreetly says of Seneca's handling Philosophy, that he did rerum pondera minutissimis sententiis frangere, break, and (as it were) emasculate the Weight of his Subject by little affected Sentences, the same may with much more Reason be applied to the Practice of those, who detract from the Excellency of Things Sacred by a comical Lightness of Expression: As when their Prayers shall be set out in such a Dress, as if they did not supplicate, but compliment Almighty God; and their Sermons so garnished with Quibbles and Trifles, as if they played with Truth and Immortality; and neither

neither believed these Things themselves, nor were willing that others should. For is it possible, that a Man in his Senses should be merry and jocose with eternal Life, and eternal Death, if he really designed to strike the awful Impression of either into the Consciences of Men? No, no; this is no less a Contradiction to common Sense and Reason, than to the strictest Notions of Religion. And as this can by no means be accounted Divinity, so neither indeed can it pass for Wit; which yet such chiefly seem to affect in such Performances. For these are as much the Stains of true humane Eloquence, as they are the Blots and Blemishes of Divinity; and might be as well confuted out of Quintilian's Institutions, as out of St. Paul's Epistles. Such are wholly mistaken in the Nature of Wit: For true Wit is a severe and manly Thing. Wit in Divinity is nothing else, but Sacred Truths suitably expressed. 'Tis not Shreds of Latin or Greek, nor a Deus dixit, and a Deus Benedixit, nor those little Quirks, or Divisions into the ἔτι, the διότι, and the καθότι, or the Egress, Regress, and Progress, and other such Stuff (much like the Style of a Lease) that can properly be called Wit.

For

For that is not Wit, which consists not with Wisdom. For can you think that it had not been an easy Matter for any one, in the Text here pitched upon by me, to have run out into a long, fulsome Allegory, comparing the Scribe and the Houfholder together, and now and then to have cast in a Rhyme, with a Quid, a Quo, and a Quomodo, and the like? But certainly it would then have been much more difficult for the Judicious to hear fuch Things, than for any, if fo inclined, to have compofed them. The Practice therefore of fuch Perfons is upon no Terms to be endured. Nor,

2. Is the contrary of it to be at all more endured in thofe, who cry up their mean, heavy, carelefs, and infipid way of handling Things Sacred, as the only Spiritual and Evangelical way of Preaching, while they charge all their crude Incoherences, fawcy Familiarities with God, and naufeous Tautologies, upon the Spirit prompting fuch Things to them, and that as the moft elevated, and feraphick Heights of Religion. Both thefe Sorts (as I have faid) are abfolutely to be exploded; and it is hard to judge, which of them deferves it moft. 'Tis indeed no ways decent for a grave Matron to be attired in the gaudy, flaunting Dress of Youth; but it is not at all uncomely, for such an one to be cloathed in the richest, and most costly Silk, if black or grave. For it is not the Richness of the Piece, but the Gaudiness of the Colour, which exposes to Censure. And therefore, as I shew before, that the ὄτι's, and the δέτι's, the Deus dixit, and the Deus benedixit, could not be accounted Wit; so neither can the whimsical Cant of Issues, Products, Tendencies, Breathings, In-dwellings, Rollings, Recumbencies, and Scriptures misapplied, be accounted Divinity. In a word, let but these new Lights (so apt to teach their Betters) instead of all this and the like Jargon, bring us, in their Discourses, Strength of Argument, Clearness of Consequence, Exactness of Method, and Propriety of Speech, and then let Prejudice and Party (whatsoever they may mutter against them) despise and deride them, if they can. But Persons of light, undistinguishing Heads, not able to carry themselves clear between Extremes, think that they must either flutter (as it were) in the Air, by a kind of vain empty Lightness, or lie groveling upon the Ground, by a dead and contemptible Flatness; both the one and the other, no doubt, equally ridiculous. But after all, I cannot but believe, that it is the bewitching Easiness of the latter way of the two, which chiefly sanctifies and endears it to the Practice of these Men; and I hope it will not prove offensive to the Auditory, if, to release it (could I be so happy) from suffering by such Stuff for the future, I venture upon some short Description of it; and it is briefly thus. First of all they seize upon some Text, from whence they draw something, (which they call a Doctrine) and well may it be said to be drawn from the Words; forasmuch as it seldom naturally flows, or results from them. In the next place, being thus provided, they branch it into several Heads; perhaps twenty, or thirty, or upwards. Whereupon, for the Prosecution of these, they repair to some trusty Concordance, which never fails them, and by the Help of that, they range six or seven Scriptures under each Head; which Scriptures they prosecute one by one, first amplifying and enlarging upon one, for some considerable time, till they have spoiled it;

and

and then that being done, they pass to another, which in its Turn suffers accordingly. And these impertinent, and unpremeditated Enlargements they look upon as the Motions and Breathings of the Spirit, and therefore much beyond those carnal Ordinances of Sense and Reason, supported by Industry and Study; and this they call a saving Way of Preaching, as it must be confessed to be a way to save much Labour, and nothing else that I know of. But how Men should thus come to make the Salvation of an immortal Soul, such a slight, extempore Business, I must profess, I cannot understand; and would gladly understand upon whose Example they ground this way of Preaching; not upon that of the Apostles I am sure. For it is said of St. Paul, in his Sermon before Felix, That he reasoned of Righteousness, Temperance, and Judgment to come. The Words being in Acts xxiv. 25. διαλεγόμενος δὲ αὐτῷ, and according to the natural Force and Import of them, signifying, that he discoursed, or reasoned dialectically, following one Conclusion with another, and with the most close and pressing Arguments from the most persuasive Topicks of Reason and Divinity. Whereupon we quickly find the Prevalence of his Preaching in a suitable Effect, That Felix trembled. Whereas had Paul only cast about his Arms, spoke himself hoarse, and cried, You are damned, though Felix (as guilty as he was) might have given him the Hearing, yet possibly he might also have looked upon him as one whose Passion had, at that time, got the start of his Judgment, and accordingly have given him the same coarse Salute, which the same Paul afterwards so undeservedly met with from Festus; but his Zeal was too much under the Conduct of his Reason, to fly out at such a rate. But to pass from these Indecencies to others, as little to be allowed in this sort of Men, can any tolerable Reason be given for those strange new Postures used by some in the Delivery of the Word? Such as shutting the Eyes, distorting the Face, and speaking through the Nose, which I think cannot so properly be called Preaching, as Toning of a-Sermon. Nor do I see, why the Word may not be altogether as effectual for the Conversion of Souls, delivered by one, who has the Manners to look his Auditory in the Face, using his own Countenance, and his own native Voice, without straining it to a lamentable and doleful

Whine, (never serving to any Purpose, but where some religious Cheat is to be carried on.) That ancient, though seemingly odd Saying, Loquere ut te videam, in my poor Judgment, carries in it a very notable Instruction, and peculiarly applicable to the Persons and Matter here pointed at. For, supposing one to be a very able and excellent Speaker, yet under the fore-mentioned Circumstances, he must, however, needs be a very ill Sight; and the Case of his poor suffering Hearers very severe upon them, while both the Matter uttered by him, shall grate hard upon the Ear, and the Person uttering it, at the same time equally offend the Eye. It is clear therefore, that the Men of this Method have sullied the noble Science of Divinity, and can never warrant their Practice, either from Religion or Reason, or the Rules of decent and good Behaviour, nor yet from the Example of the Apostles, and least of all from that of our Saviour Himself. For none surely will imagine, that these Men's speaking, as never Man spoke before, can pass for any Imitation of Him. And here, I humbly conceive, that it may not be amiss to take Occasion to utter a great Truth, as both worthy to be now considered, and never to be forgot: Namely, That if we reflect upon the late Times of Confusion, which passed upon the Ministry, we shall find, that the grand Design of the Fanatick Crew was to persuade the World, that a standing, settled Ministry, was wholly useles. This, I say, was the main Point which they then drove at. And the great Engine to effect this, was by engaging Men of several Callings (and those the meaner still the better) to hold forth, and harangue the Multitude, sometimes in Streets, sometimes in Churches, sometimes in Barns, and sometimes from Pulpits, and sometimes from Tubs: And in a word, wheresoever, and howsoever they could clock the senseless and unthinking Rabble about them. And with this Practice well followed, they (and their Friends the Jesuits) concluded, that in some time, it would be no hard Matter to persuade the People, that if Men of other Professions were able to teach and preach the Word, then to what Purpose should there be a Company of Men brought up to it, and maintained in it, at the Charge of a Publick Allowance? Especially, when at the same time, the truly Godly so greedily gaped and grasped at it for their Self-denying Selves. So that Preaching, we see, was their prime Engine. But now what was it, which encouraged these Men to set up for a Work, which (if duly managed) was so difficult in itself, and which they were never bred to? Why, no doubt it was, that low, cheap, illiterate way, then commonly used, and cried up for the only Gospel, Soul-searching way, (as the Word then went) and which the craftier sort of them saw well enough, that with a little Exercise, and much Confidence, they might in a short time come to equal, if not exceed; as it cannot be denied, but that some few of them (with the Help of a few Friends in masquerade) accordingly did. But on the contrary, had Preaching been made, and reckoned a Matter of solid and true Learning, of Theological Knowledge, and long, and severe Study, (as the Nature of it required it to be) assuredly, no preaching Cobler amongst them all, would ever have ventured so far beyond his Last, as to undertake it. And consequently this their most powerful Engine for supplanting the Church and Clergy, had never been attempted, not perhaps so much as thought on: And therefore, of most singular Benefit, no question, would it be to the Publick, if those, who have Authority to second their Advice, would counsel the Ignorant and the Forward, to consider what Divinity is, and what they themselves are, and so to put up their preaching Tools, their Medulla's, Note-Books, their Mellificiums, Concordances, and all, and betake themselves to some useful Trade, which Nature had most particularly fitted them for. This is what I thought fit to offer and recommend; and that not out of any Humour of Opposition to this or that sort of Men, (for, whatsoever they may deserve, I think them below it) but out of a dutiful Zeal for the Advancement of what most of us profess, Divinity; as likewise for the Honour of that Place, which we belong to, the University; and which of late Years I have (with no small Sorrow) heard often reflected upon, for the Meanness of many Performances in it, no ways answerable to the ancient Reputation of so noble a Seat of Knowledge. For let the Enemies of that and us say what they will, no Man's Dulness is, or can be his Duty, and much less his Perfection.

And thus having considered the two different, or rather contrary ways of handling the Word, and most justly rejected them both both, I shall now briefly give the Reasons of our Rejection of them; and these shall be Two.

1. Because both these Ways, to wit, the Light and Comical, and the Dull and Heavy, extremely expose and discredit the Ordinance of Preaching: And

2. Because they no less disgrace the Church itself.

1. And first, we shall find how much both of them expose and discredit the Ordinance of Preaching; even that Ordinance which was originally designed for the two greatest Things in the World; the Honour of God, and the Conversion of Souls. For if to convert a Soul, even by the Word itself, and the strongest Arguments which the Reason of Man can bring, (as being no more than Instruments, or rather meer Conditions in the Case) if, I say, this be reckoned a Work above Nature, (as really it is) then surely to convert one by a Jest would be a Reach beyond a Miracle. In short, it is this unhallowed way of Preaching, which turns the Pulpit into a Stage, and the most Sovereign Remedy against Sin, and Preservative of the Soul, into the Sacrifice of Fools; making it a Matter of Sport to the Light and Vain, of Pity

Pity to the Sober and Devout, and of Scorn and Loathing to all: And I believe never yet drew a Tear or a Sigh from any judicious and well-disposed Auditor, unless perhaps for the Sin and Vanity of the Speaker: So sad a thing it is, when Sermons shall be such, that the most serious Hearer of them shall not be able to command or keep fixed his Attention and his Countenance too. For can it be imagined excusable, or indeed tolerable, for one, who owns himself for God's Ambassador to the People, to speak those Things, as by his Authority, of which it is hard to judge whether they detract from the Honour or Honesty of an Ambassador most? But in a word, when the professed Dispensers of the weighty Matters of Religion shall treat them in a way so utterly unsuitable to the Weight and Grandeur of them, do they not come too near the infamous Example of Eli's two Sons, who managed their Priestly Office (as high and sacred as it was) in so wretched a manner, that it is said in 1 Sam. ii. 27. That the People abhorred the Offering of the Lord; and if so, we may be sure, that they abhorred the Offerers much more?

2. As the two forementioned ways of handling the Word, viz. the Light and Comical, mical, and the Heavy and Dull, do mightily discredit the great Ordinance of Preaching, so they equally discredit the Church itself. It is the unhappy Fate of the Clergy above all Men, that their Failures and Defects never terminate in their own Persons, but still rebound upon their Function; a manifest Injustice certainly; where one is the Criminal, and another must be the Sufferer: But yet as bad as it is, from the Practice of some Persons, to take Occasion to reproach the Church; so on the other side, to give Occasion, is undoubtedly much worse. And therefore, whatsoever Relation to, or whatsoever Interest in, or Affection to the Church, such may, or do pretend to; they are really greater Enemies, and fouler Blots, to her excellent Constitution, than the most avowed Opposers and Maligners of it; and consequently would have disobliged her infinitely less, had they fallen in with the Schismaticks and Fanaticks in their bitterest Invectives against her; and that even to the renouncing her Orders (as some of them have done) and an entire quitting of her Communion besides; the greatest Kindness that such could possibly have done her. For better it is, to be hissed at by a Snake out of the Hedge or the Dung-hill, bill, than to be hissed at, and bitten too by one in one's own Bosom. But I trust, that when Men shall seriously and impartially consider, how, and from whence the Church's Enemies have took Advantage against her, there will be found those whose Preaching shall both answer and adorn her Constitution, and withall, make her excellent Instructions from the Pulpit, so to suit, as well as second her incomparable Devotions from the Desk, that they shall neither fly out into those Levities and Indecencies (so justly before condemned) on the one hand; nor yet sink into that sordid, supine Dulness on the other, (which our Men of the Spirit so much affect to distinguish themselves by, and which we by no means desire to vie with them in.) In sum, we hope, that all our Church-Performances shall be such, that she shall as much out-shine all those about her, in the Soundness and Sobriety of her Doctrines, as she surpasses them all in the Primitive Excellency of her Discipline.

And thus having finished the first of the two General Inferences from the foregoing Particulars, which was for the Reproof of two contrary sorts of Dispensers of the Word; and given Reasons against them both; I shall now in the

2. Place,

2. Place, pass to the other and concluding Inference from this whole Discourse; and that shall be, to exhort and advise those who have already heard what Preparations are required to a Gospel-Scribe instructed to the Kingdom of Heaven, and who withall design themselves for the same Employment, with the utmost Seriousness of Thought to consider the high Reasonableness, or rather absolute Necessity of their bestowing a competent and sufficient Time in the Universities for that Purpose. And to dissuade such from a sudden and hasty Relinquishment of them, (besides Arguments, more than enough, drawn from the great Inconveniencies of so doing, and the implicit Prohibition of St. Paul himself, declaring, That he who undertakes a Pastoral Charge, must not be a Novice;) there is still a more cogent Reason for the same, and that from the very Nature of the Thing itself: For how (naturally speaking) can there be a Fitness for any great Thing or Work, without Preparation? And how can there be Preparation, without due Time and Opportunity? It is observed of the Levites, though much of their Ministry was only Shoulder-work, that they had yet a very considerable Time for Preparation.

They

They were consecrated to it, by the Imposition of Hands at the Age of five and twenty; after which they employed five Years in learning their Office, and then at the thirtieth Year of their Age, they began their Levitical Ministration; at which time also our Blessed Saviour began his Ministry. But now under the Gospel, when our Work is ten times greater, (as well as twice ten times more Spiritual than theirs was) do we think to furnish ourselves in half the Space? There was lately a Company of Men called Tryers, commissioned by Cromwell, to judge of the Abilities of such as were to be admitted by them into the Ministry: Who (forsooth) if any of that Levitical Age of Thirty, presented himself to them for their Approbation, they commonly rejected him with Scorn and Disdain; telling him, that if he had not been Lukewarm, and good for nothing, he would have been disposed of in the Ministry long before; and they would tell him also, that he was not only of a Legal Age, but of a Legal Spirit too; and as for Things Legal, (by which we poor Mortals, and Men of the Letter, and not of the Spirit, understand Things done according to Law) this they renounced, and pretended to be many Degrees

grees above it; for otherwise we may be sure, that their great Master of Misrule Oliver would never have commissioned them to serve him in that Post. And now what a kind of Ministry (may we imagine) such would have stocked this poor Nation with, in the Space of ten Years more? But the Truth is, for those, whose Divinity was Novelty, it ought to be no Wonder, if their Divines were to be Novices too; and since they intended to make their Preaching and Praying an Extemporary Work, no wonder if they were contented also with an Extemporary Preparation, and after two or three Years spent in the University, ran Abroad, under a Pretence of serv'g God in their Generation; (a Term in mighty request with them) and that for Reasons ('tis supposed) best known to themselves. But as for such Mushroom Divines, who start up so of a sudden, we do not usually find their Success so good, as to recommend their Practice. Hasty Births are seldom long-liv'd, but never strong: And therefore I hope, that those who love the Church so well, as not to be willing that she should suffer by any Failure of theirs, will make it their Business so to stock themselves here, as to carry from hence both Learning and Experience to that arduous and great Work, which so eminently requires both. And the more inexcusable will an over-hasty leaving this noble Place of Improvement be, by how much the greater Encouragement we now have to make a longer Stay in it, than we had some Years since: Providence having broken the Rod of (I believe) as great Spiritual Oppression, as was ever before exercised upon any Company or Corporation of Men whatsoever. When some Spiritual Tyrants, then at the Top and Head of it, not being able to fasten any Accusation upon Mens Lives, mortally maligned by them, would presently arraign and pass Sentence upon their Hearts; and deny them the proper Encouragement and Support of Scholars, because (forsooth) they were not (in their refined Sense) Godly and Regenerate; nor allowed to be Godly, because they would not espouse a Faction, by resorting to their Congregational, House-warming Meetings; where the Brotherhood (or Sisterhood rather) used to be so very kind to their Friends and Brethren in the Lord. Besides the barbarous, raving Insolence, which those Spiritual Dons from the Pulpit were wont to shew to all Sorts and Degrees of Men, high and low; representing every Casual Mishap, as a Judgment from God upon such and such particular Persons; who being implacably hated by the Party, could not (it seems) be otherwise by God himself. For
and

* mark the Men, said Holderforth (as I my self with several others frequently heard him.)

And then having thus fixed his Mark, and taken Aim, he would shoot through and through it with a Vengeance. But, I hope, Things are already come to that pass, that we shall never again hear any, especially of our own Body, in the very Face of Loyalty and Learning, dare in this Place (so renowned for both) either rail at Majesty, or decry a standing Ministry, and in a most unnatural and preposterous manner plant their Batteries in the Pulpit for the beating down of the Church.

In fine, therefore, both to relieve your Patience, and close up this whole Discourse, since Providence, by a Wonder of Mercy, has now opened a Way for the Return of our Laws, and our Religion, it will concern us all seriously to consider, that as the Work before us is the greatest and most important, both with reference to this World, and the next, so likewise to remember, and lay to Heart, that this is the Place of Preparation, and now the Time of it: And consequently, that the more Time and Care shall be taken by us, to go from hence prepared for our great Business, the better (no doubt) will be our Work, and the larger our Reward.

Now to God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, be rendered and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

O N

PROVERBS. I. 32.

IT is a Thing partly worth our Wonder, partly our Compassion, that what the greatest Part of Men are most passionately desirous of, that they are generally most unfit for: For they look upon Things absolutely in themselves, without examining the Suitableness of them to their own Conditions; and so, at a Distance, court that as an Enjoyment, which upon Experience they find a Plague, and a great Calamity. And this peculiar ill Property has Folly, that it widens and enlarges Mens Desires, while it lessens their Capacities. Like a Dropsy, which still calls for Drink, but not affording Strength to digest it, puts an end to the Drinker, but not the Thirst.

As for the Explication of the Text, to tell you, that in the Dialect of Scripture, but especially of this Book of the Proverbs, Wicked Men are called Fools, and Wickedness Folly; as on the contrary, that Piety is still graced with the Name of Wisdom, would be as superfluous, as to attempt the Proof of a self-evident and first Principle, or to light a Candle to the Sun. By Fools therefore are here represented all wicked and vicious Persons. Such as turn their Backs upon Reason and Religion, and wholly devoting themselves to Sensuality, follow the Sway and Career of their corrupt Affections.

The Misery of which Persons is from hence most manifest, that, when God gives them what they most love, they perish in the Embraces of it, are crushed to Death under Heaps of Gold, stifled with an overcoming Plenty; like a Ship fetching rich Commodities from a far Country, but sinking by the Weight of them in its Return. Since therefore wicked Men are so strangely out in the calculating of their own Interest; and account nothing Happiness, but what brings up Death and Destruction in the Rear of it; and since Prosperity is yet, in itself, a real Blessing, though to them it becomes a Mischief, and determines in a Curse; it concerns us to look into the Reason of this strange Event, and to examine how it comes to pass, that the Prosperity of Fools destroys them.

The Reasons of it I conceive may be these Three.

I. Because every foolish or vicious Person is either ignorant or regardless of the proper Ends and Uses, for which God designs the Prosperity of those, to whom he sends it.

II. Because Prosperity (as the Nature of Man now stands) has a peculiar Force and Fitness to abate Mens Virtues, and to heighten their Corruptions. And

III. And Lastly, Because it directly indisposes them to the proper Means of Amendment and Recovery.

I. And first for the first of these, one Reason why vicious Persons miscarry by Prosperity, is, because every such Person is either ignorant or regardless of the proper Ends and Uses for which God ordains and designs it. Which Ends are these.

1. To try and discover what is in a Man. All Tryal is properly Enquiry, and Enquiry is an Endeavour after the Knowledge of a Thing as yet unknown ; and consequently, in strictness of Speech, God who knows all Things, and can be ignorant of nothing, cannot be said to try, any more than he can be said to enquire. But God, while he speaks to Men, is often pleased to speak after the Manner of Men ; and the Reason of this is not only his Condescension to our Capacities, but because in many Actions God behaves himself with some Analogy and Proportion to the Actions of Men. And therefore, because God sometimes sets those Things before Men, that have in them a Fitness to draw forth and discover what is in their Heart, as inquisitive Persons do, who have a Mind to pry into the Thoughts and Actions of their Neighbour, he is upon this Account said to try or to enquire, though, in Truth, by so doing, God designs not to inform himself, but the Person whom he tries, and give both him and the World a View of his Temper and Disposition.

For the World is ignorant of Men, 'till Occasion gives them Power to turn their Inside outward, and to shew themselves. So that what is said of an Office, may be also said of Prosperity, and a Fortune, that it does indicare virum, discover what the Man is, and what Metal his Heart is made of. We see a Slave perhaps cringe, and sneak, and humble himself, but do we therefore presently think, that we see his Nature in his Behaviour? No, we may find our selves much mistaken; for no body knows, in case Providence should think fit to smile upon such an one, and (as it were) to launch him forth into a deep, and a wide Fortune, how quickly he would be another Man, assume another Spirit, and grow insolent, imperious, and insufferable.

Nor is this a Mystery hid only from the Eyes of the World round about a Man, but sometimes also even from himself; for he seldom knows his own Heart so perfectly, as to be able to give a certain Account of the future Disposition and Inclination of it, when placed under different States and Conditions of Life. He that has been bred poor, and grown up in a Cottage, knows not how his Spirits would move, and his Blood rise, should he come to handle full Bags, to see splendid Attendances, and to eat, drink, and sleep in State. Yet no doubt, but by such great unlikely Changes, as also by lower Degrees of Affluence and Fruition, Providence designs to sift, and search, and give the World some Experience of the Make and Bent of Mens Minds.

But now the vicious Person flies only upon the Bulk and Matter of the Gift, and considers not that the Giver has a Plot and a Design upon him; the Consideration of which would naturally make Men cautious and circumspect in their Behaviour: For surely it is not an ordinary Degree of Intemperance, that would prompt a Man to drink intemperately before those, who he knows, gave him his Freedom, only to try whether he would use it to excess or no. God gave Saul a rich Booty upon the Conquest of Amalck, to try whether he would prefer real Obedience before pretended Sacrifice, and the performing of a Command before flying upon the Spoil: But his Ignorance of the Use, to which God design'd that prosperous Event, made him let loose the Reins of his Folly and his Covetousness, even to the blasting of his Crown, and the taking the Scepter from his Family, 1 Sam. xv. 23. Because thou hast rejected the Word of the Lord, (said Samuel to him) he hath also rejected thee from being King:

King: So that this was the Effect of his misunderstood Success, he conquered Ama-lek, but destroyed himself.

2. The second End and Design of God in giving Prosperity, and of which all wicked Persons are either ignorant or regardless, is to encourage them in a constant, humble Expression of their Gratitude to the Bounty of their Maker, who deals forth such rich and plentiful Provisions to his undeserving Creatures. God would have every Temporal Blessing raise that Question in the Heart; Lord, what is Man, that thou visitest him? or the Son of Man, that thou so regardest him? He never sends the Pleasures of the Spring, nor the Plenties of Harvest to surfeit, but to oblige the Sons of Men; and the very Fruits of the Earth are intended as Arguments to carry their Thoughts to Heaven.

But the wicked and sensual Part of the World are only concerned to find Scope and Room enough to wallow in; if they can but have it, whence they have it troubles not their Thoughts; saying Grace is no Part of their Meal; they feed and grovel like Swine under an Oak, filling themselves with the Mast, but never so much as looking up, either to the Bows that bore, or the Hands that that shook it down. This is their Temper and Deportment in the midst of all their Enjoyments. But it is far from reaching the Purposes of the great Governor of the World; who makes it not his Care to gratify the Brutishness and Stupidity of evil Persons. He will not be their Purveyor only, but their Instructor also, and see them taught, as well as fed by his Liberality.

3. The third end that God gives Men Prosperity for, and of which wicked Persons take no Notice, is to make them helpful to Society. No Man holds the Abundance of Wealth, Power, and Honour, that Heaven has blessed him with, as a Proprietor, but as a Steward, as the Trustee of Providence to use and dispense it for the Good of those whom he converses with. For does any one think, that the Divine Providence concerns it self to lift him up to a Station of Power, only to insult and domineer over those who are round about him; and to shew the World how able he is to do a Mischief, or a shrewd Turn? No, God deposits (and he does but deposit) a Power in his Hand to encourage Virtue, and to relieve oppressed Innocence; and in a word, to act as his Deputy, and as God himself would do, should he be pleased pleased to act immediately in Affairs here below.

God bids a great and rich Person rise and shine, as he bids the Sun; that is, not for himself, but for the Necessities of the World. And none is so honourable in his own Person, as he who is helpful to others. When God makes a Man wealthy and potent, he passes a double Obligation upon him; one, that he gives him Riches; the other, that he gives him an Opportunity of exercising a great Virtue; for surely, if God shall be pleased to make me his Almoner, and the Conduit by which his Goodness may descend upon my distressed Neighbour; though the Charity be personally mine, yet both of us have Cause to thank God for it, I that I can be virtuous, and he that he is relieved.

But the wicked worldly Person looks no farther than himself; his Charity ends at Home, where it should only begin. He thinks that Providence fills his Purse, and his Barns, only to pamper his own Carcass, to invite him to take his Ease and his Fill, that is, to serve his base Appetites with all the Occasions of Sin. It is not his Business to do good, but only to enjoy it, and to enjoy it so, as to lessen it, by monopolizing and confining it.

Whereupon being ignorant of the Purpose, it is no Wonder, if he also abuses the Bounty of Providence, and so perverts it to his own Destruction.

II. The second general Reason, why the Prosperity of Fools proves destructive to them, is, Because Prosperity (as the Nature of Man now stands) has a peculiar Force and Fitness to abate Mens Virtues, and to heighten their Corruptions.

I. And first for its abating their Virtues. Virtue, of any sort whatsoever, is a Plant that grows upon no Ground, but such an one as is frequently tilled and cultivated with the severest Labour. But what a Stranger is Toil and Labour to a great Fortune? Persons possessed of this, judge themselves to have actually all that, for which Labour can be Rational. For Men usually labour to be rich, great, and eminent. And these are born to all this, as to an Inheritance. They are at the top of the Hill already; so that while others are climbing and panting to get up, they have nothing else to do, but to lie down and sun themselves, and at their own Ease be Spectators of other Mens Labours.

But it is Poverty and Hardship that has made the most famed Commanders, the fittest Persons for Business, the most expert Statesmen, and the greatest Philosophers. For that has first pushed them on upon the Account of Necessity, which being satisfied, they have aimed a Step higher at Convenience; and so being at length inured to a Course of virtuous and generous Sedulity, Pleasure has continued that, which Necessity first began; till their Endeavours have been crowned with Eminence, Mastership, and Perfection in the Way they have been engaged in.

But would the young Effeminate Gallant, that never knew what it was to want his Will, that every Day clothes himself with the Riches, and swims in the Delights of the World; would he, I say, choose to rise out of his soft Bed at Midnight, to begin an hard and a long March, to engage in a crabbed Study, or to follow some tedious perplexed Business? No, he will have his Servants, and the Sun itself rise before him; when his Breakfast is ready, he will make himself ready too; unless perhaps sometimes his Hounds and his Huntsmen break his Sleep, and so make him early in order to his being idle.

Hence we observe so many great Families to decay and moulder away through the Debauchery bauchery and Sottishness of the Heir: The Reason of which is, that the Possession of an Estate does not prompt Men to those severe and virtuous Practices, by which it was first acquired. The Grand-child perhaps comes and drinks, and whores himself out of those fair Lands, Manors and Mansions, which his glorious Ancestors had fought, or studied themselves into, which they had got by preserving their Country against an Invasion, by facing the Enemy in the Field, hungry and thirsty, early and late, by preferring a brave Action before a sound Sleep, though Nature might never so much require it.

When the Success and Courage of the Romans had made them Masters of the Wealth and Pleasures of all the conquered Nations round about them, we see how quickly the Edge of their Valour was dulled, and the rigorous Honesty of their Morals dissolved and melted away with those Delights, which too too easily circumvent and overcome the Hearts of Men. So that instead of the Camilli, the Fabricii, the Scipio's, and such like Propagators of the growing Greatness of the Roman Empire, who lived as high Things as they performed; as soon as the Bulk of it grew vast and unlimited upon the Reign of Augustus

Augustus Cæsar, we find a degenerate Race of Caligula's, Nero's, and Vitellius's; and of other inferior Sycophants and Flatterers, who neither knew nor affected any other way of making themselves considerable, but by a servile adoring of the Vices and Follies of Great ones above them, and a base treacherous informing against virtuous and brave Persons about them.

The whole Business that was carried on with such Noise and Eagerness in that great City, then the Empress of the Western World, was nothing else but to build magnificently, to feed luxuriously, to frequent Sports and Theatres, to run for the Sportula, and in a word, to flatter, and be flattered; the Effects of a too full and unwieldy Prosperity. But surely they could not have had Leisure to think upon their Sumens, their Mullets, their Lucrinian Oysters, their Phœnicopters, and the like; they could not have made a Rendezvous of all the Elements at their Table every Day, in such a prodigious Variety of Meats and Drinks; they could not, I say, have thus intended these Things, had the Gauls been besieging their Capitol, or Hannibal at the Head of his Carthaginian Army rapping at their Doors: This would quickly quickly have turned their Spits into Swords; and whet their Teeth too against their Enemies. But when Peace, Ease, and Plenty, took away these Whetstones of Courage and Emulation, they insensibly slid into the Asiatick Softness, and were intent upon nothing but their Cooks, and their Ragous, their fine Attendants, and unusual Habits; so that the Roman Genius was, (as the English seems to be now) even lost and stifled, and the Conquerors themselves transformed into the Guise and Garb of the Conquered; till by Degrees the Empire shrivell'd and pined away; and from such a Surfeit of immoderate Prosperity, passed at length into a final Consumption.

Nor is this strange, if we consider Man's Nature, and reflect upon the great Impotence and Difficulty that it finds in advancing into the Ways of Virtue meerly by itself, without some collateral Aids and Assistances; and such Helps as shall smooth the Way before it, by removing all Hindrances and Impediments. For Virtue, as it first lies in the Heart of Man, is but as a little Spark; which may indeed be blown into a Flame; it has that innate Force in it, that being cherished and furthered in its Course, the least Particle falling from a Candle may climb the Top of Palaces, waste a City, and consume a Neighbourhood. But then the Suitableness of the Fuel, and the Wind and the Air must conspire with its Endeavours: This is the Breath that must enliven and fan, and bear it up, till it becomes mighty and victorious. Otherwise do we think, that that little thing that falling upon Thatch, or a Stack of Corn, prevails so marvelously, could exert its Strength and its Flames, its Terror and its Rage falling into the Dew or the Dust? There it is presently checked, and left to its own little Bulk to preserve itself; which meeting with no catching Matter, presently expires and dies, and becomes weak and insignificant.

In like manner let us suppose a Man according to his natural Frame and Temper, addicted to Modesty and Temperance, to virtuous and sober Courses. Here is indeed something improvable into a bright and a noble Perfection; Nature has kindled the Spark, sown the Seed, and we see the rude Draught, and first Lineaments of a Joseph, a Cato, or a Fabricius. But now has this little Embryo Strength enough to thrust itself into the World? To hold up its Head, and to maintain its Course to a perfect Maturity, against all the Assaults and Batteries of Intemperance; all the Snares and Trepans that Common Life lays in its way to extinguish and suppress it? Can it abstain in the midst of all the Importunities and Opportunities of Sensuality without being confirmed and disciplined by long Hardships, severe Abridgments, and the Rules of Virtue frequently inculcated, and carefully pressed? No, we shall quickly find those hopeful Beginnings dashed and swallowed by such ruining Delights. Prosperity is but a bad Nurse to Virtue; a Nurse which is like to starve it in its Infancy, and to spoil it in its Growth.

I come now in the next place to shew, that as it has such an Aptness to lessen and abate Virtue, so it has a peculiar Force also to heighten and enflame Mens Corruptions.

Nothing shall more effectually betray the Heart into a Love of Sin, and a Loathing of Holiness, than an ill-managed Prosperity. It is like some Meats, the more luscious, so much the more dangerous. Prosperity and Ease upon an un sanctified, impure Heart, is like the Sun-Beams upon a Dunghill, it raises many filthy, noisome Exhalations. The same Soldiers, who in hard Service, and in the Battle, are in perfect Subjection to their Leaders, in Peace and Luxury are apt to mutiny and rebell. That corrupt Affection which has lain, as it were, dead and frozen in the midst of distracting Businesses, or under Adversity, when the Sun of Prosperity has shined upon it, then, like a Snake, it presently recovers its former Strength and Venom. Vice must be caressed and smiled upon, that it may thrive and sting. It is starved by Poverty: It droops under the Frowns of Fortune, and pines away upon Bread and Water. But when the Channels of Plenty run high, and every Appetite is plied with Abundance and Variety, so that Satisfaction is but a mean Word to express its Enjoyment; then the inbred Corruption of the Heart shews itself pampered and insolent, too unruly for Discipline, and too big for Correction.

Which will appear the better, by considering those Vices, which more particularly receive Improvement by Prosperity.

1. And the first is Pride. Who almost is there, whose Heart does not swell with his Bag? And whose Thoughts do not follow the Proportions of his Condition? What Difference has been seen in the same Man poor and preferred? His Mind, like a Mushroom, has shot up in a Night. His Business is first to forget himself, and then his Friends. When the Sun shines, then the Peacock displays his Train.

We know when Hezekiah's Treasuries were full, his Armories replenished, and the Pomp of his Court rich and splendid, how his Heart was lifted up, and what Vaunts he made of all to the Babylonish Ambassadors, Isa. xxix. 2. Though in the End, as most proud Fools do, he smarted for his Ostentation. See Nebuchadnezzar also strutting himself upon the Survey of that Mass of Riches, and settled Grandeur, that Providence had blessed his Court with. It swelled his Heart, till it broke out at his Mouth in that Rodomontade, Dan. iv. 30. Is not this great Babylon that I have built for the House of the Kingdom, by the Might of my Power, and for the Glory of my Majesty? Now, that Prosperity, by fomenting a Man's Pride, lays a certain Train for his Ruin, will easily be acknowledged by him, who either from Scripture or Experience shall learn what a Spite Providence constantly owes the proud Person. He is the very Eye-sore of Heaven; and God even looks upon his own Supremacy as concerned to abase him.

2. Another Sin that is apt to receive Increase and Growth from Prosperity, is Luxury and Uncleanness. Sodom was a Place watered like the Garden of God, Gen. xiii. 10. There was in it Fulness of Bread, Ezek. xvi. 49. and a redundant Fruition of all Things. This was the Condition of Sodom, and what the Sin of it was, and the dismal Consequence of that Sin, is too well known. The Israelites committing Fornication with the Daughters of Moab, which reaped down so many Thousands of them at once, was introduced with Feasting and Dancing, and all the Gaieties and Festivities of a prosperous, triumphing People. We read of nothing like Adultery in a persecuted David in the Wilderness; he fled here and there like a chaste Roc upon the Mountains, but when the Delicacies of the Court softened and ungirt his Spirit, when he drowzed upon his Couch, and sunned himself upon the Leads of his Palace; then it was that this great Hero fell by a Glance, and buried his Glories in his Neighbour's Bed; gaining to his Name a lasting Slur, and to his Conscience a fearful Wound.

As Solomon says of a Man surprized with Surfeit and Intemperance, we may say of every foolish Man immersed in Prosperity, that his Eyes shall look upon strange Women, and his Heart shall utter perverse Things. 'Tis a tempting thing for the Fool to be gadding abroad in a fair Day. But Dinah knows not, but the Snare may be laid for her, and she return with a Rape upon her Honour, baffled and deflowered, and robbed of the Crown of her Virginitie. Lot's Daughters revelled and banqueted their Father into Incest.

The unclean Devil haunts the Families of the rich, the gallant, and the high Livers; and there is nothing but the Wisdom from above which descends upon strict, humble, and praying Persons, that can preserve the Soul pure and sound in the killing Neighbourhood of such a Contagion.

3. A third Sin that Prosperity inclines the corrupt Heart of Man to, is great Prophane-ness, and Neglect of God in the Duties of Religion. Those who lie soft and warm in a rich Estate, seldom come to heat themselves at the Altar. It is a poor Fervour that arises from Devotion, in comparison of that which sparkles from the generous Draughts, and the festival Fare which attend the Tables of the Wealthy and the Great.

Such

Such Men are (as they think) so happy, that they have no Leisure to be holy. They look upon Prayer as the Work of the Poor and the Solitary, and such as have nothing to spend but their Time and Themselves. If Jesurun wax fat, it is ten to one but he will kick against him who made him so.

And now, I suppose, a Reflexion upon the Premises cannot but press every serious Person with a Consideration of the ticklish Estate he stands in, while the Favours of Providence are pleas'd to breathe upon him in these gentle Gales. No Man is wholly out of the Danger which we have been discoursing of: For every Man has so much of Folly in him, as he has of Sin; and therefore he must know, that his Foot is not so steady, but it may slip and slide in the oily Paths of Prosperity.

The Treachery and Weakness of his own Heart may betray and insensibly bewitch him into the Love and Liking of a fawning Vice. What the Prophet says of Wine and Musick, may be also said of Prosperity, whose Intoxications are not at all less, that it steals away the Heart. The Man shall find that his Heart is gone, though he perceives not when it goes.

And the Reason of all this is, because it is natural for the Soul in Time of Prosperity to be more careless and unbent; and consequently not keeping so narrow a Watch over itself, is more exposed to the Invasions and Arts of its industrious Enemy. Upon which account, the Wise and the Cautious will look upon the most promising Season of Prosperity with a doubtful and a suspicious Eye; as ⁷ ⁴ bawaring, lest while it offers a Kiss to the Lips, it brings a Javelin for the Side; many Hearts have been thus melted, that could never have been broke. This also may be a full, though a sad Argument to allay the foolish Envy, with which some are apt to look upon Men of great and flourishing Estates at a Distance: For how do they know, that what they make the Object of their Envy, is not a fitter Object for their Pity? And that this glistering Person so much admired by them, is not now preparing for his Ruin, and sitting for the Slaughters of Eternity? That he does not eat his Bane, and carouse his Poison? The poor Man perhaps is cursed into all his Greatness and Prosperity. Providence has put it as a Sword into his Hand, for the wounding and destroying of his own Soul: For he knows not how to use any of these

these Things; and so has only this Advantage, that he is damned in State, and goes to Hell with more Ease, more Flourish, and Magnificence than other Men.

And thus much for the second General Reason, why the Prosperity of Fools proves fatal and destructive to them. I come now to the third and last, which is, Because Prosperity directly indisposes Men to the proper Means of their Amendment and Recovery.

1. As first, it renders them utterly averse from receiving Counsel and Admonition, Jer. xxii. 21. I spake to thee in thy Prosperity, and thou saidst I will not hear. [The Ear is wanton and ungoverned, and the Heart insolent and obdurate, till one is pierced, and the other made tender by Affliction. Prosperity leaves a Kind of Dulness and Lethargy upon the Spirits; so that the still Voice of God will not awaken a Man, but he must thunder and lighten about his Ears, before he will be brought to take Notice that God speaks to him. All the Divine Threatnings and Reprehensions beat upon such an one, but as Stubble upon a Brass-Wall; the Man and his Vice stand firm, unshaken, and unconcerned; he presumes that the Course of his Affairs will proceed always as it does, smoothly, ly, and without Interruption; that To-Morrow will be as To-Day, and much more abundant. It is natural for Men in a prosperous Condition neither to love nor suspect a Change.

But besides, Prosperity does not only shut the Earth against Counsel, by reason of the Dulness that it leaves upon the Senses; but also upon the Account of that Arrogance, and untutor'd Haughtiness that it brings upon the Mind; which of all other Qualities chiefly stops the Entrance of Advice, by making a Man look upon himself as too Great, and too Wise, to admit of the Assistances of another's Wisdom. The richest Man will still think himself the wisest Man. And where there is Fortune, there needs no Advice.

2. Much Prosperity utterly unfits such Persons for the sharp Trials of Adversity: Which yet God uses as the most proper and sovereign Means to correct and reduce a Soul grown vain and extravagant, by a long, uninterrupted Felicity. But an un sanctified, unregenerate Person, passing into so great an Alteration of Estate, is like a Man in a Sweat entering into a River, or throwing himself into the Snow; he is presently struck to the Heart;

Heart; he languishes, and meets with certain Death in the Change. His Heart is too effeminate and weak to contest with Want and Hardship, and the killing Misery of having been happy heretofore. For in this Condition, he certainly mis-behaves himself one of these two Ways.

1. He either faints and desponds, and parts with his Hope together with his Possessions. He has neither Confidence in Providence, nor Substance in himself, to bear him out, and buoy up his sinking Spirit, when Storms and Showers of an adverse Fortune shall descend, and beat upon him, and shake in Pieces the pitiful Fabrick of his Earthly Comforts. The Earth he treads upon, is his sole Joy and Inheritance; and that which supports his Feet, must support his Heart also; otherwise he cannot, like Job, rest upon that Providence that places him upon a Dunghill.

2. Such a Person, if he does not faint and sink in Adversity, then on the contrary he will murmur and tumultuate, and blaspheme the God that afflicts him. A bold and a stubborn Spirit naturally throws out its Malignity this way. It will make a Man die cursing and raving, and even breathe his last in in a Blasphemy. No Man knows how high the Corruption of some Natures will work and foam, being provoked and exasperated by Affliction.

Having thus shewn the Reasons why Prosperity becomes destructive to some Persons; surely it is now but Rational, in some brief Directions, to shew how it may become otherwise; and that is, in one word, by altering the Quality of the Subject. Prosperity, I shew'd, was destructive to Fools; and therefore, the only way for a Man not to find it destructive, is for him not to be a Fool; and this he may avoid by a pious Observance of these following Rules. As

1. Let him seriously consider upon what weak Hinges his Prosperity and Felicity hangs. Perhaps the cros falling of a little Accident, the Omision of a Ceremony, or the Misplacing of a Circumstance, may determine all his Fortunes for ever. Or perhaps his whole Interest, his Possessions, and his Hopes too, may live by the Breath of another, who may breathe his last To-Morrow. And shall a Man forget God and Eternity for that which cannot secure him the Reversion of a Day's Happiness? Can any Favourite bear himself high and insolent upon the Stock of the largest Fortune imaginable, who has read the Story of Wolfey or Sejanus? Not only the Death, but the Humour of his Prince or Patron may divest him of all his Glories, and send him stripp'd and naked to his long Rest. How quickly is the Sun overcast, and how often does he set in a Cloud, and that Cloud break in a Storm! He that well considers this, will account it a surer Livelihood to depend upon the Sweat of his own Brow, than the Favour of another Man's. And even while it is his Fortune to enjoy it, he will be far from Confidence; Confidence, which is the Downfal of a Man's Happiness, and a Traytor to him in all his Concerns; for still it is the confident Person who is deceived.

2. Let a Man consider, how little he is bettered by Prosperity as to those Perfections which are chiefly valuable. All the Wealth of both the Indies cannot add one Cubit to the Stature either of his Body or his Mind. It can neither better his Health, advance his Intellectuals, or refine his Morals. We see thote languish and die, who command the Physick and Physicians of a whole Kingdom. And some are Dunces in the midst of Libraries, dull and sottish in the very Bosom

Bosom of Athens; and far from Wisdom, though they lord it over the Wise.

For does he, who was once both poor and ignorant, find his Notions or his Manners any thing improved, because perhaps his Friend or Father died, and left him rich? Did his Ignorance expire with the other's Life? Or does he understand one Proposition in Philosophy, one Mystery in his Profession at all the more, for his keeping a Bailiff or a Steward? As great and as good a Landlord as he is, may he not for all this have an empty Room yet to lett? And that such an one is like to continue empty upon his Hands (or rather Head) for ever? If so, surely then none has Cause to value himself upon that, which is equally incident to the worst and weakest of Men.

3. And Lastly. Let a Man correct the Gaieties and Wandrings of his Spirit, by the severe Duties of Mortification. Let him (as David says) mingle his Drink with Weeping, and dash his Wine with such Water. Let him effect that upon himself by Fasting and Abstinence, which God would bring others to by Penury and Want. And by so doing, he shall disenslave and redeem his Soul from a Captivity to the Things he enjoys, joys, and so make himself Lord, as well as Possessor of what he has. For Repentance supplies the Disciplines of Adversity; and Abstinence makes Affliction needless, by really compassing the Design of it upon the nobler Account of Choice: The Scarceness of some Meals will sanctify the Plenty of others. And they are the Quadragesimal Fasts which fit both Body and Soul for the Festivals of Easter.

The wisest Persons in the World have often abridged themselves in the midst of their greatest Affluence; and given Bounds, to their Appetites, while they felt none in their Fortunes. And that Prince who wore Sackcloth under his Purple, wore the Livery of Virtue, as well as the Badge of Sovereignty; and was resolved to be good, in spite of all his Greatness.

Many other Considerations may be added, and these farther improved. But to sum up all in short; since Folly is so bound up in the Heart of Man, and since the Fool in his best, that is, in his most prosperous Condition, stands tottering upon the very Brink of Destruction, surely the great Use of the whole foregoing Discourse should be to remind us in all our Prayers, not so much to solicit God for any temporal Enjoyment, as for an Heart that may fit us for it; and that God would be the Chooser, as well as the Giver of our Portion in this World; who alone is able to suit and sanctify our Condition to us, and us to our Condition.

To whom therefore be rendered and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

Shamefulness in Sin, the certain Forerunner of Destruction:

DISCOURSE

JEREMIAH vi. 15.

Were they ashamed, when they had committed Abomination? Nay, they were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush; therefore they shall fall amongst them that fall; at the time that I visit them, they shall be cast down, saith the Lord.

HE, who after the Commission of great Sins, can look God, his Conscience, and the World in the Face, without blushing, gives a shrewd and sad Demonstration, that he is too far gone in the Ways of Sin and Death, to be reclaimed to God, or recovered to himself, without a Miracle. For having lost not only the Substance of Virtue, but the very Colour of it too, (as the Philosopher called Blushing) and the Principles of Morality having upon the same Account lost all Hold of him; he now seems to claim a Place in the highest Rank of Sinners; and from the Condition of the actually Disobedient, and (as yet) Impenitent, to have passed into the unspeakably worse Estate of the Desperate and Incurable. For though Almighty God is very free and forward in the Addresses of his Grace to the Souls of Men, yet still there must be something in them for Grace to work upon; to wit, something of natural spiritual Sense and Tendernefs; which if once extinct and gone, (as they may be, and God knows too often are) the Spirit of God will find nothing in such a Soul to entertain its Motions, or receive its Impressions; but the Man having sinned himself past all Feeling, may, I fear, be but too justly supposed to have sinned himself past Grace too.

And such a Sort of Sinners seems the Prophet to encounter all along this Chapter. A pack of Wretches harden'd and confirmed in their Sins; daring God, and defying his Laws;

Laws; with one Foot (as it were) trampling upon natural Conscience, and with the other upon Religion: Wretches who by shaking off all Shame and Modesty, (the first and kindest Results of Common Humanity) seem even to have sinned themselves into another Kind of Species: While the very Shamefulness of the Sins they committed, utterly took away all Shame from the Committers of them; and the Guilt, which should have covered and confounded their Faces with Blushing, was the very Cause that they could not blush.

Which short Account and Description of the enormous Impiety of the Persons here pointed at in the Text, being thus premised, let us now proceed to the Consideration of the Words themselves, wherein we have these four Things observable.

First, The Guilt of some extraordinary, crying Sins, charged upon the Inhabitants of Jerusalem, in these Words: They had committed Abomination. An Expression importing some superlative Sort of Villany acted by them, whatsoever it might be.

Secondly, Their Deportment under this Guilt: They were not at all ashamed, neither could they blush.

Thirdly, God's high Resentment of the Monstrousness of such a shameless Carriage, implied in that vehement Interrogatory Exclamation, Were they ashamed?

Fourthly and Lastly, The Judgment consequent hereupon in the concluding Words of the Text, Therefore they shall fall amongst them that fall, &c.

These Particulars I shall not prosecute in that Order and Distinction in which they have been laid down, but shall gather the entire Sense and Drift of them into this one Proposition, which I intend for the Subject of the following Discourse; namely,

That Shamefulness in Sin is the certain Fore-runner of Destruction.

The Prosecution of which Proposition I shall manage under these particular Heads.

1. I shall shew, What Shame is, and the Influence it has upon the Government of Mens Manners.

2. I shall shew, By what Ways Men come to cast off Shame, and to grow impudent in Sin.

3. I shall shew, The several Degrees of Shamefulness in Sin.

4. I shall shew, The Reasons why it so remarkably and effectually brings down Judgment and Destruction upon the Sinner: And

5. And Lastly, I shall shew, What those Judgments most commonly are, by which it procures the Sinner's Ruin and Destruction: Of all which in their Order: And

1. For the first of them. What Shame is, and what Influence it has upon the Government of Mens Manners. In order to which, if we consider the natural Frame of Man's Mind, and the Ways and Methods by which the Divine Wisdom governs the Affairs of the World, we shall find none more effectual to this great End, than that Contrariety of Passions and Affections planted by God in the Heart of Man; which though in themselves most eager and impetuous, and such as are wholly unable to prescribe either Rule or Measure to their own Operations, yet in the whole OEconomy of them, are disposed with such admirable Equality, that the vehemence of one Passion is still matched and ballanced with the Force of another. It is evident from Reason, and too sad an Experience, that Desire, Anger, Hatred, and the like Passions, are

of that Fury and Transport in their Egress to, and Actings about their respective Objects, that the greatest Disturbances in the World spring from thence, and would, no doubt, from Disturbance pass into Confusion, were there not such Passions as Sorrow, Fear, and Shame, to obviate and controul them in their Excess: So that these are (as it were) the Shores and Bounds which Providence has set in the Soul of Man, to check, and to give Laws to the Overflowings of those contrary Affections, which would otherwise bear down all before them, and drive all Peace and Order out of the World. This I thought fit to remark of the Passions in general.

And now for the Passion of Shame in particular, to shew what that is, and wherein it does consist. I conceive this may be a full Account of the Nature of it, viz. That it is a Grief of Mind springing from the Apprehension of some Disgrace brought upon a Man. And Disgrace consists properly in Mens Knowledge or Opinion of some Defect Natural or Moral belonging to them. So that when a Man is sensible that any thing defective or amiss, either in his Person, Manners, or the Circumstances of his Condition, is known, or taken Notice of by others;
from

from this Sense or Apprehension of his, there naturally results upon his Mind a certain Grief or Displeasure; which Grief properly constitutes the Passion of Shame. So that Shame presupposes in the Mind these two Things.

1. A great Esteem and Value of every thing belonging to the due Perfection, of a Man's Being. And,

2. An earnest Desire of other Mens Knowledge or Opinion of this Perfection, as possessed by him.

And consequently, as Glory is the Joy a Man conceives from his own Perfections, considered with relation to the Opinion of others, as observed and acknowledged by them; so Shame is the Grief a Man conceives from his own Imperfections, considered with relation to the Opinion of the World taking Notice of them; and in one Word, may be defined Grief upon the Sense of Disesteem. And there is not in the whole Mind of Man a Passion of a quicker, and more tender Sense, and which receives a deeper and a keener Impression from its Object, than this of Shame: Which in my Judgment affords a stronger Argument to prove a Man a Creature naturally designed for Society and Conversation, than any that are usually produced for that Purpose. For were not every Man conscious to himself of his Desire and Need of the Benefits of Conversation, why should he be so solicitous to approve himself to the good Opinion of others? And with so much Sorrow and Impatience regret other Mens Knowledge of any Imperfection belonging to him? Which yet he himself could quietly enough brook the Knowledge of, so long as it lay confined within his own Breast, and heartily love himself with all his Faults. And as the Nature of this Passion argues a Man disposed to Society, so when we consider that amongst the Objects of this Passion, those Imperfections, which relate to a Man's Actions and Manners, hold the prime Place; so that a Man is more ashamed to be accounted a dishonest, or unjust, than a weak or an unfortunate Man; it is evident from hence, that the Apprehensions and Resentments of the Turpitude and Dishonesty of our Actions, are founded upon something born into the World with us, and spring originally from the first and most native Discourses of the Soul about its own Actions.

Now from this, that Shame is grounded upon the Dread Man naturally has of the ill Opinion of others, and that chiefly with refer-

reference to the Turpitude or Immorality of his Actions, it is manifest, that it is that great and powerful Instrument in the Soul of Man, whereby Providence both preserves Society, and supports Government; forasmuch as it is the most effectual Restraint upon him from the doing of such Things as more immediately tend to disturb the one, and destroy the other. It is indeed more effectual than bare Law, and that upon a double Account:

1. Of the Nature of the Evil threatned by it: And

2. Of the Largeness of its Extent.

1. And first for the Evil threatned. Whereas the Law directly threatens Pains of the Body, or Mutilation of Limbs to the Delinquent: Shame threatens Disgrace; which above all other Things is properly the Torment of the Soul, and (considering the innate Generosity of Man's Mind disposing him to prefer a good Name before Life itself) is much more grievous and insupportable to him, than those other Infections. So that in that grand Exemplar of Suffering, even our Saviour himself, his enduring the Cross is heightened, and set off by his Despising the Shame, as that which far surpassed all the Cruelties of the Rods, the Nails, and the Spear,

Spear, and, upon the truest Estimate of Pain, much the bitterer Passion of the two. And from hence also it is, that no Penal Laws are found so forcible for the Controul of Vice, as those wherein Shame makes the chief Ingredient of the Penalty. Death at the Block looks not so grim and dismal as Death at the Gibbet; for here it meets a Man clad with Infamy and Reproach, which does a more grievous Execution upon his Mind, than the other can upon his Body. Nay, Wounds, and Pain, and Death itself, from terrible, sometimes become contemptible, where they are looked upon but as a Passage to Honour, and many are easily brought to write their Names with their own Blood in the Records of Fame and Immortality. So that the Sting of Death here, is Shame; and the Matter of the sharpest Punishment, stripped of all Reproach and Ignominy, is so far from overwhelming the Mind with Horror and Consternation, that in many Circumstances it is capable of being reconciled even to Nature it self, and that in such a Degree, that instead of being submitted to, barely upon the Stock of Patience, it may be made the Object of a Rational Choice. But

2. As to the other Advantage, which Sense of Shame has above the Law; to wit, that it extends itself to more Objects than the Law does, and consequently restrains and prevents more Evil than the Law can: It is to be observed, that whereas the Laws of Men in punishing the Transgressors of them, take Notice only of such gross Enormities as directly tend to make a Breach upon Government and overthrow Society; the Sense of Shame, on the other side, reaches likewise to all Indecencies, and not only to such things as shake the Being, but to such also as impair the Beauties and Ornaments of a Society: And by that means guards the Behaviour of Men, even against the first Approach, and indeed the very Shew and Semblance of Immorality. Such a sovereign Influence has this Passion upon the Regulation of the Lives and Actions of Men; indeed so sovereign, and so great, that a Society set up purposely for the Reformation of Manners (God bless it) can hardly have a greater.

And no wonder, if we consider the unaccountable Force of it in those strange Effects it has sometimes had upon Men. Some have been struck with Phrenzy and Distraction, and some with Death itself upon the sudden Attack

Attack of an intolerable confounding Shame: The Sense of which has at once bereaved them of all their other Senses, and they have given up the Ghost and their Credit together. Take one of the greatest and most approved Courage, who makes nothing to look Death and Danger in the Face, who can laugh at the glittering of Swords, the clashing of Armour, and the hissing of Bullets, with all the other Terrors of War. Take, I say, such an one in a base and a shameful Action; and the Eye of the Discoverer, like that of the Basilisk, shall look him dead. So that in such a Surprise, he who is valiant, and whose Heart is as the Heart of a Lion, shall utterly sink and melt away. Shame shall fly like a poisoned Arrow into his Heart, and strike like a Dart through a Liver. So inexpressibly great sometimes are the killing Horrors of this Passion.

And as it has sometimes these prodigious Effects upon Surprise, so is it of a Malignity not at all less Fatal, when it so fastens upon the Soul, as to consume and waste it with the continual Gnawings of a lingering and habitual Grief. He whom Shame has done its worst upon, is, ipso facto, stripped of all the common Comforts of Life. Every Eye that ſees him wounds him, and he thinks he reads his Deſtiny in the Forehead of every one who beholds him. The Light is to him the Shadow of Death; he has no Heart, nor Appetite to Buſineſs; nay, his very Food is nauſeous to him, and his daily Repaſt no Refreshment. It is his Mind only which feeds heartily upon his Body, and the Vultur within which preys upon his Stomach. In which wretched Condition having paſſed ſome Years, firſt the Vigour of his Intellectuals begins to flag and dwindle away, and then his Health follows: The Heſtick of the Soul produces one in the Body; the Man from an inward falls into an outward Conſumption; and Death at length gives the finiſhing Stroke, and cloſes all with a ſad Cataſtrophe. This is the natural Progreſs of this cruel Paſſion.

And thus much for the firſt Thing propoſed; which was to ſhew, What Shame is, and what Influence it has upon the Government of Mens Manners. I proceed now to the

2. Which is to ſhew, By what Ways Men come to caſt off Shame, and grow impudent in Sin. Concerning which, we muſt firſt of all obſerve, That the Principles of Shame

Shame and Modesty are too deeply rooted in Man's Nature to be easily plucked out; which makes the Loss of them (wheresoever they come to be lost) so extremely sinful: Shamefulness in Sin, being a thing perfectly Unnatural, and (if a Man could lose his Nature as well as his Virtue) a Deviation even from Humanity itself. Nevertheless the Frailty and Mutability of Nature is such, that it is capable of being debauched even in its first, and best Notions, and of growing into such a Change of Inclination, as to become quite another thing from what God at first made it. But how, and by what Means this comes to be effected, is the Subject of our present Enquiry; and to give some general Account of this, we must know, that by whatsoever Ways or Courses Men are brought to cast off that natural Tenderness, and Sensibility of Mind, which renders them apprehensive of any thing done unsuitably to their Nature, by those properly is this Passion of Shame first lessened, and at length totally extinguished. Now that may be done several Ways.

1. By the Commission of great Sins. For these waste the Conscience, and destroy at once. They are (as it were) a Course of Wickedness

Wickedness abridg'd into one Act; and a Custom of sinning by Equivalence. Lesser Sins indeed do by Degrees fully and change the Habit of the Soul; but these transform it in a Minute: As in the Completion of a Man's Face, he grows tanned and swarthy by little and little; but if a Blast comes, that gives him another Face and Hue in the twinkling of an Eye. Sins of daily Incur-sion insensibly wear away the innate Ten-derness of the Conscience; but Whoredoms, Murders, and Perjuries, (though never so much sanctified) and the like, tear and break it off presently. Nor does this contradict the Assertion just now premised by us, con-cerning the difficult Removal of Shame and Modesty. For when a thing falls by a very great Blow, though it fall quickly, it cannot be said to fall easily. Besides that Nature can hardly pass from its first Innocence and Modesty, to the Commission of a great Crime, but by many intermediate Preparatives of Sin; unless it should chance to be strangely seized, and (as it were) ravished by some fierce and horrid Temptation. But this very rarely happens: And therefore, though great Sins do usually expell Shame at once, yet People seldom rush into great Sins at first.

All

All that we insist upon in the present Case, is, that upon what Account soever such Sins come actually to be committed, they make a mighty Breach and Invasion upon the Soul, and Shame seldom long survives the Commission of them. They steel the Forehead, and harden the Heart, and break those Bars asunder, which Modesty had originally fenced and enclosed it with. In Jeremy iii. 3. Thou hadst a Whore's Forehead, (said the Prophet to Jerusalem) and refusedst to be ashamed. A Whore's Life naturally produces a Whore's Forehead. Scandalous and flagitious Actions superinduce new Hardnesses, and Confidences, which Nature of itself would never have reached to. For upon every great Sin, the Spirit of God proportionably withdraws his Presence from the Soul, and, together with it, that Influence, by which alone the Principles of Modesty, and the Awe of Virtue and Goodness, are kept alive and fresh upon the Mind. And when the Soul is once rifled of these, and has lost the Honour of its Virgin-Purity, by a foul Action, it is left naked and unguarded, and open to all the Assaults of its grand Enemy; who, if he can go on in his Attempts with any tolerable Success, will be sure never to give over, over, till having quite razed all Sense of Shame and Remorse out of the Sinner's Heart, he at length confirms, and seals him up in a State of Sin and Death. And this he knows is both effectually and compendiously done by Sins of a peculiar and more than ordinary Guilt, which no sooner enter into the Soul, but he also enters with them, and so driving out all Shame before him, takes full Livery and Seizin of it, and keeps firm and quiet Possession of the Man to his dying Day.

2. Custom in Sinning never fails in the Issue to take away the Sense and Shame of Sin, were a Person never so virtuous before. For albeit the Object of Shame still carries with it something strange, new, and unusual, yet the Strangeness of any thing wears off with the Frequency of its Practice. This makes it familiar to the Mind, and being so, the Mind is never startled, or moved at it. By great Sins (as we have shewn) the Soul casts off Shame, all on a sudden; but by customary Sinning it lays it down leisurely, and by degrees. And no Man proceeding in such a Course or Method, arrives presently at the Top of any Vice; but holding on a continual, steady Progress in the Paths of Sin, passes at length into a forlorn, shameless Condition, by such Steps as these. First, he begins to shake off the natural Horror and Dread which he had of breaking any of God's Commands, and so not to fear Sin: In the next place, finding his sinful Appetites gratified by such Breaches of the Divine Law, he comes thereupon to like his Sin, and to be pleased with what he has done; and then, from ordinary Complacencies, heightened and improved by Custom, he comes passionately to delight in such Ways. And thus, being captivated with Delight, he resolves to continue and persist in them; which since he can hardly do without incurring the Censure and ill Opinion of the World, he frames himself to a resolute Contempt of whatsoever is either thought or said of him; and so having hereby done Violence to those Apprehensions of Modesty, which Nature had placed as Guardians and Overseers to his Virtue, he flings off all Shame, wears his Sin upon his Forehead, looks boldly with it, and so at length commences a fixed, thorough-paced, and compleat Sinner.

3. The Examples of great Persons take away the Shame of any thing which they are

are observed to practise, though never so foul and shameful in itself. Every such Person stamps a kind of Authority upon what he does; and the Examples of Superiors, (and much more of Sovereigns) are both a Rule and an Encouragement to their Inferiors. The Action is seldom abhorred, where the Agent is admired; and the Filth of one is hardly taken Notice of, where the Lustre of the other dazzles the Beholder. Nothing is, or can be more contagious, than an ill Action set off with a great Example: For it is natural for Men to imitate those above them, and to endeavour to resemble (at least) that, which they cannot be. And therefore, whatsoever they see such Grandees do, quickly becomes current and creditable, it passes cum privilegio; and no Man blushes at the Imitation of a Scarlet, or a Purple Sinner, though the Sin be so too.

It is, in good Earnest, a sad Consideration to reflect upon that intolerable Weight of Guilt, which attends the Vices of great and eminent Offenders. Every one (God knows) has Guilt enough from his own personal Sins, to consign him over to eternal Misery; but when God shall charge the Death of so many Souls upon one Man's Account, and tell him at the Great Day, this Man had his Drunkenness from thee, that Man owes his Uncleanness to thy Example; another was at first modest, bashful, and tender, till thy Practice, enforced by the Greatness of thy Place and Person, conquered all those Reluctancies, and brought him in the end to be shameless and insensible, of a prostitute Conscience, and a reprobate Mind. When God, I say, shall reckon all this to the Score of a great, illustrious, and exemplary Sinner, over and above his own personal Guilt, how unspeakably greater a Doom must needs pass upon him for other Mens Sins, than could have done only for his own! The Sins of all about him are really his Sins, as being committed in the Strength of that which they had seen him do. Wherein, though his Action was personal and particular, yet his Influence was universal.

4. The Observation of the general and common Practice of any thing, takes away the Shame of that Practice. Better be out of the World, than not be like the World, is the Language of most Hearts. The Commonness of a Practice turns it into a Fashion, and few (we know) are ashamed to follow that. A Vice A-la-mode will look Virtue itself out of Counte-

Countenance, and it is well if it does not look it out of Heart too. Men love not to be found singular, especially where the Singularity lies in the rugged and severe Paths of Virtue. Company causes Confidence; and Multitude gives both Credit and Defence, Credit to the Crime, and Defence to the Criminal. The fearfullest and the basest Creatures, got into Herds and Flocks, become bold and daring: And the modestest Natures, hardened by the Fellowship and Concurrence of others in the same vicious Course, grow into another Frame of Spirit; and in a short time lose all Apprehension of the Indecency and Foulness of that, which they have so familiarly, and so long conversed with. Impudence fights with and by Number, and by Multitude becomes victorious. For no Man is ashamed to look his Fellow Thief or Drunkard in the Face, or to own a rebellious Design in the Head of a Rebel-Army.

And we see every Day, what a Degree of Shamelessness the common Practice of some Sins amongst us has brought the Generality of the Nation to; so that Persons of that Sex, whose proper Ornament should be Bashfulness and Modesty, are grown bold and forward, offer themselves into Company, and even invite those Addresses, which the Severity of former Times would have scorned to admit: From the Retirements of the Closet, they are come to brave it in Theatres and Taverns; where Virtue and Modesty are drunk down, and Honour left behind to pay the Reckoning. And now ask such Persons with what Face they can assume such unbecoming Liberties; and they shall answer you, that it is the Mode, the Gallantry, and the genteel Freedom of the present Age, which has redeemed itself from the pitiful Pedantry, and absurd Scrupulosity of former Times, in which those Bugbears of Credit and Conscience spoiled all the Pleasure, the Air, and Fineness of Conversation. This is all the Account you shall have from them; and thus, when common Practice has vouched for an ill thing, and called it by a plausible Name; the Credit of the Word shall take away the Shame of the Thing: Vice grows triumphant; and knowing itself to be in its full Glory, scorns to fly to Corners or Concealments, but loves to be seen and gazed upon, and has thrown off the Mask or Vizard as an useless, unfashionable thing. This, I say, is the Guise of our Age, our Free Thinking, and Freer Practising Age, in which stly And Lastly. I shall mention one thing more, which renders Men shameless; and that is, to have been once greatly and irrecoverably ashamed. For Shame is never of any Force, but where there is some Stock of Credit to be preserved. But when a Man finds that to be lost, and the Recovery of it desperate and impossible; he lets loose his Appetites to their full Swing, and no longer fears that which he reckons has done its worst upon him already. He is like an undone Gamester, who plays on safely, knowing that he can lose no more.

And for this Cause, many wise Governors having had the utmost Advantage against some Delinquents upon this Account, yet if they were such as were capable of being either useful or dangerous to the Publick, have thought it unsafe to disgrace them totally. For in this Case Government can have no Hold of them, by one of the strongest Ties in Nature, viz. a Regard of their Credit and Reputation. Set a Man once in the Pillory, and see whether ever after his Credit can keep him from playing the Knave, if his Interest prompts him to it: The Man has now looked Shame in the Face, and looked it out of Countenance too; he has swallowed down Scorn, and digested it. His Reputation is forlorn and gone; and he knows that a good Name once dead has no Resurrection.

And thus I have done with the second thing proposed; which was to shew, by what Ways Men come to cast off Shame, and to grow impudent in Sin. I proceed now to the Third, Which is to shew, the several Degrees of Shamefulness in Sin.

I shall not pretend to recount them all, but only mention three of the most notorious: As

1. A shewing of the greatest Respect, and making the most obsequious Applications and Addresses to lewd and infamous Persons; and that without any Pretence of Duty requiring it, which yet alone can justify and excuse Men in it. For 'tis confessed, that no Vice can warrant the least Failure of Respect to our Parents or Governors, be they never so bad; since in Truth, all Respect shewn to these, does not so much fall upon the Persons to whom it is directed, as redound upon the Divine Law, by which it is commanded. But when People voluntarily make their

their Visits to Persons living in open and avowed Wickedness, affect to be of their Retinue, and their Acquaintance, and Dependence, treat them, and speak honourably and affectionately of them, this is really and properly to vouch for, and to abet their Crime; which, duly considered, ought to make their Persons as contemptible in the Eyes of Men, as it certainly renders them vile in the Sight of God. Heretofore, Persons of Honour and genteel Quality thought, they could not give a deeper Wound to their own Honour, than by being so much as seen in the Company of such as had lost theirs: And suitable to this was the Practice of the Primitive Church. In 1 Cor. v. 11. I have wrote to you, (says St. Paul) not to keep Company, if any Man, who is called a Brother, be a Fornicator, or Covetous, or an Idolater, or a Railer, or a Drunkard, or an Extortioner; with such an one, no not to eat. And in 2 Theff. iii. 14. If any Man obey not our Word by this Epistle, note that Man, and have no Company with him, that he may be ashamed. Were this well practised, many would need neither Parlors nor Anti-Chambers to receive Visitants in. But now all possible Courtship and Attendance is thought too little to be used towards Persons infamous and odious, and fit to be visited by none but by God himself, who visits after a very different Manner from the Courtiers of the World. And what is the Ground of all this? What, the great Inducement both to Men and Women thus to address to such scandalous Livers? Why, the very Bottom and Ground of all is, that by this Means they may give Credit and Countenance to the Vice; that so, as Occasion serves, they may, without Disrepute, practise it themselves.

2. The second Degree of Shamefulness in Sin, is, to defend it. In Luke xvi. 15. Ye are they who justify yourselves, says our Saviour to the Pharisees; they were not only egregious Hypocrites, and gross Violators of the Law, but they also faced down the World, that they did well and meritoriously in those very Things, in which their Hypocrisy and Violation of the Law did consist. Now, even to extenuate, or excuse a Sin, is bad enough; but to defend it, is intolerable. For he who excuses a Sin, still supposes it to be a Sin, and only endeavours to cover it, or at least to take off some Degree of its Guilt. But he who defends it, utterly denies its Guilt, and (as I may so speak) absolutely unsins it. For he puts it into another Rank and Order of Actions, asserts its Legality, and so confounds the essential Differences of Mens Manners; which is directly to call Evil, Good; the thing which God declares himself so peculiarly to abominate. Such are properly the Devil's Advocates. For he who does the Part of an Advocate, pleads not for Mercy upon Breach of Law confessed; (for this were properly to beg, and not to plead;) but he alledges, that the Law is not broke; and that therefore upon Terms of Justice his Cause is Good, and consequently needs no Pardon, but pleads Right on his Side. In like Manner, whosoever manages the Devil's Cause, by defending an ill Action, in pleading for that, he does by Consequence implead the Law; to which he endeavours to reconcile it. For if that be not against the Law, neither can the Law be against that: So that, by this Means, the Divine Precept becomes a Party in the Crime, and the Rule itself a Transgressor. To defend Sin, is to justify it; and to justify it, is to pronounce for it according to Sentence of Law; and that surely is to condemn the Law: An higher Affront than which cannot be passed upon the great Author and Giver of it. Yet such Wretches both have been, and still are found in the World. Some of which have dared to argue for their Debauchery from Principles (some call them Oracles) of Reason; and some again have been so unsufferably prophane, as to throw Scripture itself in the Face of God, by pleading it in behalf of their Lewdness. I shall not alledge Instances, and am sorry that I can: But God knows, what pitiful Reasoners, what forlorn Disputants such shew themselves, while they plead Reason for that which contradicts Reason, and alledge Scripture in Opposition to Religion. Nothing I am sure can be pleaded for them; nor perhaps do such Persons think, that their Actions need either Plea or Pardon. For that which may be defended, certainly needs not to be pardoned; and therefore, if they will venture things upon this Issue, and cast all upon the Merits of the Cause, they must thank themselves, if, at the last and great Judgment, God sends them away with no other Sentence but this: That as they have defended their Sins, so let them now see, whether their Sins can defend them.

3. The third and last Degree of Shamelessness in Sin, is to glory in it; And higher than

this the Corruption of Man's Nature (as corrupt as it is) cannot possibly go; though, the Truth is, this may seem to proceed, not so much from a Corruption of it, as from something that is a direct Contradiction to it. For can any thing in Nature incline a Man to glory in his Imperfections? To pride and plume himself in his Deformities? Was ever any one yet seen to boast of a Blear-Eye, or a Crook-Back? And are not the Defects of the Soul, by so much the more ugly, by how much the Soul is naturally more noble than the Body? And the Faculties of one more excellent than the Shape and Lineaments of the other?

Yet some there are, who have shook off Reason and Humanity so far, as to proclaim and trumpet out those Villanies upon the House-Tops, which, such as sin but at an ordinary rate of Wickedness, commit only in the Corners of them: They declare their Sin as Sodom, and hide it not; as the Prophet says in Isa. iii. 9. And as the Apostle expresses it to the Height, Phil. iii. 19. They glory in their Shame. A thing as much against Nature, as it can be against Religion; and full as contrary to the Course and Dictates of the one, as to the most confessed Rules of the other.

other. Nevertheless, such Monsters there are. For may we not hear some vaunting, what Quantities of Drink they can pour down? And how many weak Brethren they have in such heroick Pot-Combats laid under the Table? And do not others report with Pleasure and Ostentation, how dexterously they have over-reached their well-meaning Neighbour? How neatly they have gulled him of his Estate, or abused him in his Bed? And lastly, have not some arrived to that frontless and horrid Impudence, as to say openly, That they hoped to live to see the Day, in which an honest Woman, or a virtuous Man, should be ashamed to shew their Head in Company? How long such Persons may live I know not; how long they deserve to live, it is easy to tell. And I dare confidently affirm, that it is as much the Concern of Government, and the Peace of a Nation, that the Utterers of such Things should be laid hold on by the Hand of Publick Justice, as it can be to put to Death a Thief or an Highwayman, or any such common Malefactor. For this is publickly to set up a Standard in the behalf of Vice, to wear its Colours, and avowedly to assert and espouse the Cause of it, in Defiance of all that is sacred or civil, moral

moral or religious. I must confess, I am ashamed thus to lay open Mens Want of Shame. But whosoever they are, who are come to this Height, let them know that they are consummate in Vice, and upon all Accounts so unspeakably bad, that the Devil himself can neither make nor wish them worse. And thus much for the third Thing proposed, Which was to shew the several Degrees of Shamelessness in Sin. Pass we now to the

4th. Which is to shew the Reasons, Why it brings down Judgment and Destruction upon the Sinner. I shall assign Two.

1. Because Shamelessness in Sin always presupposes those Actions and Courses which God rarely suffers to go unpunished. It presupposes them, I say, as the proper Causes from which this Shamelessness does proceed. For I have shewn, that great and heinous Crimes, Custom in Sinning, the criminal Examples of Great ones, together with a general and received Practice of Vice, are the Ways and Means by which the Heart of Man comes to be hardened against all Sense of, and Shame for Sin. But now every one of these does most particularly solicit and call upon God for Justice, and put the Weapons of Vengeance into his Hands; so that Shamelessness in Sin

Sin provokes and draws down Wrath in the Strength and Stock of that Guilt, which a Man always contracts before he can come to be shameless.

2. The other Reason, Why Shamefulness in Sin brings down the Divine Judgments upon Men, is from the destructive Influence which it has upon the Government of the World. For the better understanding of which, we must observe, that God, the wise and righteous Governor of the Universe, finds it necessary in the Course of his Providence to punish some Sins, even in this Life. Such as are Murders, Perjuries, Adulteries, gross Falshoods, and the like; and generally all such Crimes as have in them a peculiar Tendency to overthrow Government, and common Society amongst Men. In the Number of which, (if we may call it one kind of Sin, and not rather a general Preparative to all Sin) we may reckon this Shamefulness in Sinning. It is an Observation frequent in Machiavel, That when there is a general Depravation and Corruption of the Manners of any People, that Government cannot stand. And it is manifest, that the Integrity of Mens Manners cannot be secured, where there is not preserved upon Mens Minds a true Estimate of Vice and Virtue; that is, where Vice is not looked upon as shameful and opprobrious, and Virtue valued as worthy and honourable. But now, where Vice walks with a daring Front, and no shame attends the Practice, or the Practicers of it, there is an utter Confusion of the first dividing and distinguishing Properties of Mens Actions; Morality falls to the Ground, and Government must quickly follow. For if Virtue comes once to be hissed and exploded, and forced to hide its Head, what can recommend it, with all its Rigours, to the Choice and Practice of Mankind? since it is not imaginable, that Men will take Pains to abridge and restrain the unruly Appetites of their Nature, when no other Reward shall follow all these Severities, but Scorn and Reproach. And if, on the other side, all these Appetites should be left fully at Liberty to take their own exorbitant Satisfaction, how shall Government support itself? And how shall Laws be able to subsist, where the Violation of them is become creditable, and brings an Esteem to the Violators? This is most certain, that there can be no Fence against Vice got into Reputation; especially when the Vice acts also in the Strength of a mighty natural Propensity to it. For in this Case, it rushes in upon Society like a Torrent or Inundation with a furious Storm driving it on; and Virtue must either swim against Wind and Tide too, that is, both against the Struggles of Appetite, and the Discountenance of the World besides; or it must sink, and be swallow'd up in the prevailing Stream of a contrary Practice. Honour is the Birth-right of Virtue, and Shame of Vice. But if these come to be shifted and transplac'd, so that Honour still waits on Vice, and Shame on Virtue, Government becomes presently like a curious Engine torn in pieces, by the violent Motion of its own Springs and Wheels disorder'd or misplaced.

And whenever it comes to fare thus with any Civil State, Virtue and common Honesty seem to make their Appeal to the Supreme Governor of all Things, to take the Matter into his own Hands, and to correct those clamorous Enormities, which are grown too big and strong for Law or Shame, or any human Coertion. And accordingly God often finds himself engag'd by some notable Judgment to assert and declare his Sovereignty, and to convince insolent and audacious Sinners, that where Shame ends, Vengeance

Vengeance must begin, or the Government of the World cease; and that if Men will not see, they must be made to feel the Difference between Vice and Virtue. For where Nature and Religion find themselves too weak to redress the Extravagance of Mens Manners, a Blow from Heaven must do the Business, or the Societies of the World must fall into Confusion and Dissolution. But the great Judge and Ruler of all Things, who even for his own Honour has undertook the Protection of Law, Order, and Justice here below, so long as he suffers the World to stand, will not suffer these to fall. And therefore, when Vice is got above all Cure, and scorns all the Corrections which Fear and Shame can apply, God lays hold on Judgment, makes bare his Arm, and by doing Justice upon daring Sinners, does then most eminently do Justice to his own Providence too. And thus much for the fourth Thing proposed; which was to shew, The Reasons why Shamefulness in Sin brings down Judgment and Destruction upon the Sinner. I descend now to the 5th And last. Which is to shew, What those Judgments are, by which it procures the Sinner's Ruin and Destruction. And for this, it must be confessed, that they neither are, nor can be particularly known to any, but to him, who alone knows the wise and deep Counsels of his own Will, the great Rule and Compass which his Providence steers by. Nevertheless, so far as his Word dictates, we may safely pronounce; and what we find recorded in that, to have been done by God upon such kind of Sinners formerly, we may warrantably infer, is the most likely to be done by him again.

Now I shall instance in three several Sorts of Judgments, which we read in Scripture to have been inflicted upon shameless Sinners: As,

1. A sudden and disasterous Death; and indeed Suddenness in this can hardly be without Disaster: When the Israelites made that wicked Combination with the Moabites, we find Zimri, one of the Princes of the People, leading Cozbi, an infamous Strumpet, into his Tent before Moses, and all the Congregation looking on with weeping Eyes, and bleeding Hearts. This surely was Impudence in the Height; Impudence (as it were) working up to a full Crisis. And we know, how quickly the Divine Justice revenged it upon them by the Sword of Phinehas, bas, and such a sudden unlooked for Execution, as dispatched them both into another World without either Space or Power of repenting for what they had done in this.

2. Another Sort of Judgment, is War and Desolation. In the sixth and xxth Chapters of the Book of Judges, we read what a detestable Piece of Villany was acted by some of the Benjamites. And when Satisfaction was demanded of them, the whole Tribe abets the Villany, and the Villains too; they own the Defence of both with Sword in Hand; they fight for an Action not fit to be named, and plead the Cause of their Lewdness both with their Guilt and their Blood too about their Ears. And was not this to be Proof against all Shame? For could there be a more absolute and professed Homage paid to Vice, than thus to march under its Banner, and to fight its Battles? But what's the Consequence of all this? Why a whole Tribe is almost cut off and destroyed by a fatal Civil War; and such a sweeping Overthrow and Slaughter of that infamous Army, as may for ever be a convincing Lesson to such shameless Wretches, how ill they consult for themselves, who shed that Blood, which should blush for Sin, in the soul and odious Defense of it.

3. A third Sort of Judgment is Captivity. Which was that, here denounced by the Prophet in the Text, against the Men of Israel, now grown past Shame. And a severe one it was certainly: When the proud and fierce Armies of the Assyrians came up against Jerusalem, sacked the City, and laid the Temple even with the Ground; and upon an absolute and entire Conquest, carried away the Inhabitants Captive into Babylon. Shameless (it seems) they had been in their Sin, and therefore God would make them taste what Shame was in their Punishment; in those bitter Taunts and Contumelies which always pass upon the Conquered from an insolent and victorious Enemy. Conquest and Captivity are perhaps the bitterest Cup that Vengeance can put into the Hands of a sinful People. David chose the Plague and Pestilence before it, as the lesser Evil, and the gentler Infliction of the two. And he who shall consider the Rage, and lawless Fury of a conquering invading Army, needs no other Account of the Calamities of the Vanquished: No Respect to the Aged, no Compassion to the Infant; in a word, the

Assyrians

Assyrians were as shameless in their Cruelties, as the Jews had been in their Sins; which made the whole Visitation, not only a just, but also a suitable Revenge.

And thus we have seen what those Judgments are, which God from time to time has inflicted upon bold and profligate Offenders; and are we now sure, that none of all these are kept in reserve for us? The Text begins with the Charge of Shamelessness, and ends with the Denunciation of Judgment; and shall we be able (think we) to divide and separate the latter Part of it from the former, the Effect from the Cause; and while we bring our selves under one, wholly to escape the other? How home the Charge reaches us, has been made out, by shewing, with what high Impudence some amongst us defend Sin, and with what undaunted Confidence others live in it; and lastly, with what Patronage others countenance it. So that Vice has clearly got the Victory, and carried it against all Opposition. It rides on successfully and gloriously, lives magnificently, and fares deliciously every Day; and all this in the Face of God and Man, without either Fear of one, or Shame of the other. Nay, so far are our Modern Sinners from sneaking under their Guilt, that they scorn to hide, or so much as hold down their Head for less Crimes, than many others have lost theirs. Such a Rampancy of Vice has this Age of abused Mercies, or rather Miracles, brought England to. While, on the other hand, the Widows and Orphans of many brave and worthy Persons, who had both done and suffered honourably for their Prince, their Church, and their Country, as a Reward for all this, live in Want and Misery, and a dismal Lack of all Things, because they had rather work or beg, do or suffer any thing, than sin for their Bread. This is our present Case; and being so, do those thriving Wretches know, that this their prosperous and (therefore) contagious Lewdness, may not be preparing for us the Fire and Faggot, or provoking God to pour in a Foreign domineering Enemy upon us, an Enemy whom we have been always so sottishly fond of; for hardly any other Judgment remains yet untried upon the Nation? This surely it is natural and reasonable enough to imagine, that such as thus glory in their Shame, (be they never so high and great) should have Shame and Confusion cast upon their Glory. My Business, I confess, hitherto has been to discourse upon the Prophet's Words; and I heartily wish that in so doing, I may not prove too much a Prophet myself.

But whether Things may so happen to us or no, and that this notorious, and almost National Impudence in Sin should ever bring down any of the forementioned Judgments upon us, (which God in Mercy avert) one Judgment, I am sure, it will infallibly bring along with it, and that is itself. And can there be a dreadfuler Judgment than that, which gives a Man an universal Disposition to all Sin? Which offers up his Soul, as it were, a Blank to the Devil, to write what he will upon it? Of all the Curses which can possibly befall a Sinner, there is none comparable to this, that he should add Iniquity to Iniquity, and fall from Sin to Sin; which the shameless Person cannot but do, till he falls by it too: His Recovery, while under that Character, being utterly impossible. For where there is no Place for Shame, there can be none for Repentance. Shamelessness naturally and necessarily seals a Man up under Impenitence, and Impenitence seals him up to Destruction. God of his infinite Goodness work better Minds in us, us, which he must, and will do, if he intends better Things for us.

To whom be render'd and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, now and for evermore. Amen.

Sinner :*

NUMBERS xxxii. 23. latter part of the Verse.

—Be sure your Sin will find you out.

OF all the Ways to be taken for the Prevention of that great Plague of Mankind, Sin, there is none so rational and efficacious, as to confute and baffle those Motives, by which Men are induced to venture upon it; and amongst all such Motives, the Heart of Man seems chiefly to be over-power'd, and prevailed upon by Two; to wit, Secrecy in committing Sin, and Impunity consequent upon it.

Accord-

Accordingly, Moses, in this Chapter, having to deal with a Company of Men suspected guilty of a base and fraudulent Design, tho' couched under a very fair Pretence, (as most such Designs use to be;) he endeavours to dash it in its very Conception, by particularly applying himself to encounter those secret Ratiocinations and Arguments, which he knew were the most likely to encourage them in it; and this he does very briefly, but effectually, by assuring them, that how covertly and artificially soever they might carry on their dark Project, yet their Sin should infallibly find them out.

The Subject and Occasion of the Words is indeed Particular, but the Design of them is manifestly of an Universal Import; as reaching the Case of all Sinners in the World, in their first Entrance upon any sinful Act or Course. And therefore, I shall consider them according to this latter and more enlarged Sense; casting the Prosecution of them under these three following Heads: As,

I. I shall shew, That Men generally, if not always, proceed to the Commission of Sin, upon a secret Confidence of Concealment, or Impunity.

II. I shall shew, the Grounds and Reasons upon which Men take up such a Confidence. And

III. And Lastly, I shall shew, The Vanity of this Confidence, by declaring those several Ways, by which, in the Issue, it comes certainly to be defeated.

Of each of which in their Order.

First. And for the first of them; to wit, that Men generally, if not always, proceed to the Commission of Sin, upon a secret Confidence of Concealment or Impunity.

For the better handling of which Proposition, I shall lay down these two Assertions.

1. That no Man is induced to Sin, considered in itself, as a thing absolutely, or merely Evil, but as it bears some Resemblance or Appearance of Good, in the Apprehensions of him who commits it. Certain it is, that there can be no real Good in Sin; but if it had no shadow, no shew of Good, it could not possibly be made the Object of an Human Choice; the Will of Man never choosing or embracing any thing under the proper Notion of Evil. But then, as to the Kind of this Good; if we would know what that is, it is also as certain, that no Man can be so far deluded, or rather besotted in his Judgment, as to imagine, that Sin can have any thing of Moral Good in it; forasmuch as that imports a direct Contradiction to the very Nature, Notion, and Definition of Sin; and therefore besides that Philosophy, we know, owns and asserts two other Sorts of Good, to wit, pleasing and profitable; Good being properly the Denomination of a thing, as it suits with our Desires or Inclinations. According to which Acception of the Word, whatsoever pleases or profits us, may, upon that General Account, be called Good; though otherwise it swerves from the stated Rules and Laws of Honesty and Morality. And upon the same Ground, Sin itself, so far as it carries either Pleasure or Profit with it, is capable of being apprehended by the Mind of Man as good; and consequently of being chosen or embraced by the Will as such.

2. The other Affertion to be laid down, is, that God has annexed two great Evils to every Sin, in Opposition to the Pleasure and Profit of it; to wit, Shame and Pain. He has by an eternal, and most righteous Decree, made these two the inseparable Effects and Consequents of Sin. They are the Wages assigned it by the Laws of Heaven; so that whosoever commits it, ought to account Shame and Punishment to belong to him, as his rightful Inheritance. For it is God who has joined them together by an irreversible Sentence; and it is not in the Power or Art of Man to put them asunder. And now, as God has made these two Evils the sure Consequence of Sin, so there is nothing which the Nature of Man does so peculiarly dread and abhor as these; they being indeed the most directly and absolutely Destructive of all its Enjoyments; forasmuch as they reach and confound it in the adequate Subject of Enjoyment, the Soul and Body; Shame being properly the Torment of the one, and Pain of the other. For the Mind of Man can have no Taste or Relish of any Pleasure in the World, while it is actually oppressed and overwhelmed with Shame; nothing does so keenly and intolerably affect the Soul, as Infamy: It drinks up, and consumes the Quickness, the Gaiety, and Activity of the Spirits: It dejects the Countenance, made by God himself to look upwards; so that this noble Creature, the Master-Piece of the Creation, dares not so much as lift up either his Head or his Thoughts, but it is a Vexation to him even to look upon others, and yet a greater to be looked upon by them. And as Shame thus mortifies the Soul, so Pain or Punishment (the other Twin-Effect of Sin) equally harrasses the Body. We know, how much Misery Pain is able to bring upon the Body in this Life; (in which our Pains and Pleasures, as well as other things, are but imperfect;) there being never a Limb or Part, never a Vein or Artery of the Body, but it is the Scene and Receptacle of Pain, whensoever it shall please God to unfence it, and let in some sharp Disease or Dis-temper upon it. And so exceedingly afflictive are these Bodily Grievs, that there is nothing which affects the Body in the Way of Pleasure, in any Degree comparable to that which affects it in the Way of Pain. For is there any Pleasure in Nature, which equals the Impressions of the Gout, the Stone, or even of the Tooth-ach itself? But then farther, when we shall consider, that the Pains which we have here mentioned, and a great many more, are but the Preludiums, the First-Fruits, and Beginnings of that Pain, which which shall be infinitely advanced, and finally completed in the Torments of another World; when the Body shall descend into a Bed of Fire and Brimstone, and be lodged for ever in the burning Furnace of of an Almighty Wrath. This Consideration surely will, or ought to satisfy us, that God will not be behind-hand with the Sinner in point of Punishment, whatsoever Promises his Sin may have made him in point of Pleasure.

And now, if we put these two Assertions, laid down by us, together. As first, That no Man ever engages in Sin, but as he apprehends in it something of Pleasure or Advantage. And secondly, That Shame and Pain are by God himself made the assured Consequents of Sin; which are utterly inconsistent with, and destructive of all such Pleasure or Advantage: It must needs follow from hence, that the Will cannot possibly choose Sin, so long as the Understanding is under a full Conviction or Persuasion, that Shame and Punishment shall certainly follow the Commission of it. For no Man, doubtless, is so furiously bent upon his Lust, or any other infamous Passion, as to attempt the Satisfaction of it in the Market-Place, or in the Face of the Sun, and of the World, or with the Sword of the Avenger applied to his Heart.

Covetousness (we all know) is a blinding, as well as a pressing, and a bold Vice; yet certainly it could never blind, nor infatuate any one to that Degree, as to make a Judge take a Bribe upon the Bench, or in the open Sight of the Court. No; no Man is so far able to conquer, and cast off those innate Fears, which Nature has thought fit to bridle, and govern the Fury of his Affections by, as to bid Defiance to an Evil, which his best and strongest Reasonings assure him to be unsupportable; and therefore his Apprehensions must be, some way or other, first unshackled from a Belief of these Evils, before his Will, and his Choice, can be let loose to the Practice of Sin. And does not this give us a most Philosophical, as well as true Account of the infinite Reasonableness of the Scripture's charging all Sin upon Unbelief, as the first Root and Source of Mens Apostasy from God? For let Men think and say what they will, yet when they venture upon Sin, they do not really believe that God will ever revenge it upon them: They may indeed have some general, faint, speculative Belief of Hell and Damnation; but such a Belief

Belief as is Particular and Practical, and personally applies and brings it home to their own Condition, this they are void of; and it is against the Methods of Reason and Nature, for any Man to commit Sin with such a Belief full and fresh upon his Spirit: And consequently, the Heart must prevaricate and shift off these Persuasions the best it can, in order to its free Passage to Sin; and this can by no other Means be so effectually done, as by promising itself Secrecy in Sin, and Impunity, or Escape after it. For these two reach and remove all a Man's Fears, by giving him Security against those two grand terrifying Effects of Sin, Shame and Pain. Assure but the Sinner, that he shall neither be discovered nor punished, and presently the Reins lie loose upon all his Appetites; and they are free to take their full Swing in all Enormities whatsoever. But yet, since this is not to be effected without the Help of some Arguments and Considerations, which may have something of Shew, at least, to delude, though nothing of Strength to convince the Reason: Therefore,

II. We shall now, under our next Head, endeavour to give some Account of those fallacious Grounds, upon which the Sinner is apt to take up such a Confidence, as to believe that he shall be able to carry off his Sin clear, without either Discovery or Retribution. And, no doubt, weak and shallow enough we shall find them all; and such as could never persuade any Man to Sin, did not his own Love to Sin persuade him much more forcibly than all such Considerations; some of which are these that follow. As,

1. First, Men consider the Success which they have actually had in the Commission of many Sins; and this proves an encouraging Argument to them to commit the same for the future; as naturally suggesting this to their Thoughts, that what they have done so often, without either Discovery or Punishment, may be so done by them again. For nothing does so much confirm a Man in the Continuance of any Practice, as frequent Experience of Success in what he does; the proper genuine Result of this, being Confidence.

Some Men indeed stumble in their very first Entrance upon a sinful Course; and this their Disappointment frequently proves their Cure, by making them to retreat and draw off timely, as being disheartened with so unfortunate a Beginning. And it is (no doubt)

the singular Mercy and Indulgence of God to such, thus to cross and turn them out of the Paths of Destruction; which had they found smooth, safe, and pleasurable, the Corruption of their Hearts would have infallibly engaged them in them to their Lives End. That Traveller, surely, has but little Cause to complain, who by breaking a Leg, or an Arm, at his first setting out upon an unfortunate Journey, prevents the losing of his Head at his Journey's End; it being but a very uncomfortable Way of Travelling, to finish ones Journey and one's Life together. Great Reason, therefore, have they to own themselves particularly favoured by Providence, who have been stopped, and withstood by it, in the very first Attempts of any Sin, and thereby snatched (as it were a Brand) out of the Fire, or (which is yet better) have been kept from ever falling into it: Their being scorched has prevented their being burnt; while the Fright, caused by the Danger they so narrowly escaped, has been always fresh upon their Memories: And such as come to be thus happily frighted into their Wits, are not so easily fooled out of them again. In short, all Frustration in the first Essays of a vicious Course, is a Baulk to the Confidence of the bold Undertaker. And therefore, on the contrary, when God is pleased to leave a Man under the full Sway and Power of any Vice, he does not concern his Providence to lay any Block or Impediment in such an one's Way, but suffers him to go on and succeed in his Villany, to effect all his Projects, and compass the full Satisfaction of his lewd Desires. And this flushes him up, and makes him hard and insensible; and that makes him venturous and daring; and so locks him fast in the Embraces of his Sin, while he has not the least Surmize of the Sadness of the Issue, and that the present Sweets of Sin will, and must be Bitterness in the End; but like a Sot in a Tavern, first drinks himself drunk, and then forgets that there is a Reckoning to be paid.

Such an one, the Devil accounts he has fast enough; and for that Cause, none shall so studiously endeavour to promote a Man's Quiet and Success in Sin, as he, who at present tempts him to it, and will hereafter torment him for it. For the Devil desires not that the Sinner should feel any Trouble for Sin, till he comes to feel it for Good and All in that Place, which is designed only for Payment,

Payment, and not Amendment; and where all that he can do or suffer to eternal Ages, can contribute nothing to his Release. And therefore, that the Sinner may sleep on soundly in his Sin, the Devil will be sure to make his Bed soft enough. It is said of the Spaniard, that there are two Things much accounted of, and desired by many in the World, which yet he heartily wishes his Enemy; one is, that if he be a Gamester, he may win; the other, that if he be a Courter of Women, he may obtain his Desires; for that he knows well enough, that either of these Courses will, in all likelihood, prove his Undoing at long Run. In like manner, when the Devil has the Management of a Sinner, he will spread his Wing over him so, that he shall never be alarmed with Dangers, Disgraces, and other calamitous Effects of Sin, (if the officious Tempter can ward them off) but shall pursue his Vice with Ease, Safety, and Reputation.

And while the Sinner can do so, such is the Proneness of Man by Nature to deceive himself in a thing which he passionately desires, that having thus acquitted himself to himself, he takes it for granted, that God will acquit him too; and like our late san- ctified,

Etified, and since justified Rebels, concludes, that God and he (forsooth) are still of a Mind: In Eccles. viii. 11. Because (says the wise Man) Sentence against an evil Work is not executed speedily, therefore the Heart of the Sons of Men is fully set in them to do Evil. Here he gives us an Account of the secret Reasoning of most Sinners Hearts; namely, that because God does not confound them in the very Act of Sin, by some immediate Judgment, therefore they resolve upon a more audacious Progress in it; and so sing Agag's Requiem to themselves, That surely the Bitterness of Death is past: But much surer will such find it, that no Man's being past Fear, makes him past Feeling too; nor that the Distance of an Evil abates the Certainty of it. And yet, the great Knower of Hearts ascribes Mens Resolution to sin to such Reasonings as these, (as sottish and absurd as they are;) so that in Psal. 1. having reckoned up several flagitious Practices, he adds, in ver. 21. These Things hast thou done, and I kept Silence, and thou thoughtest that I was altogether such an one as thyself. God's Silence (it seems) passes with such for his Consent, and his not attacking the guilty Wretch by a present Execution, makes him him conclude, that Heaven has passed an Act of Oblivion upon all his Rogueries, so that henceforth he shall live and die a prosperous indemnified Villain, and his Sin never find him out. In which Case, certainly for a Sinner thus to presume to absolve himself from his own Sins, is itself a greater Sin than any of those which he can pretend to absolve himself from. But,

2. A second Ground, upon which Men are apt to persuade themselves, that they shall escape the Stroke of Divine Justice for their Sins, is their Observation of the great and flourishing Condition of some of the topping Sinners of the World. They have seen Perjury and Murder nestle themselves into a Throne, live triumphant, and die peaceably; and this makes them question whether God will ever concern himself to revenge that hereafter, which he seems so much to connive at, and countenance here; especially, since Men are so generally apt to judge of Things and Persons according to the present Face and Appearance of them; that they make the Present, the sole Measure of the Future, guide their Hopes and their Fears by what they actually see and feel; and in a Word, make their outward Senses

the Rule and Ground of their inmost Ratiocinations.

For could we hear the secret Language of most Mens Thoughts, we should hear them making such kind of Answers and Replies to the Checks of Conscience dissuading them from Sin, and laying the Danger of it before them, as these: Pray, what Mischief befell such an Oppressor, such a Tyrant, or such a Rebel? And who passed his Life with more Affluence and Jollity, than such an Epicure, such a Money-Monger, such a Talley-Broker, and Cheater of the Publick? And have not some dexterous Accomptants got Estates, and made their Fortunes, by a clever Stroke or two of their Pen? And by a skilful Mistake, wrote themselves forty or fifty thousand Pounds richer than they were before, in a Trice? And did not that discreet Roman Verres, lighting into a wealthy Province, plunder and carry off from thence enough to serve himself, his Friends, and his Judges too? And why may not others, whose Parts lie the same Way, follow such lucky Examples? And the thriving Hypocrites of the present Age find as fair Quarter from God and Man, as any of the former? With such Considerations as these, (if they may be called so) Men commonly

commonly arm themselves against all the Threatnings of the Divine Judgments; and think that, in the Strength of them, they can warrant the most resolute Pursuit of their Vices for safe and rational. They see not the Smoke of the Bottomless Pit, and so dread not the Fire.

Flourishing Sinners are indeed plausible Arguments to induce Men to Sin: But, Thanks be to God, that for a Sinner to spend and end his Days flourishing, is a Privilege allowed by him to very few; and those only such, as are likely to be much lower in the other World, than ever they were high in this. But,

3. As we have shewn how mightily Men are heartened on to their Sins, by the successful Examples of others, as bad as themselves, or perhaps worse; so the next Ground, upon which such are wont to promise themselves Security, both from the Discovery and Punishment of their Sins, is the Opinion which they have of their own singular Art and Cunning to conceal them from the Knowledge; or, at least, of their Power to rescue them from the Jurisdiction of any Earthly Judge. The Eye of Man, they know, is but of a weak Sight, and a short Reach;
 so

so that he neither sees in the Dark, nor pierces into the Cabinet-Council, and Corner-Practices of his Neighbours; and therefore, these Sons of Darkness, who love to work, as well as walk in the Dark, doubt not, but to contrive and cast the Commission of their Villanies under such sure Coverts of Secrecy, that they shall be able to laugh at all Judges and Witnesses, and defy the Inspection of the most curious and exact Enquirers. And this makes them proceed to sin with such Bravadoes in their Hearts as these: Who shall ever see, or hear, or know what I do? The Sun itself, the Eye of the World, shall never be conscious to my Actions; even the Light and the Day shall be Strangers to my Retirements. So that, unless the Stones I tread upon, cry out against me, and the Beam out of the Wall accuse, and my own Cloaths arraign me, I fear no Discovery: This is the Language, these the inward Boasts of secret or rather self-befooled Sinners.

But now, what if such strange Things as these should sometimes come to pass? And it should so fall out, (as it will appear by and by) that even these dumb, inanimate Things are sometimes unaccountably enabled to clamour and depose against the guilty Wretch;

Wretch; so that, to the Amazement of the World, he is drawn forth into publick View, out of all his lurking Holes, and Pavilions of Darkness? Why then, upon such surprizing Accidents as these, some have yet a farther Asylum to fly to, and reckon that their Power and Interest shall protect them; and so secure the Sinner, notwithstanding the Discovery of the Sin. And the Truth is, if Matters stand so with them, that the Height of their Condition equals the Height of their Crimes what care such ungodly Great ones, whether or no their Sins are known, so long as their Persons must not be touched? No, so far are such from excusing or covering their lawless Practices, that they choose rather to own and wear them in the Eye of the World, as Badges of their Power, and Marks of such a Greatness, as has set itself above the Reach of either Shame or Fear; even Treason itself dreads not a Discovery, if the over-grown Traytor be but mighty enough to bear it out; but it shall walk abroad openly, and look the World in the Face undauntedly, with all the Consciousness of a clamorous Guilt, and yet with the Confidence of Innocence itself. For we must know, that it is not meer Guilt, but Guilt weak and disarmed, which exposes an Offender to the Merits of his Offence; they are only the minorum gentium malefici, Malefactors of a lower Form, who break the Law, and are hanged for it. Whereas, let a Crime be never so foul, and so notorious, yet if the wary Criminal has so armed and encompassed himself with Friends and Money, as to stave off all Approaches of Justice, howsoever his Sin may find him out, yet he persuades himself, that his Punishment cannot; and that is as much as he cares for. For a Man's Debts will never fright him, if the Officer dares not arrest him; and he will hardly fear breaking the Law, who knows that he can trample upon it too. But,

4. The fourth and last Ground (which I shall mention) of Mens promising themselves Security from the Punishment of their Sins, is a strong Presumption, that they shall be able to repent, and make their Peace with God when they please; and this, they fully reckon, will keep them safe, and effectually shut the Door against their utmost Fears, as being a Reach beyond them all. For let a Man be never so deeply possessed with a Belief of God's sin-revenging Justice, never so much persuaded, that all the Wrath, which the Curse of the Law can threaten or inflict, is most

most certainly entailed, not upon Sin only in general, but also upon his own Sin in particular; nay, let Damnation be always present to his Thoughts, and the Fire of Hell continually flaming in his Apprehensions; yet all this shall not be able to take him off from his Resolution to Sin, and his Confidence of Escape, because he has an Argument in Reserve, which he thinks will answer all, to wit, an After-Repentance. For if this shall interpose between the Commission of Sin, and the Punishment of it, he concludes, upon the Stock of all God's Promises to the Penitent, that he is past Danger; and consequently, has outwitted the Law and the Curse, and so stands rectus in curiâ, in spite of all the Threatnings of Death and Damnation.

And as he thus reckons that Repentance will secure him, so he doubts not but he can command that when he will; as, according to the Doctrine of Pelagius and his Modern admired Followers, he certainly may; Repentance in their Divinity being a Work entirely in the Power of the Sinner's Will. So that now the Sinner's main Business must be to time his Repentance artificially, and to retreat opportunely before the Hand of Vengeance be actually upon him: And if he can but prevent, and be too nimble for that; why then, he comes off clear and successful, with Flying Colours, having enjoyed the Pleasures and Advantages of his Sin, without enduring any thing of the Smart, or sad Consequences of the same.

But now, how wretched an Inference this is, for any Man to form to himself, and thereby to mock and defy Heaven! and yet how deep it lies in the Hearts of most Sinners, may easily be observed by Men of Sense; and will be sadly rued by such as are not so, when it is too late. For this is manifestly the great Fort and Castle, the Citadel and strong Tower, which the Soul has built to itself, to repair to, whensoever it has a mind to sin both with Delight and Security too. And were it not for this, it would be impossible for any considering Man to satisfy himself in his Continuance in any known Sin for one Moment. For he could not, with any Consistence with that mighty over-ruling Principle of Self Preservation, commit a Sin, if he assuredly knew or believed that he should be damned for it; which yet, since the infinitely just and true God has most peremptorily decreed and threatned, unless Repentance shall intervene,

it is evident, that his whole Refuge must lie in the Intervention of that; which also he persuades himself, shall, in due time, step in between him and the fatal Blow. And this very Consideration utterly evacuates the terrifying Force of the Divine Threatning; and by promising the Sinner a fair Issue of Things, both here and hereafter, makes the poor self deluding and deluded Creature conclude, that his Sin shall never find him out.

And thus having shewn some of those fallacious Grounds, upon which Men use to build their Confidence of the Concealment, or at least of the Impunity of their Sins; I proceed now to the

III. And last General Head, at first proposed by us: Which was, to shew the Vanity of such a Confidence, by declaring those several Ways, by which, in the Issue, it comes certainly to be defeated; and that both with reference to this World, and the next. And,

I. For this World; there are various Ways, by which it comes to be disappointed here: As,

(1.) The very Confidence itself of Secrecy, is a direct and natural Cause of the Sinner's Discovery. For Confidence in such Cases causes a frequent Repetition of the same

Action ; and if a Man does a thing frequently, it is odds, but some time or other he is discovered : For by this he subjects himself to so many more Accidents ; every one of which may possibly betray him. He who has escaped in many Battles, has yet been killed in the Issue ; and by playing too often at the Mouth of Death, has been snapped by it last.

* Add to this, that Confidence makes a Man venturous, and Venturousness casts him into the high Road of Danger, and the very Arms of Destruction. For while a Man ventures, he properly shuts the Eyes of his Reason. And he, who shuts his own Eyes, lies so much the more open to those of other Men.

(2.) There is sometimes a strange, providential Concurrence of unusual, unlikely Accidents, for the Discovery of great Sins ; a Villany committed perhaps but once in an Age, comes sometimes to be found out also by such an Accident, as scarce happens above once in an Age. For there are some Sins more immediately invading the great Interests of Society, Government and Religion ; which Providence sets itself in a more peculiar Manner to detect, and bring to Light, in spite of all the Coverings which Art or Power can cast over them : Such as are Murder, Perjury, and Sacrilege (all of them accounted Sins of the foulest Guilt before Forty One, but Marks of Regeneration with many ever since :) And more particularly for Murder ; in what a strange, stupendous Manner does Providence oftentimes trace it out ; though concealed with all the Closeness, which Guilt and Skill, and the Legerdemain of a well packed and paid Jury can secure it by ?

Such small, such contemptible, and almost unobservable Hints have sometimes unravell'd and thrown open the mysterious Contexture of the deepest-laid Villanies, and delivered the Murderer into the Hands of Justice, by Means, which seem'd almost as much above Nature, as the Sin committed was against it.

And the like Instances might be given in many other Crying Sins, which sometimes cry so long, and so loud too, that they come at length to be seen, as well as heard, and to alarm the Earth, as well as pierce Heaven. Curse not the King, no not in thy Heart, (says the wise Man, in Eccles. x. 20.) For a Bird in the Air shall carry the Voice, and that which hath Wings shall tell the Matter : Though some, I confess, are of Opinion, that such as have no Wings, are much nimbler and quicker in carrying and telling these Matters, than such as have. But to keep to these remarkable Words now before us; if the Bird upon the House-Top (as the Text seems to intimate) shall be able (in such a Case as this) to tell what is done or whispered within the House; and these Inhabitants of the Air shall have Keys to our Chambers, and our Closets, nay, and to our very Hearts too; how can there be such a thing in the World as Secrecy? (As the Truth is, setting aside all Tropes and Hyperboles, there is but very little :) And then, if such Informers as these find out the Treason, we may be sure, that the Treason itself will not fail to find out the Traytor.

For let a Criminal seem never so safe in his own Thoughts, and in the Thoughts of all about him, yet still he must know, that the Justice of God has him in Chace, and will one Day shew, that it never hunts surer, than when the Politicians of the World think it upon a cold Scent. For how many strange, intricate, and perplexed Villanies have been ript up, and spread far and near, which the subtle Actors of them, both before, and in, and after the Commission, fully believed, could not possibly be discovered? Whereas on the contrary, it is most certain, that no Man, though never so crafty and sagacious, can propose to himself such great Unlikelihoods for the Discovery of any Action, but others, altogether as crafty, have actually failed, and miscarried under the very same, or greater.

And therefore the Psalmist, most appositely to our present Purpose, observes, Psal. xxxvi. 2. That the Sinner flatters himself in his own Eyes, till his Iniquity be found out: That's the Issue; and no wonder, if such a Practice comes to such an End.

For whosoever flatters himself; cheats and betrays himself by false Reasonings; and by not dealing clearly and impartially with himself, but grounding his Presumption of Secrecy upon Arguments represented to him much firmer and stronger, than his own Experience, severely judging, would allow them to be. For, if such an one finds an Accident highly improbable, he will presently screw it up, from thence, to impossible, and then conclude, that in so vast a Number of Contingencies, one of a Million shall never hit his Case. And very probably it may not. But what if it should? Why then, one such unlucky Event will fully pay the Reckoning for all former Escapes; and one Treason or Felony discovered, will as certainly bring his Neck to the Block or the Halter, as a Thousand; were they all of them crowded together into one and the same Indictment against him.

(3.) God sometimes makes one Sin the Means of discovering another: It often falling out with two Vices, as with two Thieves or Rogues; of whom it is hard to say, which is worse, and yet one of them may serve well enough to betray and find out the other. How many have by their Drunkenness disclosed their Thefts, their Lusts, and Murders, which might have been buried in perpetual Silence, had not the sottish Committers of them buried their Reason in their Cups? For the Tongue is then got loose from its Obedience to Reason, and commanded at all Adventures by the Fumes of a distemper'd Brain, and a roving Imagination; and so presently pours forth whatsoever they shall suggest to it, sometimes casting away Life, Fortune, Reputation, and all in a Breath.

And how does the confident Sinner know, but the Grace of God, which he has so often affronted and abused, may some time or other

other desert, and give him up to the sordid Temptations of the Jug, and the Bottle, which shall make the Doors of his Heart fly open; and cause his own Tongue to give in Evidence against him, for all the Villanies which had lain so long heaped up, and concealed in his guilty Breast? For let no Man think, that he has the Secrets of his own Mind in his own Power, while he has not himself so; as it is most certain, that he has not, who is actually under a Debauch: For this confounds, and turns all the Faculties of the Soul topsy-turvy; like a Storm tossing and troubling the Sea, till it makes all the foul, black Stuff, which lay at the Bottom, to swim, and roll upon the Top.

In like manner, the drunken Man's Heart floats upon his Lips, and his inmost Thoughts proclaim, and write themselves upon his Forehead; and therefore, as it is an usual, and indeed a very rational Saying, That a Liar ought to have a good Memory; so upon the like Account, a Person of great Guilt, ought to be also a Person of great Sobriety; lest otherwise his very Soul should, some time or other, chance to be poured out with his Liquor: For commonly the same Hand which pierces the Vessel, broaches the Heart also, and it is no strange, nor unusual Passage from the Tavern to the Fail.

(4.) God sometimes infatuates, and strikes the Sinner with Frenzy, and such a Distraction, as causes him to reveal all his hidden Baseness; and to blab out such Truths, as will be sure to be revenged upon him who speaks them. In a word, God blasts, and takes away his Understanding, for having used it so much to the Dishonour of him who gave it; and delivers him over to a sort of Madness, too black and criminal to be allowed any Refuge in Bedlam. And for this, there have been several fearful Instances of such wretched Contemners of Heaven, as having, for many Years, outfaced all the World, both about them, and above them too, with a solemn Look, and a demure Countenance, have yet, at length, had their loathsome Inside turned outwards, and been made an abhorred Spectacle to Men and Angels. For it is but just with God, when Men have debauched their Consciences, to bereave them of their Senses also; and to disturb, and disarm their Reason so, as to disable it from standing upon its Guard, even by that last and lowest Sort of Self-Defence, the keeping of its own Counsel; for no Chains will

will hold a mad Man's Tongue, no Fetters can restrain the Ramble of his Discourse, nor bind any one Faculty of his Soul or Body to its good Behaviour: But all that is within him, is promiscuously thrown out; and his Credit, with all that is dear to him, is at the Mercy of this unruly Member, (as S. James calls it) which, in the present Case, has no Mercy upon him, whom it belongs to; nor any thing to govern it, but a violent, frantick Humour, wholly unable to govern itself.

(5.) God sometimes lets loose the Sinner's Conscience upon him, filling it with such Horror for Sin, as renders it utterly unable to bear the Burden it labours under, without publishing, or rather proclaiming it to the World.

For some Sorts of Sin there are, which will lie burning and boiling in the Sinner's Breast, like a kind of Vesuvius, or Fire pent up in the Bowels of the Earth; which yet must, and will, (in spite of all Obstacles) force its Way out of it at length; and thus, in some Cases of Sin, the Anguish of the Mind grows so exceeding fierce and intolerable, that it finds no Rest within itself, but is even ready to burst, till it is delivered livered of the swelling Secret it labours with : Such kind of Guilt being to the Conscience, like some offensive Meats to the Stomach, which no sooner takes them in, but it is in Pain and Travail, till it throws them out again.

Who knows the Force, the Power, and the remorseless Rage of Conscience, when God commissions it to call the Sinner to an Account ? How strangely it will sift and winnow all his Retirements ? How terribly it will wring and torture him, till it has bolted out the hidden Guilt, which it was in search of ? All which is so mighty an Argument of the Prerogative of God over Mens Hearts, that no Malefactor can be accounted free, though in his own keeping, nor any one concealed, though never so much out of Sight ; for still God has his Serjeant, or Officer in the Sinner's Breast ; who will be sure to attack him, as soon as ever the great Judge shall but give the Word : An Officer so strictly true to his Trust, that he is neither to be softned, nor sweetned ; neither to be begged, nor bought off ; nor consequently, in a word, fit to be of the Jury, when a rich, or potent Malefactor comes to be tried, in hopes to be brought off.

And

And this also shews the great Importance and Wisdom of that Advice of Pythagoras, namely, that every Man, when he is about to do a wicked Action, should, above all Things in the World, stand in awe of himself, and dread the Witnesses within him: Who sits there as a Spy over all his Actions; and will be sure, one Day or other, to accuse him to himself; and perhaps put him upon such a Rack, as shall make him accuse himself to others too.

For this is no new Thing, but an old experimented Case; there having been several in the World, whose Conscience has been so much too hard for them, that it has compelled them to disclose a villanous Fact, even with the Gibbet and the Halter set before their Eyes; and to confess their Guilt, though they saw certain and immediate Death the Reward of that Confession.

But most commonly has Conscience this dismal Effect upon great Sinners, at their Departure out of this World; at which time, some feel themselves so horribly stung with the guilty Sense of some frightful Sin, that they cannot die with any tolerable Peace, till they have revealed it; finding it some small Relief (it seems) and Easement of their their Load, to leave the Knowledge of their Sin behind them, though they carry the Guilt of it along with them.

(6.) And lastly, God sometimes takes the Work of Vengeance upon himself, and immediately, with his own Arm, repays the Sinner, by some notable Judgment from Heaven: Sometimes, perhaps, he strikes him dead suddenly; and sometimes he smites him with some loathsome Disease, (which will hardly be thought the Gout, whatsoever it may be called) and, sometimes again, he strangely blasts him in his Name, Family, or Estate, so that all about him stand amazed at the Blow; but God and the Sinner himself know well enough the Reason, and the Meaning of it too.

Justice, we know, uses to be pictured blind, and therefore it finds out the Sinner, not with its Eyes, but with its Hands; not by seeing, but by striking: And it is the Honour of the great Attribute of God's Justice, which he thinks so much concerned, to give some Pledge or Specimen of itself upon bold Sinners in this World; and so to assure them of a full Payment hereafter, by paying them something in the way of Earnest here.

And the Truth is, many and marvellous have been the Instances of God's dealing in this Manner, both with Cities and whole Nations. For when a Guilt has spread itself so far, as to become National, and grown to such a Bulk, as to be too big for all Controul of Law; so that there seems to be a Dispute, whether God or Sin governs the World; surely it is then high Time for God to do his own Work with his own Hand, and to assert his Prerogative against the impudent Defiers of it, by something every whit as Signal and National, as the Provocation given; whether it be by War, Plague, or Fire, (all which we have been visited with, though neither corrected, nor changed by;) and to let the common Nufances of the Age, the professed Enemies of Virtue and Religion, and the very Blots and Scandal of humane Nature itself know, that there still remains upon them a flaming Guilt to account for, and a dreadful Judge to account to.

And thus I have gone over several of those Ways, by which a Man's Sin overtakes and finds him out in this World. As first, the very Confidence itself of Secrecy, is a direct and natural Cause of the Sinner's Discovery.

Secondly, There is sometimes a strange, providential Concurrence of unusual, unlikely Accidents, for the bringing to light great Villanies. Thirdly, God sometimes makes one great Sin a Means to detect and lay open another. Fourthly, God sometimes infatuates, and strikes the Sinner with Frenzy, and such a Distraction, as makes him reveal all his hidden Guilt. Fifthly, God sometimes lets loose the Sinner's Conscience upon him, so that he can find no Rest within himself, till he has confessed and declared his Sin. Sixthly and lastly, God sometimes smites and confounds him, by some notable, immediate Judgment from Heaven.

These I say, are some of the chief Ways by which God finds out the Sinner in this Life. But what now, if none of all these should reach his Case, but that he carries his Crimes all his Life closely, and ends that quietly; and perhaps in the Eye of the World, honourably too; and so has the good Luck to have his Shame cast into, and covered under the same Ground with his Carcass? Why yet, for all this, the Man has not escaped; but his Guilt still haunts, and follows him into the other World, where there can be no longer a Concealment of it, but it must inevitably find him out. For as it is in Daniel, Ch. vii. ver. 10. When the Judgment shall be set, the Books shall be also opened. Even those Dooms-day Books (as I may so call them) wherein God has kept a complete Register of all the Villanies that were ever committed against Him, which then shall be displayed, and read aloud in the Audience of that great and terrible Court. The Consideration of which, surely, may well put those excellent Words of the Apostle in Rom. vi. 21. with this little Alteration of them, into our Mouths. What Fruit can we [now] have of those Things, whereof we shall [then] be ashamed! So, what Advantage of Pleasure, Profit, or Honour, can the Sinner promise to himself from any Sin, which may be laid in the Balance against that infinite and incredible Weight of Reproach, with which it will certainly pay him home at that Day?

For, could he persuade the Mountains to cover him, or could he hide himself in the Bosom of the great Deep, or could he wrap himself in the very Darkness of Hell; yet still his Sin would fetch him out of all, and present him naked, open, and defenceless

before that fiery Tribunal, where he must receive the Sentence of everlasting Confusion; and where the Devil himself will be sure to do him Justice, as never failing to be a most liberal Rewarder of all his Pimps and Vassals, for the secret Service done him in this World.

And now, what is the whole foregoing Discourse, but a kind of Panegyrick (such a mean one as it is) upon that glorious Thing Innocence? I say, Innocence, which makes that Man's Face shine in Publick, whose Actions and Behaviour it governs in Private. For the innocent Person lives not under the continual Torment of Doubts and Fears, lest he should be discovered; for the Light is his Friend, and to be seen and looked upon is his Advantage: The most retired Parts of his Life being like Jewels; which though indeed most commonly kept locked up in the Cabinet, yet are then most admired and valued, when shewn, and set forth by the Brightness of the Sun, as well as by their own.

How poor a thing Secrecy is to corrupt a Rational Man's Behaviour, has been sufficiently declared already, by the Survey, which we have taken, of those several Ways, whereby the most wise and just Governor of the World is pleased to defeat, and befool the Confidence of the subtlest, and the slyest Sinners. We have seen also, what Paper Walls such Persons are apt to inclose themselves with; and how sight, thin, and transparent all their finest Contrivances of Secrecy are; while, notwithstanding all the private Recesses, and dark Closets, which they so much trust in, the Windows of Heaven are still open over their Heads: And now, what should the Consideration of all this do, but every Minute of our Lives remind us, so to behave ourselves, as under the Eye of that God, who sees in secret, and will reward us openly?

To whom be rendred and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

The Recompence of the Reward.

HEBREWS xi. 24, 25, 26.

By Faith Moses, when he came to Years, refused to be called the Son of Pharaoh's Daughter: Choosing rather to suffer Affliction with the People of God, than to enjoy the Pleasures of Sin for a Season. Esteeming the Reproach of Christ greater Riches, than all the Treasures of Egypt. For he had Respect unto the Recompence of the Reward.

THIS Chapter exhibits to us a noble and victorious Army of Saints, together with an Account of those heroick Actions and Exploits, which they were renowned for, in their several Ages; and have been since transmitted mitted such to Posterity. As, that they subdued Kingdoms, wrought Wonders, stopped the Mouths of Lions, quenched the Violence of Fire; and in a word, triumphed over the cruellest and bitterest Persecutions. And the great Spring or Principle, which (in spite of all their Enemy's Power, and their own Weakness) bore them up to these high Achievements, is not obscurely intimated in the Person of Moses to have been a Respect to the Recompence of Reward. Thus (as it were) fastening one Hand upon the Promise, and turning about the World with the other.

A due Consideration of which Ground and Motive of Action in so great a Person, and so authentick an Example of Sanctity, as Moses was, may justly make us wonder at that strange Proposition, or rather Paradox, which has, for so long a time, passed current with too many; namely, that a Christian, in all Acts of Duty, ought to sequester his Mind from all Respect to an ensuing Reward, and to commence his Obedience wholly and entirely upon the Love of Duty itself, abstracted from all Regard to any following Advantages whatsoever. And that to do otherwise, is to act as a Slave, and not as a Son;

a Temper of Mind, which will certainly embafe and difcommend all our Services to the Acceptance of Almighty God.

This is a glorious Speech, I confefs, and to the Angels, to the Cherubims and Seraphims perhaps practicable; whose Natures being fo different from, and fo much fuperior to ours, may (for ought we know) have as different and fuperior a Way of Acting too. But then we are to confider, that even that known and fo much celebrated Aphorifm, which this Affertion is manifeftly founded upon; to wit, that Virtue is its own Reward, will, upon Examination, be found true only in a limited Senfe: That is to fay, in refpect of a Sufficiency of Worth in it to deferve our Choice, but not in refpect of a Sufficiency of Power actually to engage our Choice. For fuch a Sufficiency it has not; and confequently, if taken in this Senfe, and applied to Men in their natural Eftate, though under any Height or Elevation of Piety whatfoever, it is fo far from being the true and refined Senfe of the Gospel, (as fome pretend) that it is really abfurd in Reason; and, I fuppofe, that to demonftrate it not to be Evangelical, there needs no other Courfe to be taken, than to prove it to be Irrational.

Irrational. And this, by God's Assistance, I shall endeavour to do in the following Discourse. The Foundations of which, I shall lay in these four previous Propositions:

I. That the Gospel, or Doctrine of Christianity does not change, and much less destroy, or supersede the natural Way of the Soul's Acting.

II. That it is natural for the Soul, in the Way of Inclination and Appetite, to be moved only by such Objects, as are in themselves desirable.

III. That as it is natural for the Soul to be thus moved, only by Things desirable, so it is equally natural to it to be moved by them only in that Degree and Proportion, in which they are desirable: And consequently in the

IV. And last place, that whatsoever is proposed as a Motive or Inducement to any Action, ought for that Reason to be in an higher Degree desirable, and to have in it a greater Fitness to move and affect the Will, than the Action itself, which it is proposed as a Motive to.

For, otherwise, it would be superfluous, and indeed, no additional Motive to it at all; forasmuch as the bare Action, so considered, would be as strong an Argument to a Man to perform it, as such a Motive (being but in the same Degree desirable) could be to induce him to it.

Now these four Propositions fully weighed, and put together, will amount to a clear Proof of that which I first intended to prove. For to be moved by Rewards, belongs not to a Man properly as corrupt or depraved in his Nature through the Fall, but simply as he is a Man; a Creature endued with the Faculties of Understanding and Will: And therefore, since the Gospel (as we have shewn) entrenches not upon the natural Way of the Soul's Working, it follows, that neither under the Gospel can it be unlawful to engage in Duty from a Respect to a future Recompence. And moreover, since it is natural to the Will to be more moved by that, which is in itself more desirable; and since that, which is given as a Motive to any Action, ought to be in itself more desirable than that Action; and lastly, since God proposes Rewards, as such Motives to the Actions of Duty and Obedience, it roundly follows, that it is not only lawful, in the Matter of Obedience, to have Respect to the Recompence of Reward, but also, that according to the natural Order of humane Acting, the Soul should have Respect to that in the first place; and then, being animated and enlivened thereby, should respect the Works of Duty and Obedience in the next.

But to bring Things into a narrower Compass, and so both to prosecute the Subject more fully, and to represent it more clearly; I shall reduce what I have to say upon it into these two Propositions:

I. That in the Actions of Duty, considered barely as Duty, or as Morally Good, and fit to be done, there is not a sufficient Motive to engage the Will of Man in a constant Practice of them.

II. That the Proposal of a Reward on God's part, and a Respect had to it on Man's, are certainly necessary to engage Men in such a Course of Duty and Obedience.

This Proposition naturally and unavoidably issues from the former; and accordingly, we shall consider both of them in their Order.

I. And first, for the first of them, to wit, that Duty considered barely as Duty, does not carry in it a sufficient Motive to engage the Will of Man in the constant Practice of it. And this I shall endeavour to make out by these following Reasons: As 1. If in the Soul of Man its Averseness to Duty be much greater and stronger than its Inclination to it, then Duty, considered barely in itself, is not sufficient to determine the Will of Man to the constant Performance of it; which, in my Judgment, is an Argument so forcible and clear, that one of greater Force and Clearness cannot well be desired. For unless Hatred must pass for Courtship, and Hostility for Allurement, certainly that, from which the Will is so averse, cannot be a proper Means to win upon it, or to get into its Embraces. No! sooner may the Fire be attracted by the Center of the Earth, or the Vine clasp about the Bramble; than any Faculty of the Soul have its Inclinations drawn forth by a contrary and distasteful Object.

And then, for the Ground of this Argument, to wit, that the Soul has originally such an Averseness to Duty; this, I suppose, is but too evident to need any farther Probation.

bation. For that horrid Proneness of Man's Will to all Vice, that Inundation of Lewdness, which with such an unresisted Facility, or rather such an uncontroled Predominance has spread itself over the whole World, is a sad, but full Evi^ction of this fatal Truth. For what mean all those hard Restraints and Shackles put upon us in our Minority? What are those several Arts of Discipline and Education, those early Preventions, but so many Banks (as it were) raised up to keep that Sea of Impurity, that swells within our Nature, from pouring itself forth into actual Enormities upon every Occasion? How hardly is the restive, unruly Will of Man first tamed and broke to Duty? How exceeding hardly are its native Reluctancies mastered, and subdued to the sober Rules of Morality? Duty carries with it a grim, and a severe Aspect; and the very Nature of it involves Difficulty. And Difficulty, certainly, is no very apt thing to ingratiate or endear itself to Mens Practices or Affections. Nay, so undeniable is the Truth of this, that the very Scene of Virtue is laid in our natural Averse-ness to things excellent and praise-worthy. For Virtue is properly a Force upon Appetite, the Conquest of an Inclination, and the power-

full Bending of the Mind to unusual Choices, and preter-natural Courses ; so that, indeed, to live virtuously, is to swim against the Stream ; to be above the Pleasures of Sense, and in a word, to be good in spite of Inclination.

And upon this Account alone it is, that Virtue carries so high a Price in the World, and that it attracts such a mighty Esteem and Value, both to itself, and to him who has it, and that even from those who have it not. For, if to lie a Bed, to fare deliciously, and to flow with all sorts of Delight and Plenty, were to be virtuous, there could be no more Commendation due to a virtuous Person, than to one who had pleased his Palate, fed lustily, and slept well. But nothing easy ever did or will draw after it either Applause or Admiration. No, these are things which wait only upon the Painful, the Active, and Laborious ; upon those, who both do and undergo such things, as the rest of Mankind are unwilling and afraid to meddle with ; and that gives them Fame and Renown, and Lustre in the Eyes of the World round about them : For to reconcile Ease and Splendor together is impossible ; and not only the Course of Providence, but the very Nature of things protests protests against it. And therefore, the Paths of Virtue must needs lie through craggy Rocks and Precipices; its very Food is Abstinence; it is cherished with Industry and Self-Denial; it is exercised, and kept in Heart, with arduous Attempts, and hard Services; and if it were otherwise, it could neither be High, nor Great, nor Honourable, nor indeed so much as Virtue.

But now, if this be the natural Complexion of Virtue and Duty, by such terrifying Severities to raise in the Soul a kind of Horror of it, and Aversion to it, let this be the first Reason, why Duty considered barely in itself, and abstracted from all Reward, is not sufficient to engage Men in the Practice of it. Next to which,

2. The second Reason, for the Proof of the same Truth, is this, that those Affections and Appetites of the Soul, which have the strongest Influence upon it, to encline and byass it in all its Choices, to wit, the Appetites belonging properly to the sensitive Part of Man's Nature, are not at all moved, or gratified by any thing in Duty, considered barely as Duty, and therefore, as so considered, it is not a sufficient Motive to induce Men to the Practice of it. Now this Reason also,

also, I conceive, carries its own Evidence with it. For the Soul of Man (as the present State of Nature is) generally moves, as those forementioned Appetites and Affections shall incline it; and therefore, if that which thus inclines it, be not, some way or other, first made sure of, all Persuasions addressed immediately to the Will itself, are like to find but a very cold Reception.

I shall not here insist upon the Division of the Appetites of the Soul into the Rational and Sensitive, the Superior and Inferior, and much less shall I trace them into any farther Sub-Divisions: But shall only observe, that there is one general, comprehensive Appetite, or rather Ratio Appetendi, common to all the particular Appetites, and into which the several Operations of each of them are resolved; and that is, the great Appetite of Jucundum, or Tendency of the whole Soul to that which pleases. For whether they be properly the Desires of the Rational Part, or the Desires and Inclinations of the Sensitive, they all concur, and meet in this, that they tend to, and terminate in something, that may please and delight them.

But now I have already shewn, that bare Duty and Virtue are rather attended with Difficulty

Difficulty and Hardship, than seasoned, and set off with Pleasure; and, for that Cause, are commonly looked upon but as dry Things; and consequently such, as need to have something of Relish put into them, by the Assignment of a pleasing Reward; which may so recommend, and gild the bitter Pill, as to reconcile it to this great Appetite, and thereby convey, and slide it into the Will, as a proper Object of its Choice.

Nay, and I shall proceed farther, and add, that Duty, upon these Grounds, is then most effectually proposed, when it is not only seconded with a Reward, but also with a Reward sensibly represented; and (so far, as the Nature of the thing will bear) with all the Conditions of Allurement and Delight; that so it may be able to counterbalance the contrary Suggestions of Sense, which beat so strongly upon the Imagination. Upon which Account, as Moses enforced the Observation of his Law upon the Israelites, by Rewards most suitable, and adapted to Sense; as consisting of Temporal Promises; (though couching under them, I confess, Spiritual and more sublime Things;) so Christ himself, though the Rewards promised by him to his Followers, were all of them heavenly and spiritual, yet he vouchsafed oftentimes to express them, by such Objects, as most affected the Sense. As for Instance: The Enjoyments of the other World are shadowed, and set forth to us in the Gospel, by drinking Wine in the Kingdom of Heaven, Luke xxii. 18. And by the Mirth and Festivities of a Marriage Feast, Matth. xxii. 4. Also by sitting upon Thrones, Matth. xix. 28. Likewise by dwelling in Palaces adorned with Pearls and Diamonds, and all kind of Precious Stones, Rev. xxi. 19, 20, 21. And lastly, by the continual singing of triumphal Songs, Rev. xi. 3. and xix. 1. All which are some of the most lively and exalted Instances of Pleasure, that fall within the Enjoyment of Sense in this World. And this Way of Expression was most wisely made use of by our Saviour, for that the Pleasures of the sensitive, inferior Appetites, though they are not in themselves the best Objects, yet are certainly the best Representations and Conveyances of such Objects to the Mind; since without some kind of sensible Dress, things too fine for Mens Apprehensions, can never much work upon their Affections.

And upon the same Ground, we may observe also, that those Virtues are the most generally and easily practised, which do least thwart, and oppose these Appetites. As for Example, Veracity in speaking Truth; Faithfulness in not violating a Trust; and Justice in punishing Offenders, or rendring to every one his Due, are much more frequent in the World, than Temperance, Sobriety, and Chastity, and other such Virtues, as are properly Conversant about abridging the Pleasures of the Senses.

So then, if this be the Case, that the Soul of Man, in all its Choices, is naturally apt to be determined by Pleasure, and the sensitive, inferior Appetites (which would draw it off from Duty) are continually plying it with such suitable and taking Pleasures; doubtless, there is no Way for Duty to prevail, and get Ground of them, but by bidding higher, and offering the Soul greater Gratifications wrapped up in an eternal Reward. For when an Adversary is ready to bribe the Judge, and the Judge is as ready to be bribed; assuredly, there is no way so likely to carry the Cause, as to out-bribe him. The sensitive Part or Principle in all the pressing, enticing Offers it makes to the Soul, must either be gained and taken off from alluring, or be conquered and out-done in it. The former of which can never be effected; but the latter may, and that by no other Means, than by representing Duty as cloathed with such great and taking Rewards, that the Soul shall stand convinced, that there will be really a greater, and more satisfactory Pleasure in the Consequents of Duty, (how hard soever it may appear at present) than there can be in the freest, and most unlimited Fruition of the greatest, sensual Delights.

But now, should we proceed upon the contrary Principle, requiring Obedience without Recompence; how lame and successless would every Precept of the Divine Law prove, when thus proposed to us naked and stripped of all that may either strengthen or recommend it? Would not such a forlorn Nakedness represent it, as coming rather to beg, than to command? And to ask an Alms, than to impose a Duty? For suppose, that when God bids us fast and pray; abstain from all the Allurements of sensual Pleasure; deny ourselves; being smote upon one Cheek, turn the other; and lastly, choose Death, rather than commit the least known Sin. Suppose, I say, that God should command us all these severe Things, upon no other Account, but because they are excellent Actions, high Strains of Virtue, most pleasing to God, and upon that score both commanded by him, and to be performed by us. Certainly these Considerations (notwithstanding all the Reason and Truth that is in them) would yet strike the Will but very faintly: For Men care not for suffering, while they think it is only for Suffering sake. And Self-Denial is but a sour Morsel, and will hardly go down without something to sweeten it; and Men, generally, have but a small Appetite to pray, and a much smaller to fast, (how great soever they may have after it.) On the contrary therefore, let us, in this Case, take our Measures from the Addresses made by our Saviour himself to the Minds of Men; Blessed (says he to his Disciples) are ye, when Men shall revile you, and persecute you, and speak all manner of Evil against you falsely for my sake; rejoice, and be exceeding glad. But why I pray? Was it such Matter of Joy, either to be spit, or trampled upon? To be aspersed by Mens Tongues, or crushed under their Heels? No certainly, but we have a very good Reason given us for all this, in the next Words: For great (says our Saviour) is your Reward in Heaven, Matth. v. 12. And again, Blessed are they that mourn. But surely not for the bare Flendi Voluptas; nor for any such great Desirableness, that there is or can be in Tears or Groans, any more than in that which causes them. No, but for something else, that was abundantly able to make amends for all these Sadnesses, in the 5th and 6th Verses of the same Chapter. For such (says our Saviour) shall be comforted: Which one Word implies in it all the Felicity and Satisfaction that humane Nature is capable of. But now had our Saviour, in Defiance of all their natural Inclinations, pressed the Austerities upon them, as the sole and sufficient Reason and Reward of themselves, surely he had done like one, who neither understood the Nature of Man's Will, nor the true Arts of Persuasion. And the Case had been much the same, as if Moses, instead of giving the Israelites Water, had bid them quench their Thirst with the Rock. Let this therefore be the second Reason, Why Duty considered barely as Duty, and abstracted from all Reward, is not sufficient to induce Men to the Practice of it.

3. The third and last Reason, that I shall alledge for the same, is this; That if Duty, considered barely in itself, ought to be the sole

sole Motive to Duty, without any Respect to a subsequent Reward, then those two Grand Affections of Hope and Fear ought to have no Influence upon Men, so as to move or engage them to the Acts of Duty at all. The Consequence is most clear; because the proper Objects, upon which these Affections are to be employed, are future Rewards, and future Punishments; and therefore, if no Regard ought to be had of these in Matters of Duty; it will follow, that neither must those Affections, which are wholly conversant about Rewards, have any thing to do about Duty, wherein no Considerations of a Reward ought, upon this Principle, to take place. This, I say, would be the genuine, unavoidable Consequence of this Doctrine.

But now, should any one venture to own such an odd and absurd Paradox, in any of those sober, rational Parts of Christendom, which have not depraved their judging and discerning Faculties with those strange, new-found, Ecstasick Notions of Religion, which some (who call themselves Christians, and Christians of the highest Form too) have, in the late super-reforming Age, taken up amongst us; how unnatural, or rather indeed, how romantick would such Divinity appear! For all the World acknowledges, that Hope and Fear are the two great Handles, by which the Will of Man is to be taken hold of, when we would either draw it to Duty, or draw it off from Sin. They are the strongest, and most efficacious Means to bring such Things home to the Will, as are principally apt to move and work upon it. And the greatest, the noblest, and most renowned Actions, that were ever achieved upon the Face of the Earth, have first moved upon the Spring of a projecting Hope, carrying the Mind above all present Discouragements, by the Prospect of some glorious and future Good.

And therefore he, who, to bring Men to do their Duty heartily, and vigorously, and to the best Advantages of Christianity, shall cut off all Rewards from it, and so remove the proper Materials which Hope should exert itself upon, does just as if a Man should direct another to shoot right and true, by forbidding him to take Aim at the Mark; or, as if we should bring a Man to a Race, and first tie his Legs fast, or cut them off, and then clap him on the Back, and bid him run. He who takes away the Incitements to Duty, dashes the Performance of Duty, and not the Performance only, but the very Attempt also: For Men do not use to run, only that they may run, but that they may obtain; Labour itself being certainly one of the worst Rewards of a Man's Pains. And therefore, no wonder, if every Exhortation to Virtue has just so much Strength in it, as there is in the Argument brought to enforce it. For, if we will be but true to the first Principles of Nature, we shall find, that all Arguments made use of to persuade the Mind of Man, must be founded upon something that is grateful, acceptable, and pleasing to Nature; and that, in short, is a Man's easy and comfortable Enjoyment of himself, in all the Powers, Faculties, and Affections, both of his Soul and Body. Which said Enjoyment in the hard and dry Strokes of Duty and Spiritual Day Labour, (as I may call it) I am sure is not to be found. For no Man enjoys himself, while he is spending his Spirits, and employing the utmost Intention of his Mind upon such Objects, as shall both put and keep it upon the Stretch; which yet, in the Performance of Duty, every one actually does, or at least, should do. In a word, Irkfulness in the whole Course of an Action, and Weariness after it, certainly are not Fruition; but the Actions of bare Duty are naturally accompanied with both.

Let us, therefore, here once again observe the Course taken by our Saviour himself, when he would raise Men up to something singular and extraordinary, and above the common Pitch of Duty: As in Mark x. 21. we find, how he answered the rich young Heir, enquiring of him the way to Heaven. Go (says he) and sell whatsoever thou hast, and give it all to the Poor. Now certainly, had our Saviour stopped here, this had been as grinding, and as stripping a Command, as could have well passed upon a Man; and might indeed have seemed, not so much a Command to prove, as an Artifice to blow him up; not so much a Test, to try his Obedience, as a Trick (like some Oaths) to worm him out of his Estate. But surely, our Saviour never affected to be King of Beggars, and much less to make Men Beggars, the better to King it over them. Nor can we imagine, that he who was all Wisdom and Goodness, would have so far contradicted both, as to make it a Duty to give Alms, and at the same time put Men into a Condition fit only to receive them, or that he would have have enjoined so great a Paradox in Practice, as to require his Followers to choose Poverty meerly for Poverty's Sake; or to sell their Possessions, only to buy Hunger and Rags, Scorn and Contempt with the Price of them. No; assuredly, the God of Nature would never have put a Man upon any thing so contrary to the first Principles of Nature. And therefore our Saviour did not require this young Man here absolutely to quit his Riches, but only to exchange them, and to part with a less Estate in Possession, for a greater in Reversion, with a small Enjoyment for a vast Hope; in those following Words: Do this, (says he) and thou shalt have Treasure in Heaven: So that he proposed the Duty in one Word, and the Reward in another. And it was this alone, which made our Saviour's Proposal (which looked so terribly at first) fair and rational; and which, without such a Reward annexed to it, would, upon the strictest, and most impartial Discourses of Reason and Nature, have been thrown back as cruel and intolerable.

And again, when our Saviour preached to the World the grand Evangelical Duty of Taking up the Cross; we do not find, that he made the meer Burden of Bearing it, any Argument for the Taking it up; no certainly, such Arguments might have pressed hard upon their Shoulders, but very little upon their Reason. And therefore, in Mark x. 29, 30. There is no Man, (says he) who hath left House, or Brethren, or Sisters, or Father, or Mother, or Wife, or Children, or Lands for my Sake, and the Gospel's; but he shall receive an hundred fold now in this Time, and in the World to come eternal Life. So that we see here the Antecedent smoothed over, and recommended by the Consequent; Duty and Reward walking Hand in Hand; the Riches of the Promise still over-matching the Rigours of the Precept, and (as we observe in the Royal Diadems of Christian Kings) the Cross and the Crown put together.

But above all, the Example of the great Author and Finisher of our Faith himself will put the Point here before us past all Dispute. For are not his enduring the Cross, and despising the Shame, (and this latter as terrible a Crucifixion to the Mind, as the other could be to the Body) both of them resolved into the Joy that was set before him? Hebr. xii. 2. And did not our Saviour teach us by his Example, as well as by his Precept? At least so far, far, that what he did, was certainly lawful to be done; though, by reason of the immense Disparity of his Condition and ours, not always necessary for us to do. But however, as to the Case now spoken of, it was manifestly the subsequent Joy which baffled and disarmed the present Pain, and the Prospect of a glorious Immortality, which carried him triumphant through all those Agonies, which bare Mortality must otherwise have sunk under.

It has been observed, and that with great Wit and Reason, that in all Encounters of dangerous and dreadful Issue, it is still the Eye which is first overcome; and being so, presently spreads a Terror throughout the whole Man: Accordingly, on the contrary, where the Eye is emboldned with the encouraging View of some vast Enjoyment pressing close upon the Heels of a present Suffering, it diffuses such a noble Bravery and Courage into all the Faculties, both of Soul and Body, as makes them overlook all Dangers; and by overlooking, conquer and get above them. In a word, let us so eye the great Captain of our Salvation, as to rest assured of this, that, wheresoever he went before, it is both our Privilege, and our Safety

Safety to follow ; and that his Example alone is enough both to justify, and to glorify the Imitation.

But to proceed ; as we have shewn, how our Saviour has sometimes thought fit to draw Men to their Duty by their Hopes, so let us see, in the next place, how he, sometimes also, drives them to it by their Fears. Fear not those (says he) who can but kill the Body, but fear him who is able to destroy both Soul and Body in Hell, Matth. x. 28. And again, in Luke xii. 5. he enforces the same Words with this emphatical Repetition ; Yea, I say unto you, fear him. But now, if the Fear of Hell influencing a Man either to the Practice of Duty, or the Avoidance of Sin, were the direct Way to Hell, (as some with equal Confidence and Ignorance have affirmed) surely, our Saviour took the most preposterous Course that could be, to prescribe the Fear of Hell, as the surest Means to escape it. For how can there be any such thing as fleeing from the Wrath to come, if Fear, which is the only thing that can make Men flee, shall betray them into that which they flee from ?

But farther, to descend from the Method used by Christ himself to that made use of by

by his Apostles. What means S. Peter, to put Men upon passing the time of their Sojourning here in Fear? 1 Pet. i. 17. And S. Paul, to press Men upon working out their Salvation with Fear and Trembling? Phil. ii. 12. For Fear and Trembling are certainly very senseless things, where a Man is not at all the better for them. But these experienced Guides (it seems) very well knew how impossible it was, where the Concern was infinite and unspeakable, and the Danger equal, for any Man of Sense and Reason to shake off his Fears, and retain his Wits too. And therefore, to me it seems none of the smallest Arguments against the Modern Whimsy, which we are now opposing, that both in the Language of the Old Testament and the New, the whole Business of Religion is still comprehended and summed up in this one great thing, the Fear of God. For this we may assure ourselves of, that he who fears as he should do in this World, shall have nothing either to fear or feel in the next.

And now lastly, to set off the foregoing Authorities with the manifest Reason of the Thing itself: It is, doubtless, one of the greatest Absurdities, that can well fall within the Thoughts of Man, to imagine, that God, who has cast the Business of Man's Salvation into so large a Compass, as to share out to every other Faculty and Affection of the Soul its due Part and Proportion in this great Work, should yet wholly disinterest those two noble leading Affections of Hope and Fear, from having any thing to do in the same. For must these only lie idle and fallow, while all the other Affections of the Mind are employed and taken up? And has God something for us to love, and something to hate, but in the whole Business of Religion, nothing for us to hope for, and nothing to fear? Which surely he has not, if it be absolutely unlawful for Men under the Gospel, in any religious Performance, to act with an Eye to a future Recompence. And therefore, since this Assertion, to wit, that Duty, considered barely as Duty, ought to be the sole Motive to the Practice of it, brings us under a Necessity of asserting also, that Hope and fear ought not at all to influence Men in the Matter of Duty; which yet is most absurd: And since nothing that is absurd or false, can, by genuine and just Consequence, issue from what is true; it follows, that the former Assertion, or Position from which this latter is inferred, is most false and irrational. Which was the thing to be proved. And so
the

I proceed to answer such Objections, as may with any Colour of Argument be alledged in Opposition to the Doctrine hitherto laid down and defended by us, and so conclude this first Proposition: As,

1. It may be argued, that there is a certain Complacency and Serenity of Mind attending the Performance of Actions pious and virtuous, and a kind of Horror or Remorse that follows the Neglect of them, or the doing of the quite contrary; the Consideration of which alone, setting aside all farther Hopes of a future Reward, may be a sufficient Argument to enforce the Practice of Duty upon any sober, rational Mind whatsoever.

To this I answer, that this Complacency of Mind upon a Man's doing his Duty on the one side, and that Remorse attending his Neglect of it, or doing the quite contrary on the other, are so far from excluding a Respect to a future Recompence, or being a different Motive from it, that they do really imply it, and are principally founded in it; the said Complacency flowing naturally from

the Assurance given a Man by his Conscience, that the Honesty and Goodness of his Actions sets him free and safe from all that Evil and Punishment, which the Law of God awards to the Transgressors of it. And the contrary Remorse of Mind proceeding chiefly from a Dread of those Punishments, which a Man's Conscience assures him, that the Breach of the said Law will render the Breakers of it obnoxious to. And that this is so, is demonstrable by this one Reason; that several Men are differently affected, either with this Complacency, or Remorse of Mind, upon their doing the very same Action; and that because some are verily persuaded, that the said Action is a Sin, and so to be followed with the Penal Consequents of Sin; and others, on the contrary, are as fully persuaded, that it is no Sin. For the better Illustration, and Proof of which, we must observe, that Mens Judgments concerning Sin, have been, and in several Parts of the World, still are very different; so that what is Sin with one People or Nation, is not always so with another: As for instance, some account Drunkenness no Sin, as many of the Germans; and others have had the same Thoughts of Theft, as the Spartans; and of Fornication, as most of the Heathens; and some again think, that an Officious Lye is no Sin, as the Jesuites and Socinians: Whereas others, on the contrary, stand as fully persuaded, that all these are Sins, (as indeed they are, and most of them very gross ones too) and such, as unrepented of, will assuredly consign over the Persons guilty of them to eternal Punishment, from the Hands of a Sin-revenging Justice.

But now, upon these two so different, pre-conceived Opinions, it will, and must certainly follow, that those of the latter Judgment cannot but feel that Horror and Remorse of Mind upon the doing of these Actions, which those of the contrary Persuasion, to wit, that they are no Sins, undoubtedly, upon the very same Actions, do not feel. But now, from whence can this be? Surely, not from the bare Action itself, nor from any thing naturally adherent to it; forasmuch as the Action, with all that is natural to it, is the same in both those Sorts of Men, whose Minds, after the doing of it, are so differently affected. And therefore, it must needs be from the different Infusions into, and Prepossessions of Men in their Minority, and first Education; by which some have been taught, that a severe Punishment, and After-Reckoning, belongs to such and such Actions; and by which others again have been taught, that they are Actions in themselves indifferent, and to which no Penalty at all is due.

I conclude therefore, that the Complacency, which Men find, upon the Performance of their Duty, and the Remorse which they feel upon the Neglect of it, taken abstractedly from all Consideration of a future Reward, cannot be a sufficient Motive to Duty; because, indeed so taken, they are but a meer Fiction or Chimera. For that all such Complacency and Remorse are founded only upon an early Persuasion wrought into Mens Minds of a following Retribution of Happiness or Misery allotted to Men hereafter, according to the different Nature and Quality of their Actions here: And so much in Answer to this first Exception. But,

2. Some again object and argue, that there is a different Spirit required under the Gospel, from that which was either under or before the Mosaick Dispensation; and therefore, though it might be lawful and allowable enough for the Church in those Days, living under an inferior OEconomy in all Acts of Duty to have Respect to the Recompence of Reward; yet in Times of higher, and more spiritual Attainments, and under a Gospel-State, Men ought wholly to act, and to be acted by such a filial and free Spirit, as never to enter upon any Duty with the least Regard to an Aster-Compensation; this being servile, legal, and mercenary; as these Sons of Perfection do pretend.

But to this also I answer, that the Jewish Church, and the Church before it, may be considered under a double Character or Capacity. (1.) As they sustained the peculiar Formality of a Church so or so constituted. And (2.) As they were Men, or Rational Creatures, as the rest of Mankind are.

Now it must be confessed, that what belonged to them in the former Capacity was undoubtedly proper and peculiar to them, and so neither does, nor ought to conclude the Church now-a-days, being cast into a different Form or Constitution. Nevertheless, what belonged to them, simply as they were Men, or Moral Agents, equally belongs to, and concerns the Church in all Places, and all Ages of the World, and under all Forms, Models, and Administrations whatsoever.

But now, for any one in the Works of Duty, to proceed upon Hopes of a Reward, is (as I have already shewn) the Result of a Rational Nature, endued with such Faculties of Mind, as, according to their natural Way of Acting, (especially as the State of Nature now is) will hardly, or never be brought to apply heartily to Duty, but in the Strength of such Motives; the very Nature of Man inclining him chiefly, if not solely, to act upon such Terms and Conditions; so that to do one's Duty with regard to a following Recompence, concerns not Men under any peculiar Denomination of Jews or Christians, but simply as they are Men. And to affirm the contrary, is a direct passing over to the Heresy and Dotage of the Sadducees, who by mistaking and perverting that Saying of Zadock, the Author of their Sect and Name, to wit, (That Men ought to do virtuously without any Thought of a following Recompence) carried it to that Height of Irreligion, as to deny all Rewards of Happiness or Misery in another World; and consequently, a Resurrection to another Life after this. Such horrid and prophane Inferences were drawn, or rather dragged by these Hereticks from one unwary and misunderstood Expression.

Never-

Nevertheless, so much is, and must be granted, (and no doubt, Zadock himself, if there was such an one, never intended more) that for a Man, in the Practice of Duty, to act solely and entirely from a Desire of a following Recompence, exclusively to all Love of the Work and Duty itself, is indeed servile and mercenary, and no ways suitable to that filial Temper, which ought to govern all Christian Minds. But then again, we must remember, that to do one's Duty only for a Reward, and not to be willing to do it without one, are very different Things. And if we consider even Judas himself, it was not his carrying the Bag, while he followed his Master, but his following his Master, only that he might carry the Bag, which made him a Thief and an Hireling. For otherwise, I cannot see, why he might not have been every whit as lawfully his Master's Almoner, as he was one of his Apostles; and have carried his Bag with the same Duty, with which he might have carried his Cross.

But now, if we shall drive the Matter so far, as to make it absolutely Unchristian for a Man, in the Practice of Duty, to have any Design at all upon a Future Reward; why then (as I may speak with Reverence) does not God, in the Conversion of a Sinner, new-model his very Essence, casheer and lop off the natural Affections of Hope and Fear? And why does he also promise us Heaven and Glory, if it be not lawful for us to pursue what he is pleased to promise? For are these Promises made to quicken our Endeavours, or to debase and spoil our Performances? To be Helps, or rather Snares to our Obedience? All which, if it be both absurd and impious for any one to imagine, then it will follow, that this, and the like Exceptions, from which such Paradoxes are inferred, must needs also fall to the Ground as false, and not to be defended.

But before I make an end of this first Proposition, it may not be amiss to consider a little the Temper of those Seraphick Pretenders to Religion, who have presumed to refine upon it by such airy, impracticable Notions, and have made such a mighty Noise with their Gospel-Spirits, and Gospel-Dispensations, their high Attainments, and wonderful Illuminations, screwing up Matters to such an Height, that there is no Hope of being a Christian, without being something more than a Man. For so, I am sure, ought he

he to be, who, in the doing of his Duty, must not be suffered to expect, or look for any Reward after it; nor, in his Way to Heaven, so much as to think of the Place which he is going to. I say, if we consider the Temper of these High-Flyers, (who would needs impose such a New Christianity upon the World) are they themselves all Spirit and Life, all Christianity sublimate, (as I may so express it?) Are they nothing but Self-Denial and Divine Love? Nothing but a pure ascending Flame, without any Mixture or Communication with these lower Elements? I must confess, I could never yet find any such thing in this sort of Men; but on the contrary, have generally observed them to be as arrant Worldings, and as proud and selfish a Generation of Men, as ever disgraced the Name of Christianity by wearing it; and far from giving any other Proof, that in all their Religious Performances they never act with an Eye to a Future Reward, but only this one, that having wholly fastened their Eyes, their Hands, and their Hearts also, upon this World, they cannot possibly, at the same time, place them upon another too. On the other side therefore, not to aspire to such Heights and

Elevations in Religion, (or rather indeed above it;) since God, of his abundant Goodness, has been pleased to invite, and even court us to our Duty with such liberal and glorious Rewards, let us neither despise his Grace, nor be wiser than his Methods; but with Arms as open to take, as his are to give, let us embrace the Motives he has afforded us, as so many Springs and Wheels to our Obedience. And whosoever shall piously, constantly, and faithfully do his Duty with Hopes of the promised Recompence, shall find, that God will not fail to make good that Promise to him hereafter, by an humble Dependance upon which he was brought to do his Duty here: And so much for our first and main Proposition. The

II. Which (as I shew before) was in a manner included in the first, and so scarce needs any Prosecution distinct from it, is this;

That the Proposal of a Reward on God's part, and a Respect had to it on Man's, are undoubtedly necessary to engage Men in a Course of Duty and Obedience.

For the Discussion of which, I shall briefly do these two Things.

1. I shall shew, in what Respect these are said to be necessary.

2. I shall shew, why, and upon what Reasons, they ought to be accounted so.

1. And first, For the Necessity of them. A Thing may be said to be necessary two ways. As,

(1.) When by the very Essence or Nature of it, it is such, that it implies in it a Contradiction, and consequently an Impossibility, even by the Power of God himself, that (the said Nature continuing) it should be otherwise. And thus, I shall never presume to affirm, (though some I know do) that God cannot induce a Man (being a free Agent) to a Course of Duty and Obedience, without proposing a competent Reward to such Obedience. For I question not, but God can so qualify, and determine the Will of a Rational Agent, (and that without the least Diminution to its natural Freedom) that the Inclination and Byass of it shall wholly propend to Good, and that from a mere Love of Goodness itself, without any Consideration of a farther Recompence. And the Reason of this is, because all Good, as such is in its Degree a proper Object for the Will to choose;

and whatsoever is a proper Object of its Choice, is also sufficient to draw forth, and determine the Actings of it, unless there interpose some stronger Appetible, to rival or overmatch it in its Choice: And yet even in this Case also, God, no doubt, can so strengthen the Propensity of the Will to Good, that it shall have no Appetite to, or Relish for the Pleasures of Sense at all; and consequently shall need no Proposal, either of Reward or Punishment, to draw it off from the Choice and Pursuit of those Things, which the Grace of God has already given it such an entire Aversion to. For this, questionless, is the present Condition of the Angels, and other glorified Spirits, whose Will is so absolutely determined to Good, as to be without any Proneness, or Disposition at all to Evil; and what Condition they are in at present, God we may be sure, by his Omnipotence, could have created Man in at first, and have preserved him in ever since, had he been so pleased; so that there is nothing in the thing itself impossible. But this, I own, affects not immediately the Case now before us. And therefore in the

(2.) Place. A thing may be said to be necessary, not absolutely, but with respect to that particular State and Condition, in which it is. And thus, because God has actually so cast the present Condition of Man, as to make his Inclination to Good but imperfect, and during this Life to continue it so, and withall, to place him among such Objects, as are mightily apt to draw him off from what is Morally Good, it was necessary, (upon the supposal of such a Condition) that, if God would have Men effectually choose Good and avoid Evil, he should suggest to them some farther Motives to Good, and Arguments against Evil, than what the bare Consideration of the Things themselves prohibited, or commanded by him, can afford. For otherwise, that which is Morally Good, meeting with so faint and feeble an Inclination in the Will towards it, will never be able to make any prevailing Impression upon that leading Faculty. From all which you see, in what Sense we affirm it necessary for God to propose Rewards to Men, thereby to engage them to their Duty; namely, because of that imperfect Estate, which God has been pleased to leave Men under in this World.

And now, in the next place, for the Proof of this Necessity, (which was the other thing proposed proposed by us) these two General Reasons may be offered.

(1.) The first taken from clear Evidence of Scripture. And the

(2.) From the constant avowed Practice of all the wise Lawgivers of the World.

(1.) And first for Scripture. It has been more than sufficiently proved from thence already, how deplorably unable the Heart of Man is, not only to conquer, but even to contend with the Difficulties of a Spiritual Course, without a steady View of such Promises, as may supply new Life, Spirit, and Vigour to its Obedience. To all which, let it suffice, at present, to add that full, and notable Declaration of St. Paul, in 1 Cor. xv. 19. That if in this Life only we had Hope in Christ, we were of all Men most miserable. And certainly, for a Man to know, that by being a Christian, he should be of all Men most miserable, was as untoward an Argument, (should we look no farther) to persuade him to be a Christian, as could well have been thought of. So that we see here how those Adepti, those Men of Perfection, before spoken of, (who scorn to be religious out of any Respect to a future Reward) are already got a Pitch above the third Heaven; and

and far beyond the utmost Perfection, that St. Paul himself ever pretended to. But

(2.) The other Proof of the same Assertion shall be taken from the Practice of all the noted Lawgivers of the World; who have still found it necessary to back and fortify their Laws with Rewards and Punishments; these being the very Strength and Sinew of the Law, as the Law itself is of Government.

No wise Ruler ever yet ventured the Peace of Society upon the Goodness of Mens Nature, or the virtuous Inclination of their Temper. Nor was any thing truly Great and Extraordinary ever almost atchieved, but in the Strength of some Reward every whit as Great and Extraordinary as the Action which it carried a Man out to. Thus it was in the Virtue of Saul's high Promises, that David encountered Goliath: The Giant indeed was the Mark he shot, or rather slung at; but the King's Daughter, and the Court Preferments, were the Mark he most probably aimed at. For we read how inquisitive he was, what should be done for him. And it is not unknown, how in the Case of a scrupulous Oath-sick Conscience also, Promise of Preferment has been found the ablest Casuist to resolve it; from which, and the like Passages both Antient and Modern, if we look farther into the Politicks of the Greeks and the Romans, and other Nations of Remark in History, we shall find, that, whensoever the Laws enjoined any thing harsh, and to the doing of which Men were naturally averse, they always thought it requisite to add Allurement to Obligation, by declaring a noble Recompence (possibly some large Pension, or gainful Office, or Title of Honour) to the meritorious Doers of whatsoever should be commanded them; and when again, on the other side, the Law forbid the doing of any thing, which Men were otherwise mightily inclined to do, they were still forced to call in Aid from the Rods and the Axes, and other terrible Inflictions, to secure the Authority of the Prohibition against the Bent and Fury of the contrary Inclination. And this Course, being founded in the very Nature of Men and Things, was, and is as necessary to give Force and Efficacy to the Divine Laws themselves, as to any humane Laws whatsoever. For in vain do we think to find any Man virtuous enough to be a Law to himself, or any Law strong enough to enforce and drive home its own Obligation;

or lastly, the Prerogative of any Lawgiver high enough to assure to him the Subjects Obedience. For Men generally affect to be carested and encouraged, and (as it were) bought to their Duty, (as well as from it too sometimes.) For which, and the like Causes, when God, by Moses, had set before his own People a large Number of the most excellent, and (as one would think) Self-recommending Precepts on the one hand, and a black Roll of the very worst and vilest of Sins on the other, (Sins that seemed to carry their Punishment in their very Commission;) yet nevertheless, in the Issue, God found it needful to bring up the Rear of all with those Decretory Words, in Deut. xxx. 19. Behold, I have this Day set before you Life and Death, Blessing and Cursing. And what he then set before the Israelites, he now sets before us, and the whole World besides; and when we shall have well weighed the Nature of the things set before us, and considered what Life is, and what Death is, I suppose we shall need neither Instruction, nor Exhortation, to which of the two we should direct our Choice.

And now, to close up all, and to relieve your Patience, you have heard the Point stated stated and argued, and the Objections against it answered; after all which, what can we so naturally infer from this whole Discourse, as the infinite Concern, lying upon every Man, to fix to himself such a Principle to act by, as may effectually bring him to that great and beatifick End, which he came into the World for?

This is most certain, that no Man's Practice can rise higher than his Hopes. It is observed in Aqueducts, that no Pipe or Conduit can force the Current of the Water higher than the Spring-Head itself lies, from whence the Water first descends. In like manner, it is impossible for a Man, who designs to himself only the Rewards of this World, to act in the Strength thereof, at such a Rate, as shall bring him to a better. And the Reason of this is, because whosoever makes these present Enjoyments his whole Design, accounts them absolutely the best things he can have, and accordingly he looks no farther, he expects no better; and if so, it is not to be imagined, that he should ever obtain, what he never so much as looked for: For no Man shall come to Heaven by Chance.

As

As for Trials and Temptations, (those fatal Rocks, which the Souls of Men are so apt to dash upon) we may take this for an infallible Rule concerning them; namely, that nothing in this World can support a Man against such Trials, as shall threaten him with the utter Loss of this World. For the Truth is, it would imply a Contradiction to suppose that it could; and yet these are the Trials, which even wise Men so much fear, and prepare for, and know, that they shall sink under and perish by, unless borne up by something mightier and greater than the World; and therefore, not to be found in it.

What farther Trials God may have in reserve for us, we cannot tell; only this we may reckon upon as a certain, though sad Truth; that there has been a mighty growing Guilt upon this Nation for several Years. And as great Guilts naturally portend, as well as provoke great Judgments; so God knows, how soon the black Cloud, which has been so long gathering over us, may break, and pour down upon us; and how near we may be to Times, in which, he who will keep his Conscience, must expect to keep nothing else.

For nothing, certainly, can cast a more dreadful Aspect upon us, than those monstrous crying Immoralities lately broke in amongst us; by which, not only the English Virtue, but the very English Temper, seems utterly to have left us; while, to the Terror of all Pious Minds, Foreign Vices have invaded us; which threaten us more, than any Foreign Armies can.

As for our Excellent Church, which has been so maligned, and struck at on all hands, and we of this Place especially; and that by some, whom we had little Cause to expect such Stabs from, (to their just and eternal Infamy be it spoke.) * We have been

moreover told, and that ons and Privileges are very precarious, (though yet,

Thanks be to God, and to our antient Government, confirmed to us, by all that this Nation calls Law;) and withall, that our Reign will be very short,

(as no doubt, if Republicans might have their Will, the Reign of all Kings, even of

DISCOURSE

Concerning the General Resurrection.

O N

ACTS xxiv. 15.

Having Hope towards God, (which they themselves also allow) that there shall be a Resurrection of the Dead, both of the Just and Unjust.

THE most wise Creator of the Universe has so formed one World, that it is not to be governed without the Help of another ; nor the Actions of the Life here, to be kept in Order, without the Hopes and Fears of one hereafter.

The

The Truth is, next to God himself, Hopes and Fears govern all Things. They act by a kind of Royal Deputation under him, and are so without Controul, that they carry all before them, by an absolute, unlimited Sway. For so long as God governs the World, (which will be as long as there is a World to govern) Law must govern under him, and the Sanction of Rewards and Punishments must be that which enables the Law itself to govern: Humane Nature of itself being, by no means, so well disposed, as to make its Duty the sole Motive or Measure of its Obedience.

For as in other Cases, so here, it is not so much the Hand which binds, as the Bond or Chain with which it binds, which must make good its Hold, upon the Thing or Person so bound by it. Every Man, in all that concerns him, stands influenced by his Hopes and Fears, and those by Rewards and Punishments, the proper and respective Objects thereof; and the Divine Law is the grand Adamantine Ligament, tying both of them fast together; by assuring Rewards to our Hopes, and Punishments to our Fears; so that Man being thus bound by the peremptory, irreversible Decree of Heaven, must by vir-lue thereof, indispensably obey or suffer ; the Sentence of the Law being Universal and Perpetual, either of a Work to be done, or a Penalty to be endured.

But whether it be from the Nature or Fate of Mankind, it is no small Matter of Wonder, that Man of all Creatures should have such an Averseness to obey, and such a Prone-ness to disobey his Maker, that nothing under an Eternity of Happiness or Misery (the first of them unspeakable, and the other of them intolerable) should be the Means appointed to engage him to the one, or deterr him from the other. And it is yet a greater Wonder, that not only such a Method of dealing with Men should be thought necessary, but that in such innumerable Instances it should be found not sufficient ; at least not effectual to the End it is intended for ; as the Event of Things too fatally demonstrates it not to be.

Nevertheless, since Almighty God has pitched-upon this Method of Governing the World by Rewards and Punishments, a Resurrection of the Persons so to be rewarded or punished, must needs be granted absolutely and unavoidably necessary : Nothing in this Life giving us a satisfactory Account, that either the Good or the Bad have been yet dealt with according to the strict and utmost Merit of their Works: Which yet, the Justice of an infinitely wise Judge and Governor having so positively declared his Will in the Case, cannot but insist upon. For albeit God, as Creator of the World, acted therein by an absolute, sovereign Power, (always) under the Conduct of infinite Wisdom and Goodness; yet, as Governor of it, his Justice is the prime Attribute which he proceeds by, and the Laws the grand Instruments whereby Justice acts, as Rewards and Punishments are the Things which give Life, Force, and Efficacy to Justice itself. Upon which Grounds, the Apostle gives us a full Account of the whole Matter, in that excellent Place, in 2 Cor. v. 10. We must all, says he, appear before the Judgment Seat of Christ, that every one may receive the Things done in his Body, according to what he hath done, whether it be good or bad. Thus says the Apostle. But the Dead, we know, as such, can receive no such Things; nor are Subjects capable of Rewards or Punishments: So that the Sum of the Apostle's whole Argument amounts to this: That as certainly as God governs the World wisely, and will one Day judge it righteously, so certain is it, that there must be a General Retribution, and, by consequence, a General Resurrection.
that

In my Discourse upon which, I shall cast the whole Prosecution of the Subject here to be treated of by us, under these three Propositions, viz.

I. That a Belief of a Resurrection from the Dead, is a thing exceeding difficult, strange, and harsh to the Discourses of Natural Reason.

II. That notwithstanding this great Difficulty, there is yet sufficient Reason, and solid Ground for the Belief of it. And,

III. And lastly, That supposing a Sufficiency of Reason for this Belief, all Difficulties, and seeming Repugnancies alledgable against it, do exceedingly advance the Worth, Value, and Excellency of it.

Now under these three Propositions shall be taken in all that we shall, or can say concerning the General Resurrection at the Last Day. And accordingly, as to the first of the three Propositions, importing the great Difficulty, Strangeness, and Repugnancy of the Article of the Resurrection to the Belief, of Natural Reason, we find, moreover, in the Text here pitched upon by us, that the main Objection insisted upon by the Principal of S. Paul's Opposers, the Sadducees, against the Doctrine preached by him, was drawn from this controverted Point of the Resurrection, and of the Incredibility of the same, founded upon the supposed Impossibility thereof; which, as it was a Point of incomparably the greatest Moment in the Practice of Religion, and consequently with the firmest Steadiness to be assented to, and with equal Zeal to be contended for, by our Apostle; so was it with no less Heat and Fierceness opposed and exploded by those his forementioned Antagonists. In treating of which, I shall endeavour these two things:

1. To shew, that there is such an extraordinary Averseness in Natural Reason to the Belief of a Resurrection, as in the said Proposition we have affirmed that there is.

2. To assign the Causes from which this Averseness proceeds. And,

1. For the first of these. The surest and readiest way (I should think) to learn the Verdict of Reason in this Matter, would be to proceed by the Rule and Standard of their Judgment, who where the most acknowledged and renowned Masters of Reason and Learning in the several Ages of the World, the Philosophers; Persons who discoursed upon the bare Principles of Natural Reason, and upon no higher; who pretended not to Revelation, but acquiesced in such Discoveries, as Nature, assisted with Industry, and improved with hard Study, could furnish them with. And this certainly was the best and likeliest Way to state the Ne plus ultra of Reason, and to shew how far it could, and could not go, by shewing how far it had actually gone already. And the World has had Experience in more Sorts of Learning than one, how much those, who have gone before, have surpassed in Perfection, as well as Time, those who have come after them.

Now, in the first Rank of these great and celebrated Persons, Pythagoras (the earliest, whom History reports to us to have been dignified with the Title of Philosopher) asserted, and taught a Metempsychosis, or Transmigration of the same Soul into several Bodies; which is utterly inconsistent with a Resurrection; the Number of Bodies upon these Terms, in so great a Proportion, exceeding ceeding the Number of Souls: One Soul wearing out many Bodies, as one Body does many Garments. So that the Pythagorick Principle can admit of no Resurrection, unless there could be as many Souls as Bodies to rejoin one another; which, upon this Hypothesis, cannot be.

Plato indeed speaks much of the Immortality of the Soul; but by not so much as mentioning the Rising of the Body again after its Dissolution, (when yet he treated of so cognate a Subject) we may rationally presume, that he knew nothing of it; and that amongst all his Ideas, (as I may so express it) he had none of such a Resurrection.

Aristotle held an Eternity of the World, viz. as to the Heavens and the Earth, the principal Parts of it. But as to things mutable, he placed that Eternity in the endless Succession of Individuals; which clearly shews, that he meant not, that those Individuals should revive and return to an endless Duration. For since he asserted this Succession only to immortalize the Kind or Species, the Immortality of Particulars would have rendered that Succession wholly needless,

As

As for the Stoicks and Epicureans who, I am sure, were reputed the subtilest and most acute of all the Sects of Philosophers, we have them in Acts xvii. 32. scoffing at the very Mention of Rising from the Dead. They thought it ridiculous for animated Dust once dead to revive, or for Man to be made or raised out of it, any more than once. For, if that might be, they reckoned that Men could not properly be said to die, but rather only to hold their Breath for some time, than totally to lose it; and that Death might be called a Sleep without a Metaphor, if we might so soon shake it off, and rise from it again. In short, if Zeno or Chrysippus were alive, they would explode; and, if Epicurus himself should rise from the Dead, he would scarce believe a Resurrection.

But to pass from Heathens to those who had their Reason farther improved by Revelation, we have in the Jewish Church a great, a learned, and considerable Sect called the Sadducees, wholly discarding this Article from their Creed; as S. Matthew tells us, in Matth. xxii. 23. And S. Luke, in Acts xxiii. 8. That the Sadducees say, there is no Resurrection, &c. as, no doubt, it was their Interest, (as well as Belief) that there should be none.

And

And lastly, even for some of those, who professed Christianity itself, and that in the famous City of Corinth, where most of the Gallantry, the Wit, and Learned Arts of Greece flourished, we find some Christians themselves denying it, as appears from that elaborate Confutation, which S. Paul bestowed upon them, in the xvth Chapter of his first Epistle to the Corinthians.

Which Instances, amongst several others assignable to the same Purpose, may suffice to shew, how hardly this Article finds Credit with those who are led by Principles of mere Natural Reason; and indeed, so strange and incredible does it appear to such, (and some others also, though professing higher Principles) that the same Power which God exerted in raising Christ from the Dead, seems necessary to raise such Sons of Infidelity to a firm and thorow Belief of it. And so I come to the

2. Thing proposed, viz. To assign the Causes, why Natural Reason thus starts from the Belief of a Resurrection, and these may be reckoned of two sorts.

1. Such as are taken from the manifold Improbabilities, rendring the Matter so exceeding unlikely to the Judgment of Humane mane Reason, that it cannot frame itself to a Belief, that there is really any such thing. And,

2. Such as are drawn from the downright Impossibilities charged upon it. Both which are to be considered. And

1. Those many great Improbabilities and Unlikelihoods alledged against the Resurrection of the same Numerical Body, are apt to give a mighty Check to the Mind of Man, in yielding its Belief to it. For who would imagine, or could conceive, that when a Body, by continual Fraction and Dissipation, is crumbled into Millions of little Atoms, some Portions of it rarified into Air, others sublimated into Fire, and the rest changed into Earth and Water, the Elements should after all this surrender back their Spoils, and the several Parts, after such a Dispersion, should travel from all the four Quarters of the World to meet together, and come to a mutual interview of one another, in one and the same individual Body again? That God should summon a Part out of this Fish, that Fowl, that Beast, that Tree, and remand it to its former Place, to unite into a new Combination for the rebuilding of a fallen Edifice, and restoring an old, broken, demolished molished Carcass to itself once more? So that, by such a continual Circulation of Life and Death following upon one another, the Grave should not become so much a Conclusion, as the Interruption; not the Period, but the Parenthesis of our Lives; a short Interval between the Present and the Future, and only a Passage to convey us from one Life to another? These Things, we must confess, are both difficult in the Notion, and hard to our Belief. For though, indeed, the Word of Truth has declared, that all Flesh is Grass, and Man but as the Flower of the Field; yet the Apprehensions of Sense will hardly be brought to acknowledge, that he therefore grows upon his own Grave, or springs afresh out of the Ground. For can the Jaws of Death relent? Or the Grave (of all Things) make Restitution? Can Filth and Rottennes be the Preparatives to Glory? And Dust, and Ashes, the Seed-Plots of Immortality? Is the Sepulcher a Place to dress ourselves in for Heaven, the Attiring Room for Corruption to put on Incorruption, and to fit us for the Beatifick Vision? These are Paradoxes, which Nature cannot well digest; Mysteries, which it cannot fathom; being all of them such, as the common, universal Observation of the World is wholly a Stranger to.

And thus much for the first Cause, which generally keeps Men from a Belief of the Resurrection; namely, the great Improbabilities and Unlikelihoods attending it; but this is not all; there being yet another, and a greater Argument alledged against it, and that is in the

2. And next place, the downright Impossibilities charged upon it. And this from the seemingly unanswerable Contradictions and Absurdities implied in it; and (as some think) unavoidably consequent upon it. Of which, the chief, and most hardly reconcilable to the Discourses of Humane Reason, is founded in, and derivable from, the continual Transmutation of one thing into another. For how extravagant soever the forementioned Pythagorean Hypothesis of the Transmigration, or Metempsychosis of one Soul into several Bodies, may be justly accounted to be; yet the Transmutation of one Body into another, ought not to be accounted so. For the Parts of a Body, we know, are in a continual Flux, and the Decays of Nature are repaired by the daily Substitution of new Matter derived from our Nutriment; and when, at length, this Body comes to be dissolved by Death, it soon after returns to Earth; and that Earth is animated into Grass, and that Grass turned into the Substance of the Beast which eats it, and that Beast becomes Food to Man, and so, by a long Percolation, is converted into his Flesh and Substance. So that such Matter or Substance, which was once an Integral Part of this Man's Body, perhaps twenty Years after his Death, by this Round or Circle of perpetual Transmutation, comes to be an Integral Part of another Man's. Now, if there be a Resurrection, and every Man shall be restored with his own Numerical Body, perfect and complete, we may propose our Doubt in those Words of the Sadducees to our Saviour, in Math. xxii. 28. concerning the Woman who had been married to several Husbands successively: To which of them shall she belong at the last Day? for all of them had her. So may it be said of such a Portion of Matter or Substance, which, by continual Change, has been an Integral Part of several Bodies: To which of these Bodies shall it be restored at the Resurrection? For having successively belonged to each of them, either our Bodies must not rise entire, or the same

Portion of Substance and Matter must be a Part of several distinct Bodies, and consequently, be in several distinct Places at the same time, which is manifestly impossible.

Now the Foundation of this Argument, taken from the Vicissitude, and mutual Change of Things into one another, is clear from obvious, and universally uncontested Experience; and being so, the Restitution of every Soul to its own respective Body, and to every Integral Part of it, is a Thing to which all Principles of Natural Reason seem a Contradiction; and by Consequence, (if so) not within the Power of Omnipotence to effect. I say, it seems so; and I will not presume to say more.

The consideration of which drove the Socinians, those known Enemies to Natural, as well as Revealed Religion, (whatsoever they pretend in contradiction to what they assert, in behalf of both) together with some others, peremptorily to deny, that Men shall be raised with the same Numerical Bodies, which they had in this world, but with another, which for its æthereal, refined Substance, they say, is, by S. Paul, termed a Spiritual Body, 1 Cor. xv. 14. And being

being here pressed with the very literal Signification of the Word Resurrection; which implies a repeated Existence of the same Thing, they will have it here used only by a kind of Metaphor, viz. That, because in Death, a Man seems to the Perception and View of Sense utterly to perish, and cease to be, therefore his Restitution seems to be a Sort of Resurrection. And as for those Greek Words 'Αναστήναι and 'Εγείρειν, they endeavour to shew, by other like Places of Scripture, that they signify no more than the bare Suscitation, raising or giving Being to a Thing, without its having fallen or perished before. As for Instance, in Matth. xxii. 24. 'Αναστήσει τὸ σπέρμα τῷ ἀδελφῷ, he shall raise up Seed to his Brother. And in Rom. ix. 17. God says of Pharaoh, διατὸ ἐξήγειρά σε for this Cause have I raised thee up. Whereas, neither of these can be supposed to have perished before that Raising. From whence, and some other such like Places, they conclude, that these Words applied to the present Case, import at most the bare Restauration of the Man; and that not necessarily by restoring his Soul to its old Body, but by joining it to a new; accounted indeed the same to all real Intents and Purposes of Use, though not by formal Identity; they still affirming, nevertheless, the Man thus raised, and with his new Body, to be the same Person; forasmuch, as (they say) it is the Soul or Spirit which makes the Man, and is the proper Principle which gives the Individuation. This was their Opinion.

And thus I have done with the first of the three Propositions drawn from the Words, viz. The exceeding great Difficulty of Mens believing a Resurrection. And that, both by proving that actually it is so, from the most authentick Examples alledgeable in the Case, and by assigning withal the Reasons and Causes why it comes to be so: I proceed now to the II. Proposition, viz. To shew, that notwithstanding this Difficulty, there is yet sufficient Reason, and solid Ground for the Belief of it.

And this I shall endeavour to do, both by answering the foregoing Objections brought against the Resurrection; and withal, offering something, by way of Argument, for the positive Proof of it.

I. Now for the first of these. I shew, that the Resurrection was argued against upon two distinct Heads, viz. The Improbabilities attending it, and the Impossibilities charged upon it. And (I.) Briefly,

(1.) Briefly, as to the Objection from the Improbabilities said to attend it, and to keep Men off from the Belief of it; besides that the said Objection runs in a very loose and popular, rather than in a close and argumentative way, and looks more like Harangue than Reasoning, (though yet the best that the Thing will bear) we are to observe yet farther, that not every strange and unusual Event ought always, and under all Circumstances, to be accounted improbable. For where a sufficient Cause of any Thing or Event may be assigned, though above, and beyond the common Course of Natural Causes, I cannot reckon that Event or Thing properly and strictly improbable. Forasmuch, as it is no ways improbable, that the Supreme Agent and Governor of all Things should, for some great End or Purpose, sometimes step out of the ordinary Road of his Providence, (as undoubtedly he often does) and of which there are several Instances upon Record, both in sacred and prophane Story, relating what strange things have happened in the World, which could not rationally be ascribed to any other, but the super-natural Workings of a Divine Power. Nevertheless, admitting, but not granting the fore-alledged Improbabilities of a Resurrection; yet this does not at all affect the Point now in Dispute before us, which turns not properly upon the Probability, but the Possibility of the Thing here discoursed of. And where there is a Possibility on the one side, answered by an Omnipotence on the other, there can be no Ground to question an Effect commensurate to both. For a Resurrection being allowed possible, though never so improbable, still it is in the Number of those Things which an infinite Power can do; and upon this Account we find, that there is a much higher Pitch of Infidelity, which stops not here, but goes so far on, as to deny the very Possibility of it too: And this brings me to the Examination of the

(2.) Objection produced against this Article of the Resurrection, from the utter Impossibility thereof, (as the Objectors pretend) and that Impossibility (as we have shewn) founded upon the continual Transmutation of one Body into another. This, I say, was the Argument; and it seems to me to press the hardest upon the Resurrection of the same Numerical Body, and to be the most difficult to be solved and answered, of any other whatsoever. For as for those, commonly

drawn from the seeming Impossibility of bringing together such an innumerable Multitude of minute Particles, as from a Body once dissolved must needs be scattered all the World over into the several Elements of Fire, Air, Water, and Earth, and re-uniting them all together at the last Day: I cannot, I say, find any thing in all this either hard or puzzling, and much less contrary to Natural Reason to believe, if we do but acknowledge an Omniscience in the Agent, who is to do this great thing, joined with an Omnipotence in the same. For, by the first of these two Perfections, he cannot but know where all, and every one of the said Particles of the Body are lodged and disposed of; and, by the latter, he must be no less able to bring them from all Parts and Places of the Universe, though never so vastly distant from one another, and join them again together in the Restitution of the said Body. Nothing being difficult, either for Omniscience to know, or for Omnipotence to do; but when the Thing to be done is, in the Nature of it, impossible; as the fore-alledged Argument would infer the Resurrection to be.

To which therefore I answer, that the Proposition or Assertion, upon which the said

Argument is grounded, is neither evident nor certain; and that we have no Assurance, that the Transmutation of an humane Body, into other animated Bodies after its Dissolution, is total, and extends to all the Parts thereof; but that there may be a considerable Portion of Matter in every Man's Body, (for of such only we now dispute) which never passes by Transmutation into any other animated Body, but sinks into, and rests in the common Mass of Matter, contained in the four Elements, (according to the respective Nature of each particular Element wherein it is lodged) and there continues unchanged, by any new Animation, till the last Day. But what these particular Parts are, which admit of no such farther Change, and what Quantity of corporeal Substance, or Matter they make or amount to, I suppose, is known only to God himself, the great Disposer and Governor, as well as Maker and Governor of the World.

And whereas it is said in the Objection, that such a continual Transmutation, as is here supposed, is evident from a general, constant, uncontestable Experience; I deny, that the just Measures, Bounds, and Compass of this Transmutation can be exactly known by, or evident to common Experience; forasmuch as it falls not under the Cognizance of the outward Senses; and yet it is only that, and the repeated Observations made thereby, which Experience is, or can be founded upon. For who can assure himself, or any one else, upon his own Personal Sight, Hearing, or the Report of any other of his Senses, that the whole Matter of a dissolved Body passes successively into other living Bodies? (though a great Portion of it may, and without question does;) and if, on the other side, he cannot, upon his own Personal Observation, give a full and exact Account of this, can he pretend to tell how, and where the Providence of God has disposed of the remaining Part of the said dissolved Body, which has not undergone any such Change? This, I say, is not to be known by us, either by any Observation of Sense, or Discourse of Reason founded thereupon, and I know of no Revelation to adjust the Matter. So that, although it should be supposed true, (which we do by no means grant to be so) that in the Dissolution of every Humane Body, the whole Mass, and every Part of the said Body, underwent such an entire Transmutation, as we have been speaking of; yet, since this cannot certainly be known, it cannot come into Argumentation, as a Proof of that which it is alledged for; unless we would prove an Ignotum per æquè ignotum; which being grossly illogical, and a mere Petitio Principii, can conclude nothing, nor at all affect the Subject in Dispute, one way or other: Forasmuch, as in every Demonstration of the highest Sort, the Principles thereof ought to be evident, as well as certain.

The Sum of all therefore is this; That every Humane Body, upon its Dissolution, sinks by Degrees into the Elementary Mass of Matter; whereof a great Part passes by several Animations into other Bodies; and a great Part likewise remains in the same Elementary Mass, without undergoing any farther Change. To which reserved Portion, at the last Day, the Soul as the prime, individuating Principle, and the said reserved Portion of Matter, as an essential and radical Part of the Individuation, together with a sufficient Supply of more Matter (if requisite) from the general Mass, shall, by the Almighty Power of God joining all those together, make up and restore the same Individual Person: And this cuts off all Necessity of

of holding, that what was once an Integral Part of one Body, should, at the same time, become an Integral Part of another, which, 'tis confessed, for the Reason before given, would make the Restitution of the same Numerical Portion of Matter to both Bodies, utterly impossible.

But if it be here replied, that our Assertion of a reserved Portion of Matter never passing into other animated Bodies by any farther Transmutation, (albeit a considerable Portion of the same dissolved Body be allowed so to do) is a thing merely gratis dictum; and that we have not yet positively proved the same: My Answer is, that in the present Case, there is no Necessity of proving, that it is actually so; but it is sufficient to our Purpose, that the Contrary cannot be proved, and that nothing hinders, but that it may be so; the Thing being in itself possible: And if that be granted, then the Argument, founded upon the supposed Impossibility of it, comes to Nothing. Forasmuch as being possible, it falls within the Compass of God's Omnipotence, which is the great Attribute to be employed in this Case. And this effectually overthrows the whole Force of the Objection.

But

But if it be farther argued, that the great Addition of Matter to be made, at the last Day out of the common Mass, to those Remainders of Matter, which (having belonged to the same Man's Body formerly) are then to be completed into a perfect Body again, seems inconsistent with the Numerical Identity of the Body which was before, and that which shall be afterwards at the Resurrection. I answer, that this is no more inconsistent with the Numerical Identity thereof, than the Addition of so great a Quantity of new Matter, as comes to be made to a Man's Body, by a continual Augmentation of all the Parts of it, from his Birth to his full Stature, makes his Body numerically another at his grown Age, from that which the same Person had while he was yet an Infant. In both which Ages, nevertheless, the Body is still reckoned but one and the same in Number, though in Disparity of Bulk and Substance, twenty to one greater in the latter than in the former. Accordingly, suppose we farther, that only so much Matter as has still continued in our Bodies, from our coming into the World, to our going out of it shall be re-united to our Soul at the Resurrection, even that may, and will be sufficient

ficient to constitute our glorified Body in a real, numerical Identity with that Body, which the Soul was in before, so as, upon all Accounts, to be still the same Body, though in those so very different States and Conditions.

And therefore, the Opinion of the Soci-nians, viz. That the Soul, at the Resurrection, shall be cloathed with another and quite different Body, from what it had in this Life, (whether of Æther, or some such like sublimated Matter) moved thereto by the forementioned Objections, and the like, ought not to be admitted: It being contrary to Reason, and all sound Philosophy, that the Soul successively united to two entirely distinct Bodies, should make but one and the same Numerical Person: Since though the Soul be indeed the prime and chief Principle of the Individuation of the Person, yet it is not the sole and adequate Principle thereof; but the Soul, joined with the Body, makes the adequate, individuating Principle of the Person. Nor will any true Philosophy allow, that the Body was ever intended for the mere Garment of the Soul, but for an essential, constituent Part of the Man, as really as the Soul itself: And the Difference of an

an Essential Half in any Composition, will be sure to make an Essential Difference in the whole Compound. Nor is this Socinian Assertion more contrary to the Principles of Philosophy, than to the express Words of Scripture; which are not more positive in affirming a Resurrection, than in declaring a Resurrection of the same Numerical Person. And whereas, they say, that they grant, that the same Numerical Person shall rise again, though not the same Body, (the Soul, as they contend, still individuating any Body which it shall be cloathed with) we have already shewn, on the contrary, that the Person cannot be numerically the same, when the Body is not so too; since the Soul is not the sole Principle of Personal Individuation, though the chief; besides that it seems very odd, and no ways agreeable to the common Sentiments of Reason, to say, that any thing rises again, which had never perished nor fallen before, as it is certain that the Body, which these Men suppose shall be united to the Soul at the last Day, never did. But to elude the Force of this Argument, the Socinians pretend, that the Words, whereby we would infer a Resurrection of the same Body, to wit, ἀναστῆναι, ἐγείρειν, and ἐγείρεσθαι, &c.

infer no such thing in the several Texts from whence they are alledged; but only import a bare Sufcitation, or Raising up of a thing, without any Necessity of supposing it to have perished before, as being often applied to things entirely produced De Novo. But the Answer to this, is not difficult, viz. That the Point now before us is not wholly determinable from the bare Grammatical Use of these Words; (according to which we deny not, but that they sometimes import a mere Sufcitation or Production of a thing, without supposing any precedent Destruction of the same;) but the Sense of these Words must be sometimes also determined, by the particular State and Circumstance of the Objects, to which they are applied; as when they are applied to, and used about things bereaved of their former Existence; (as Persons dead, and departed this Life, manifestly are) and in such a Case, whensoever the Words ἀναστῆναι, ἐγείρειν, and ἐγείρασθαι come to be so applied, I affirm, that they can, with no tolerable Accord to common Sense and Reason, be allowed to signify any thing else, but the Repetition or Restitution of Lost-Existence, or (in other Words) the Re-Sufcitation of that which had perished before.

And

And thus much in answer to the Objection brought to prove the Impossibility of a Resurrection of the same Numerical Body founded upon the continual Transmutation of one Body into another. The Sum of all amounting to this, viz. That if the Transmutation of Humane Bodies after Death, into other animate Bodies successively, be total, the Objection, founded upon such a Transmutation, is not easy to be avoided; and if, on the other side, it be not total, I cannot see how it proves, that the Restitution of the same Numerical Body carries in it any Contradiction, nor consequently any Impossibility at all. For the Point now before us depending chiefly upon the due Stating of the Object of an Infinite Power; if the Thing in Dispute be but possible, it is sufficient to overthrow any Argument that would pretend to prove, that an Omnipotence cannot effect it. Which Consideration having been thus offered by us, for the clearing of the fore-cited Objection, we shall now proceed in the

2. Place, to produce something (as we promised) by way of positive Proof for the evincing of a Resurrection, notwithstanding all the Difficulties and Repugnancies which seem to attend it. And here, since this is a

Point

Point of Religion, knowable only by Revelation, it cannot be positively proved, or made out to us any other way, than by Revelation, that is to say, by what God has declared in his written Word concerning it. For Natural Reason and Philosophy will afford us but little Assistance in a Case so extremely above both. Accordingly, since Revelation is our only competent Guide in this Matter, the Natural Method, I conceive, for us to proceed by in our Discourses thereupon, must be this, viz. That whereas the Objection is, that the Resurrection of the same Numerical Body implies in it a Contradiction, and therefore cannot possibly be, even by the Divine Power itself; the proper Answer to this ought to be by an Inversion of the same Terms after this manner, viz. That God has declared, that he will, and therefore can raise the same Numerical Body at the last Day. So that the Sum of the whole Matter turns upon this Point; to wit, whether that which we judge to be, or not to be a Contradiction, ought to measure the Extent of the Divine Power; or, on the other side, the Divine Power to determine what is, or is not to be accounted by us a Contradiction. And the Difficulty on either side seems not Inconsiderable. For if we take the first of these Methods, this Inconveniency will attend it; that the Measure we make use of, is always short of the Thing we apply it to; as a Finite must needs be short of an Infinite: And sometimes also false, and thereby not only short of it, but moreover disagreeable to it; it being very possible, (because indeed very frequent) that the Mind of Man, even with its utmost Sagacity, may be mistaken, and judge that to imply a Contradiction, which really does not so. But, on the other hand, if we make the Divine Power the Measure, whereby we ought to judge what is, or what is not a Contradiction, we make that a Measure which we do not thoroughly understand or comprehend; and that is contrary to the very Nature and Notion of a Measure; forasmuch as that by which we would understand another thing, ought to be first understood itself. But how shall we be able to understand the Extent of an infinite Power, so as to know certainly how far it can go, and where it must stop, and can go no farther? As if we should argue thus: This or that implies in it no Contradiction, because God, by his Divine Power, can effect, it, I think the Inference very good: But for all that, it may be reply'd, how do you know what an Infinite or Divine Power can or cannot do? Certain it is, that it cannot destroy itself, or put an End to its own Being; and possibly there may be some other Things (unknown to us) which are likewise under an Incapacity of being done by it. And how then shall we govern our Speculations in this arduous and perplexing Point? For my own part, I should think it not only the Safest, but in all respects the most Rational Way, in any Doubtful Case, where the Power of Almighty God is concerned, to ascribe as much to him, as his Divine Nature and Attributes suffer us to do. That is to say, that we rather prescribe to our Reason from his Power, than to his Power from any Rule or Maxim taken up by our Reason. And since there is a Necessity of some Rule or other to proceed by, in forming a Judgment of God's Power, no less than of his other Perfections; let God's Word or Revelation, (in the Name of all that pretends to be sensible or rational) founded upon his infallible Knowledge of whatsoever he says or reveals, (and confirmed by his essential Veracity inseparably attending

it) be that great Rule for us to judge by : For a better (I am sure) can never be assigned, nor a safer rely'd upon. And accordingly, when our Saviour was to answer the Sadducees, disputing upon this very Subject, the Resurrection; He argues not from any Topick of Common Reason, or Natural Philosophy, but wholly from the Power of God, as declared by the Word of God. Do ye not therefore err, (says he) Mark xii. 24. because ye know not the Scriptures, neither the Power of God? Or, in other Words, the Power of God, as declared in Scripture? Our Saviour went no farther with them, as knowing this to have been home to the Point, and sufficient for their Conviction. And upon the same Account, those remarkable Passages in the Evangelists cannot but be of mighty Weight in the present Case: As that particularly in Mat. xix. 26. and in Mark x. 27. In both which it is plainly and positively affirmed, that with God all Things are possible. and yet more particularly in Luke xviii. 27. where Christ, speaking of some Things accounted with Men impossible, tells us, that the Things impossible with Men, were possible with God. The Antithesis, we see here, is clear and full enough; and yet even with Men nothing uses to be accounted impossible, but what is judged by them one way or other to imply in it a Contradiction; and if so, it is evident, that the Divine Power may extend to some Things, which, in the Judgments of Men, pass for Contradictions; and consequently, that what according to their Judgments implies in it a Contradiction, cannot be always a just Measure of what is impossible for God to do. Nevertheless, in order to the better Understanding of this Matter, I conceive it may not be amiss to distinguish here of two Sorts of Contradictions.

(1.) Such as appear immediately and self-evidently so, from the very Terms of the Proposition, wherein they are expressed. The Predicate implying in it a direct Negation of the Subject, and the Subject mutually of the Predicate; so that, upon the bare Understanding of the Signification of the Terms or Parts of the Proposition, we cannot but apprehend and see the Contradiction couched under them, and the utter Inconsistency of the Idea of one, with the Idea of the other: As if, for instance, we should say, that Light is Darknes, or that Darknes is Light; or that a Piece of Bread of about an Inch in Breadth, and of an Inch in Length, is a Man's Body of about a Yard and an half in Length, and of a proportionable Size in Breadth; each of these Propositions or Assertions would import a direct and evident Negation of the other, upon the very first Sight or Hearing, without any farther Examination of them at all. But then,

(2.) There is another Sort of Contradictions; which may not improperly be termed Consequential. That is to say, such as shew themselves, not by the immediate Self-evidence of the Terms, but by Consequences and Deductions drawn from some known Principle by Humane Ratiocination or Discourse, and the Judgment which Men use to pass upon Things in the Strength and Light thereof. In all which, since Men may be deceived, (nothing being more incident to common Humanity than Mistake) such Contradictions cannot be so far rely'd upon, as to be taken for a perfect and sure Measure of what the Divine Power can, or cannot do. As for instance, if we should say, ' that for ' a Body having been once destroyed, and ' transmuted into other Humane Bodies, or
' some Parts thereof successively to be re' stored again with all the Parts of it com' plete,

plete, and numerically the same, is a Contradiction; it is certain, however, that the Contradiction here charged, does not manifestly appear such from any Evidence of the Terms, but is only gathered by such Consequences and Inferences, as Men form to themselves in their Discourses upon this Subject; and therefore, though possibly a Truth, yet can be no clear Proof, that it is impossible for an Infinite Power to do that, which is here supposed, and said to be a Contradiction. But, on the other side, touching the first Sort of Contradictions mentioned by us, and shewing themselves by the immediate Self-evidence of the Terms; these, no doubt, ought to be looked upon by us out of the Sphere or Compass of Omnipotence itself to effect. Or otherwise, that old, and universally received Rule, viz. That the Divine Power extends to the doing of every thing, not implying in it a Contradiction, must be exploded, and laid aside by us, as utterly useless and fallacious.

But now with reference to the foregoing Distinction of prime and consequential Contradictions; if it should be here asked, whether a Contradiction of the latter Sort be not as really, and as much a Contradiction, as one of the former: I grant, that it is; (there being no Magis and Minus in Contradictions) but nevertheless, not so manifestly, nor so evidently such, nor consequently of so much Force in Argumentation, nor equally capable of having a Conclusion, or Inference drawn from it, as the other is. For we are to observe, that in the Case now before us, a Contradiction is not so much considered for what it is barely in itself, as for its being a Medium to prove something else by it; and for that Reason, we allow not the same conclusive Force (though the same Reality, could it be proved) to a consequential Contradiction, which we allow to a prime and self-evident one, and such as shews itself to the very first View, in and by the bare Terms of the Proposition, wherein it is contained.

Upon the whole Matter therefore, if by true and sound Reasoning I stand assured, that God has affirmed or declared a thing, all Objections against the same, though never so strong, (even Reason itself, upon the strictest Principles of it, being Judge) must of Necessity fall to the Ground. Forasmuch as Reason itself cannot but acknowledge that Men of the best Wit, Learning, and Judgment, ment, may sometimes take that for a Contradiction, which really is not so; but still, on the other side, must own it utterly impossible for a Being infinitely perfect, holy, and true, either to deceive, or be deceived in any thing affirmed or attested by it. And moreover, to carry this Point yet something farther: If a Proposition be once settled upon a solid Bottom, and sufficiently proved, it will and must continue to be so, notwithstanding any After-Arguments, or Objections brought against it, whether we can answer and clear off the said Objections, or no: I say, it lessens not our Obligation to believe such a Proposition one Jot. And if the whole Body of Christians, throughout all Places and Ages, should with one Voice declare, that they could not solve the foregoing Objection urged against the Resurrection, and taken from the continual Transmutation of Bodies into one another, or any other such-like Arguments, it would not abate one Degree of Duty lying upon them, to acknowledge and embrace the said Article, as an indispensable Part of their Christian Faith; nor would they be at all the worse Christians, for not being able to give a Philosophical Account or Solution thereof; so long as, with a non obstante to all such Difficulties, they stedfastly adhered to, and acquiesced in the Article itself. For, so far as I can see, this whole Controversy depends upon, and ought to be determined by the Scriptures, as wholly turning upon these two Points, viz. 1st, Whether a future General Resurrection be affirmed and revealed in the Scriptures, or no? And 2^{dly}, Whether the said Scriptures be the Word of God; And if the Matter stands thus, I am sure, that none can justly pretend to the Name of a Christian, who in the least doubts of the Affirmative in either of these two Points. And consequently, if this Article stands thus proved, all Arguments formed against it, upon the Stock of Reason or Philosophy, come too late to shake it; for they find the thing already fixed and proved; and being so, it cannot, by After-Allegations, be disproved. Since it being also a Proposition wholly founded upon Revelation, and the Authority of the Revelation upon the Authority of the Revealer, all Arguments from any thing else are wholly foreign to the Subject in dispute; and accordingly, ought by no means to be admitted, either as necessary Proofs of it, or so much as competent Objections against it. For whatsoever is contrary to the Word or Affirmation of a Being infinitely knowing, and essentially infallible, let it carry with it never so much Shew of Truth; yet it certainly is, and can be nothing else but Fallacy and Imposture. And upon this one Ground I firmly do, and ought to believe a General Resurrection, though ten thousand Arguments from the Principles of Natural Philosophy could be opposed to it. But may it not then, you will say, upon the same Terms, be here argued, that Jesus Christ (who is God blessed for ever) having expressly said of the Bread in the Holy Sacrament, This is my Body, we ought to believe the said Piece of Bread to be really and substantially his Body, how much soever we may apprehend it to contradict the Principles of Sense, Reason, and Philosophy? To this I answer; That the Words here alledged, as pronounced by our Saviour, are confessedly in the Holy Scripture. But that every thing affirmed by God in Scripture, is there affirmed and intended by him, literally, properly, and not figuratively; this I utterly deny. And since it is agreed to by all, (and even by those, whom in this Matter, we contend with) that many Expressions in Scripture cannot be understood

but by a Figure; and since, moreover, I grant and assert, that every thing affirmed by God in Holy Scripture ought to be believed in that Sense only, in which it is so affirmed; I will venture to allow the Persons, who are for the literal Sense of those particular Words against the figurative, till Dooms-Day, to prove that the literal Sense only ought to take Place here, and the figurative to be exploded, and set aside; and if they can but prove this, I shall not fail (as I said before) to believe and assent to the Thing so proved, whatsoever that, which the World calls Common Reason and Philosophy, shall, or can suggest, and offer to the contrary.

And this, I hope, may suffice to have been spoken upon the second Proposition assigned for the Prosecution of this Subject, namely, That notwithstanding all the Difficulties and Objections alledged against the Article of a General Resurrection, there is yet sufficient Reason, and solid Ground for the Belief of it. From whence we should now proceed to treat of the third and last Proposition:

III. ‘ That a Sufficiency of Reason being ‘ thus given for the Belief of the said Article,
 ‘ all the Difficulties, and seeming Repugnancies to Reason, which it is charged with, do ‘ exceed-

‘ exceedingly enhance the Worth, Value, and ‘ Excellency of that Belief.

But this, as I reckon, having been, in Effect, done by us already; and the whole Matter set in a full View, partly by clearing off the Objections, pretended to be brought against it, from Natural Reason, in the two foregoing Propositions; and partly by establishing the Proof thereof, upon the sure Basis of those three great Attributes of God, his Omniscience, his Omnipotence, and his Essential Veracity, all of them employed to warrant and engage our Assent to it: We shall now at length come to consider the same more particularly in some of the Consequences deducible from it. Such as are these Two that follow:

1. We collect from hence the utter Insufficiency of bare Natural Religion, to answer the proper Ends and Purposes which God intended Religion for. And,

2. We infer from hence also, the Diabolical Impiety of the Socinian Opinions; and particularly of those relating to the Resurrection. And here,

1. For the first of these, the Insufficiency of Natural Religion, to answer the proper Ends which Religion was designed for. This is most certain, that Natural Religion exceeds not the Compass of Natural Reason; it neither looks higher, nor reaches farther, but both of them are commensurate to one another; and it is every whit as certain, that the Soul of Man being the proper Seat and Subject of Religion, must needs be allowed to be immortal; and being withall both endued with, and acted by the Affections of Hope and Fear, that it must be supply'd with Objects proper and adequate to both, which yet nothing under an eternal Happiness with respect to the one, and an eternal Misery with reference to the other, together with a General Resurrection from the Dead, to render Men capable of either, can possibly be. So that it is manifest from the very Nature and Essentials of Religion, supposing it perfect, that the Particulars now alledged by us, necessarily do, and must come up to the Utmost of what they stand alledged for. But then, on the other hand, can mere Natural Reason of itself, by full Evidence and Strength of Argument, convince us of any of the aforesaid Particulars? As for instance, can it demonstrate, that the Soul is immortal? Or can it certainly prove, that there is a Future and Eternal State of Happiness, or of Misery

in another Life? And that, in order to it, there shall be a Resurrection of their mortal Bodies after an utter Dissolution of them into Dust and Ashes? No, there is nothing in bare Reason, that can so much as pretend to evince demonstratively any of these Doctrines or Assertions. And what then can Natural Religion do or say in the Case? For where the former is at a stand, the latter can go no farther; so that there is an absolute Necessity, if we would have any more certain Knowledge of these Matters, to fetch it from Revelation. Forasmuch as the great Apostle himself assures us, in 1 Cor. ii. 9. That Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, nor has it entered into the Heart of Man to conceive, what Things God has prepared for those that love him; nor consequently, (by a Parity of Reason) what Miseries he has prepared for those that hate him. And if both of them are a perfect Non-plus, and Baffle to all Humane Understanding; is it possible for Natural Reason to comprehend what the Heart of Man cannot conceive? Nothing certainly can be a grosser Contradiction, and that in the very Terms of it, than such an Assertion. But some perhaps may here say, that though Natural Reason, by its own Strength and

Light,

Light, cannot give us a clear and particular Account, what these Things are; yet it may however be able to discover to us, that really there are such Things. But in answer to this also, the same Apostle tells us, in 2 Tim. i. 10. That it was our Saviour Christ who brought Life and Immortality to Light through the Gospel: That is to say, cleared off all Doubts about the immortal State and Being of the Soul, the everlasting Felicities of the Righteous, and the never-dying Worm, and Torments of the Wicked in another World. Touching all which, I affirm, that nothing but Divine Revelation could give any solid Satisfaction to the Minds of Men, either as to the quid sit, or the quod sit of these Things; that is to say, either by declaring the Nature of them, what they are; or by proving the Existence and Being of them, that they are; besides that the very Expression of bringing a Thing to Light, must needs import its being hidden or undiscovered (at least to any considerable Purpose) before. But some possibly may here farther object, that the Heathens could not but, long before the Times of our Saviour, have had a competent Knowledge of these Matters. For did they not, by what they

discourfed of the Elyfian Fields, intend thereby to exprefs the Future Blessednefs of pious and virtuous Perfons? And by what they taught of Styx, Acheron, and Cocytus, and the Torments of Prometheus, Ixion, and other famous Criminals, design likewise to fet forth to us the Future Miferies of the Wicked and Flagitious? No doubt, they meant fo: But ftill all this was built upon fuch weak and fabulous Grounds, that the wifer Sort of them did but defpife and laugh at all thefe Things. So that Juvenal fpeaking of thefe Matters, tells us in plain Terms, vix pueri credunt, that Children fcarce believed them; though furely, if any thing could difpofe the Mind of Men to an extravagant Credulity, one would think, that the Age and State of Childhood fhould. And then, as for the Immortality of the Soul, whatfoever Plato and other Philofophers might argue in behalf thereof, yet I am abundantly fatisfied, that neither Plato, nor all of them together, have been able to argue more clofe and home to this Subject, than thofe Wits, who have lived in the Ages after them, have done. And yet, upon the Refult of all, I do not find, that any thing hitherto has been fo clearly and irrefragably proved proved for the Immortality of it; but that the most that can be done upon this Argument, is, that the Soul cannot be proved by any Principle of Natural Reason to be mortal. And that (though it does not prove so much as it should do) is yet, I think, no inconsiderable Point or Step gained: But after all, admitting the Proof hereof to be as full and convincing as we could wish, then what can Natural Reason say to a General Resurrection from the Dead, that main Article which we are now insisting upon? Why, truly nothing at all: And if this be the utmost, which is to be had from Natural Reason upon this Point, I am sure, there is no more to be had from Natural Religion; which (to make the very best and most of it) is nothing but Reason, not assisted by Revelation. But,

2. The other Thing, which we shall infer from the foregoing Particulars, is, the horrible Impiety of the Socinian Opinions; and particularly of those relating to the Resurrection, and the State of Mens Souls after Death. The Socinians, who have done their Utmost to overthrow the Credenda of Christianity, are not for stopping there, but for giving as great a Blow to the Agenda of it too, by subverting (if possible) those Principles which are to support the Practice of it. Amongst which, I reckon one of the chief to be, the Belief of those eternal Torments awarded by God to Persons dying in a State of Sin and Impenitence, one of the most powerful Checks to Sin, doubtless, of any that Religion affords: Forasmuch as where there is one with-held from Sin, by the Hopes of those eternal Joys promised in the Scripture; I dare affirm, that there are an hundred at least (if not more) kept from it by the Fears of eternal Torments. And the Reason of this is, because those Things, by which the Joys of Heaven are represented to us, do by no means make so quick and lively an Impression upon Mens Minds, as those, by which the Torments of Hell, as they are described to us, are found to do. I am far, I confess, from affirming, that this ought to be so; but as the State of Mankind now generally is, there are but too many, and too manifest Proofs, that actually it is so. And I do not in the least question, but that there are Millions, who would readily part with all their Hopes of the Future Felicities, which the Scripture promises them, upon Condition, that they might be secured from the eternal Torments which it threatens. * And

* They deny the Torments of Hell, and give this Reason for it. Quòd absurdum sit Deum irasci in æternum, & peccata creaturarum finita pœnis infinitis multare, præsertim cum nulla hinc ipsius gloria illustretur. Compendiolum Doctrina Ecclesiarum in Poloniâ. Likewise Ernestus Sonnerus, a noted Socinian, has wrote a just Treatise, with this Title prefix'd to it, Demonstratio Theologica & Philosophica, Quòd æterna impiorum supplicia non arguant Dei justitiam, sed injustitiam. And if they be unjust, we may be sure, (as Dr. Tillotson in his Sermon on Matth. xxv. 46. learnedly observes) that there shall be no such Thing. And so shew farther, how industrious these Factors for the Devil are, to rid Mens Minds of the Grand Restraints of Sin, the Belief of eternal Torments, he sets down at the end of his Demonstration (as he calls it) several Places of Scripture, where the Words [Eternal] and [for ever] signify not an infinite or everlasting, but only a finite, though indefinite Duration. Likewise Diodorus Camphuyten, one of the same Tribe, with a frontless Impudence, in a certain Epistle of his, requires such as should read it, Negare & ridere damnatorum pœnas, & cruciatus æternos; That is, not only to deny, but also to laugh at the eternal Torments, and Punishments of the Damned. And so make yet surer Work, (if possible) Socinus denies the Soul even a Capacity of being tormented after a Man's Death. Tantùm id mihi videtur statui posse, post hanc vitam, animam, sive animum hominis non ita per se subsistere, ut præmia ulla pœnæ sive sentiat, vel etiam ista sentiendi sit Capax, quæ mea firma Opinio, &c. Socinus in quintâ Epistolâ ad Volkeium. And elsewhere, Homo, sive anima humana nihil cum immortalitate habet commune. In short, I am so far from accounting the Authors or Owners of such horrid Assertions to be really Christians, that I account them really the worst of Men, if Prophanes, Blasphemy and the letting loose all Sorts of Wickedness upon the World can make them so. For according to these Grand Agents and Apostles of Satan, wicked Men, no less than the very Brutes themselves, (whose Spirits also they affirm to return to God, as well as those of the other) being once dead, shall rise no more. And if they can but persuade Men, That they shall die like Beasts, there is no question to be made, but that most of them will be quickly brought to live like Beasts too.

therefore, what a mighty Encouragement must the Denial of eternal Punishments needs be to all Sorts of Wickedness in the Lives of Men? And what shall be able to restrain the Progress and Rage of it, in the Course of the World, when Sinners shall be told, that after all the Villanies committed by them here, nothing is to be expected or feared by them, when they have quitted this Life, but a total Annihilation or Extinction of their Persons, together with an endless Continuance under the said Estate? And is not this, think we, a Sort of eternal Punishment according to the Sinner's own Hearts Desire? For since it so utterly bereaves him of all Sense, that he can feel nothing hereafter, let him alone to fear as little here. And as for the Resurrection from the Dead, the same Men generally deny, that the Wicked shall have any at all; it being (as they affirm) intended by God for a peculiar Favour and Privilege to the Godly, who alone are to be the Sons of the Resurrection. But then, if these Men find themselves pinched by such Scriptures, as that of the xxvth of St. Matthew, and this of my Text, so expressly declaring a Resurrection, both of the Just and the Unjust; in this Case, some of them have another Assertion to fly to; namely, that the Wicked shall indeed be raised again at the last Day; but immediately after such a Resuscitation, shall be annihilated and destroyed for ever: An Assertion so intolerably Absurd, and so manifestly a Scoff upon Religion, that none but an Atheist or Socinian (another Word for the same thing) could have been so prophane, as even to think of it, or so impudent, as to own or declare it. In fine, such is the diabolical Impiety, and the mischievous Influence of the foregoing Opinions upon the Practices of Mankind, and consequently upon the Peace and Welfare of Societies and Governments, (all depending upon the said Practices) that all sober and pious Minds do even groan under the very Thoughts of such foul Invasions upon Religion; and cannot but wonder, even to Amazement, that the Maintainers of such Tenets were not long since delivered over into the Hands of Civil Justice, to receive condign Punishment by the Sentence of the Judge; as likewise, that those who deny the Divinity and Satisfaction of our Saviour, explode Original Sin, and revive several of the old condemned Blasphemies, have not long before this been brought under the Censures of the Church in Convocation. But if, on the contrary, the Sheltering of some such rotten Church-men, as well as several others, from the Dint of Ecclesiastical Authority, was one great Cause of that so long and unaccountable Omission of those sacred and most useful Assemblies, for many Years together, since the Restauration, (as many wise and good Men shrewdly suspect it was) is it not just with God, and may it not (for ought we know) actually provoke him to deprive us even of the Christian Religion itself? For assuredly, that lewd, scandalous, and ungrateful Usage, which it has (of late Years especially) found from some of the highest Pretenders to it amongst us, has not only deserv'd, but upon too great Grounds of Reason, seems also to prognosticate and fore-bode, and even cry out for no less a Judgment upon the Nation. But howsoever God (whose Ways are unsearchable) shall think fit to dispose of, and deal with us, let us not vainly flatter ourselves; but as we have been hitherto proving the Certainty of a General Resurrection, so let us still remember, that the Day of the Resurrection will be as certainly a Day of Retribution too. A Day, in which the proudest and most exalted Hypocrite shall be brought low enough, and even the lowest Hypocrites much lower than they desire to be. A Day, in which the meanest and most abject (if sincere) Member of our Excellent (how much soever struck at and maligned) Church, shall be raised to a most happy and glorious Condition. Though, whether or no the Church itself (God bless it) be, in the mean time, in so flourishing an Estate, (as some would persuade us it is) I shall not, I must not presume to determine.

Now to God, the great Judge and Rewarder of Men, according to the Vileness of their Principles, as well as the Wickedness of their Practices, be rendered and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

—To the Acknowledgment of the Mystery of God, and of the Father, and of Christ.

Εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν τῆ μυστηρίου τῆ Θεῶ, καὶ Πατρὸς, καὶ τῆ Χριστοῦ.

IN the handling and asserting of the Doctrine of the Trinity, I do not remember any Place so often urged, and so much insisted upon by Divines, as that in 1 Joh.
v. 7. There are Three who bear Record in Heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these Three are One: A

Text fully containing in it the Doctrine of three distinct Divine Persons, in one and the same Blessed and Eternal Godhead; a Doctrine unanimously received by the Catholick Christian Church; and warrant-ed by the Testimony of the most antient, genuine, and unexceptionable Records or Copies of the New Testament, as well as of the most noted of the Fathers concerning it; and that not only as of a single Article, but rather as the Sum Total of our Christian Faith, and not so much a Part or Member, as a full but short Compendium of our Religion. And yet under these high Advan-tages of Credibility, we see what Oppositi-on it met with, both from Antients and Moderns; of the first Sort of which, we have Arius with his infamous Crew lead-ing the Van, by questioning the Text it-self, as if not originally extant in some two or three antient Copies of this E-pistle; and, of the latter Sort, are those innumerable Sects and Sectaries sprung up since; some of them openly denying, and some of them (whose Learning one would have thought might have been better em-ployed) slyly undermining this Grand Fun-damental; and while they seemingly ac-knowledge knowledge the Truth, as it lies in the bare Words of the Text, treacherously giving it up in the Explication.

As for the Socinians, who hold with the Arians, so far as they oppose us, though not in all which the Arians assert themselves, they have a double Refuge. And first with them pretending the Doubtfulness of the Text, they would farther evade it by a new Interpretation of its Sense, affirming, that this Expression [these Three are One] does not of Necessity import an Unity of Nature, but only of Consent: The Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, being therefore said to be one, because they jointly and indivisibly carry on one and the same Design; all of them jointly concurring in the great Work of Man's Salvation.

Thus say they; but if this were indeed so, and if no more than Matter of Consent were here intended, where then (in God's Name) would be the Mystery, which the Universal Christian Church have all along acknowledged to be contained in these Words? For that the Father, the Word, and the Holy Spirit, should thus jointly concur in, and carry on the grand Business of saving Mankind, is a Doctrine expressing in it nothing myste-mysterious, unaccountable, or surpassing Man's Understanding at all.

But farther, if Unity of Consent only were here intended, why in all Reason was it expressed by ἐν εἰσι, that is, they are one Thing, Being, or Nature, and not rather by εἰς τὸ ἐν εἰσι, they agree in One? as in the very next Verse to this, such an Unity of Concurrence in the Spirit, the Water, and the Blood, is expressed by the same Words εἰς τὸ ἐν εἰσι, manifestly importing no Identity, or Unity of Nature, or Being, but only of Agreement in some certain respect or other; and doubtless, in so very near a Neighbourhood and Conjunction of Words, had the Sense been perfectly the same, there can be no imaginable Reason given, why the Apostle should in the very same Case thus have varied the Expression.

But, for yet a farther Assertion of the great Truth now insisted upon, this Text out of the Epistle to the Colossians will as effectually evince the same, as the Place before-mentioned; though perhaps not quite so plainly, nor wholly in the same way; that is to say, it will do it by solid Inference and just Consequence from the Words, though not expressly in the very Words themselves. And accordingly we may consider those Words, Εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν τῆς μυστηρίου τῆς Θεᾶς, καὶ Πατρὸς, καὶ τῆς Χριστοῦ, two different Ways, viz.

1. As the Term τῆς Θεᾶς may be taken personally, as in Scripture sometimes it is, and then it will here signify the Holy Ghost, the Third Person of the Blessed Trinity, tho' not indeed mentioned in this Place in the same Order in which the Three Persons commonly use to be; but the Order, I conceive, may sometimes be less observed, without any Change in, or Detriment to the Article itself. And so this Text out of the Epistle to the Colossians will point out to us the Doctrine of the Ever-Blessed Trinity, as well as that fore-alledged Place, out of St. John, did. But,

2. If the Word τῆς Θεᾶς be here taken essentially, and for the Divine Nature only; then the Particle καὶ will import here properly a Distribution of τῆς Θεᾶς (signifying the Divine Nature) as a Term common to those two, τῆς Πατρὸς, καὶ τῆς Χριστοῦ, as to two particular Persons, distinguish'd by their respective Properties. And so taken, it must be confessed, that the Term τῆς Θεᾶς here will not signify the Person of the Holy Ghost. But granting all this: Are there not, however, ever, Two other Persons in the Divine Nature manifestly signified thereby? Forasmuch as the Godhead, here imported by τὸ θεῶν, is expressly applied both to the Father and the Son, in those Words τὸ μυστηρίον τοῦ θεοῦ, ἢ Πατρός, ἢ τοῦ Χριστοῦ. And that, I am sure, (should it reach no farther) is a full and irrefragable Confutation of the Socinians, the grand and chief Opposers of the Doctrine now insisted upon. For these Men deny not a Plurality of Persons in the Godhead from any Allegation, or Pretence of some peculiar Repugnancy of the Number of Three to the same, more than of any other Number; but because they absolutely deny, that there can be any more Persons in the Godhead, than only One. And consequently, that a Duality, or Binary Number of Persons in it, would, in a Socinian's Account, pass for no less an Absurdity, than even a Trinity itself; the grand Article controverted between us and them.

The Words therefore being thus examined and explained, I shall draw forth the Sense of them into this one Proposition:

That a Plurality of Persons, or Personal Subsistences in the Divine Nature, is a great Mystery, and so to be acknowledged by all who really are, and profess themselves Christians.

The Discussion of which shall lie in these two Things.

I. In shewing, what Conditions are required to denominate a thing properly a Mystery. And,

II. In shewing, that all these Conditions meet in the Article of the Blessed Trinity.

I. And first for the first of these. The Conditions required to constitute and denominate a thing properly a Mystery, are these Three.

1. That the thing so denominated, be in itself really true, and not contrary to Reason.

2. That it be a thing above the Power and Reach of mere Reason to find it out, before it be revealed. And,

3. That being revealed, it be yet very difficult for, if not above finite Reason fully to understand and comprehend it. And here,

1. For the first of these Conditions; A Mystery must be a thing really true, and by no means contrary to Reason. Where let me lay down this Rule or Maxim, as the Ground-Work of all that is to follow; to wit, that as nothing can be an Article of Faith, that is not

not true, so neither can any thing be true; that is irrational. Some indeed lay this as their Foundation, that Men in Matters of Religion are to deny and renounce their Reason; but if so, then let any one declare, why I am bound to embrace the Christian Religion, rather than that of Mahomet, or of any other Impostor; and, I suppose, you will in the first place tell me, because the Christian Religion was revealed and attested by God; whereas others, opposing it, were not so. To which I answer first, that this very thing, that it was thus attested by God, is the greatest Reason for our believing it true in the World; and as convincing, as any Demonstration in the Mathematicks; it being founded upon the essential, unfailing Veracity of God, who can neither deceive, nor be deceived. But, then farther, in the second place, I ask, how I shall come to know, that this is revealed by God? Now here, if you will prove this to me, (it being Matter of Fact) you must have recourse to all those Grounds, upon which Reason uses to believe Matters of Fact, when past; and accordingly shew me, how that all these are to be found for the Divine Revelation of the Christian Religion, and not of any other pretending to oppose or contradict contradict it. And this, I am sure is solid and true Arguing in the Case before us; and being so, what can it amount to less, than a just Demonstration of the thing here intended to be proved? I say, a Demonstration proceeding upon Principles of Moral Certainty; a Certainty full and sufficient, and such, as being denied, must infallibly draw after it as great an Absurdity in reference to Practice, as the Denial of any first Principle can do in Point of Speculation. As for instance, I look upon the unanimous Testimony of a competent Number of sincere, disinterested Eye or Ear-Witnesses; and, which is more, (in the present Case inspired too) all affirming the same thing to be a Ground morally certain, why we should believe that Thing; forasmuch as the Denial of its Certainty would, amongst many other Absurdities, run us upon this great one, that we can have no Assurance, or certain Knowledge of any thing, but what we ourselves have personally seen, heard, or observed with our own Senses; which Assertion, if stuck to, would be as absurd and inconvenient in the Transactions of Common Life, as to deny, that Two and Two make Four in Arithmetick. And in good earnest it will be very hard (if possible) to assign any other sufficient Reason, why our Saviour in Mark xvi. 14. upbraided some with their Unbelief as unexcusable, only for not believing those who had seen him after he was risen.

In short, the ultimate Object of Faith is Divine Revelation, that is, I believe such a thing to be true, because it is revealed by God; but then my Reason must prove to me, that it is revealed; so that, this way, Reason is that, into which all Religion is at last resolved.

And let me add a little farther, that no one Truth can possibly contradict another Truth; for if two Truths might contradict, then two Contradictions might be true. And therefore, if it be true in Christian Religion, that one Nature may subsist in three Persons, the same cannot be false in Reason. Thus much, I confess, that take the Thing abstract from Divine Revelation, there is nothing in Reason able to prove that there is such a Thing; but then, this also is as true, that there is nothing in Reason able to disprove it, and to evince it to be impossible.

But you will say, that for the same thing to be Three, and One, is a Contradiction, and therefore Reason cannot but conclude it impossible.

impossible. I answer, that for a thing to be One in that very respect, in which it is Three, is a Contradiction; but to assert, that that which is One in this respect, may be Three in another, is no Contradiction.

But you will reply, that the single Nature of any Person is uncommunicable to another, as the Essence of Peter is circumscribed within the Person of Peter, and so cannot be communicated to Paul.

In Answer to this, let it be here observed, that this is the constant Fallacy that runs through all the Arguments of the Socinians in this Dispute; and all that they urge against a triple Subsistence of the Divine Nature, is still from Instances taken from created Natures, and applied to the Divine; and because they see this impossible, or, at least, never exemplified in them, they conclude hence, that it must be so also in this.

But this is a gross and apparent Error in Argumentation; it being a mere Transition à Genere ad Genus, which is to conclude the same thing of different Kinds; and because this holds true in things of this Nature, to conclude hence, that therefore the same must be true also in things that are of a clean different Nature; which is a manifest Paralogism.

To all these Arguments therefore, I oppose this one (I think) not irrational Consideration: That it is a thing very agreeable even to the Notions of bare Reason to imagine, that the Divine Nature has a Way of subsisting very different from the Subsistence of any Created Being. For inasmuch as Nature and Subsistence go to the making up of a Person, why may not the Way of their Subsistence be quite as different as their Natures are confessed to be? One Nature being infinite, the other finite. And therefore, though it be necessary in Things created (as no one Instance appears to the contrary) for one single Essence to subsist in one single Person and no more; does this at all prove, that the same must be also necessary in God, whose Nature is wholly different from theirs, and consequently may differ as much in the Manner of his Subsistence, and so may have one and the same Nature diffused into three distinct Persons? This one Consideration (I say) well weighed and applied, will retund the Edge and Dint of all the Socinian Assaults against this great Article: Whom I have still observed to assert boldly, when they conclude weakly; and in all their Arguments to prove nothing more than this, that the greatest Pretenders to, are not always the greatest Masters of Reason.

But here, before I dismiss this Particular, I shall observe this, that for a Man to prove a thing clearly, is to bring it by certain and apparent Consequence, from some Principle in itself known and evident, and granted by all: Otherwise it would not be a Demonstration, but an infinite Progress.

Now this being supposed: In case any one shall so disprove the Trinity, as to shew, that it really contradicts some such Principle of Reason evident in itself, and universally granted by the unprejudiced Apprehensions of Mankind; I should not be afraid to expunge this Article out of my Creed, and to discharge any Man living from a Necessity of believing it. For God cannot enjoin any thing absurd or impossible: But for any Man to assent to two contradictory Propositions, as true, while he perceives them to be contradictory, is the First-born of Impossibilities.

Reason therefore is undeservedly and ignorantly traduced, when it is set up and shot at, as the irreconcilable Enemy of Religion, ligion: It is indeed the very Crown and Privilege of our Nature; a Ray of Divinity sent into a mortal Body: The Star that guides all wise Men to Christ: The Lanthorn that leads the Eye of Faith, and is no more an Enemy to it, than an obedient Hand-Maid to a discreet Mistress. Those indeed, whose Tenets will not bear the Test of it, and whose Ware goes off best in the dark Rooms of Ignorance and Credulity, and whose Faith has as much Cause to dread a Discovery as their Works; these (I say) may decry Reason; and that indeed not without Reason.

For ask such, upon what Grounds they believe the Truth of Christian Religion, whereas others so much oppose it: And here, instead of Rational Inducements, and solid Arguments, we shall have long Harangues of the Kingdom of Jesus Christ, of rolling upon the Promises of the Spirit of Assurance, and the Preciousness of Gospel Dispensations, with many other such-like Words, as shew that they have followed their own Advice to others, and wholly renounced their Reason themselves.

But I cannot think or persuade myself, that God gave us Eyes, only that we may pluck

pluck them out, and brought us into the World with Reason, that being born Men, we might afterwards grow up and improve into Brutes, and become elaborately Irrational. No surely, Reason is both the Gift and Image of God, and every Degree of its Improvement is a farther Degree of Likeness to him. And though I cannot judge it a fit Saying for a dying Christian to make, that Wish of Averroes, Sit anima mea cum Philosophis; yet while he lives, I think no Christian ought to be ashamed to wish, Sit anima mea cum Philosophiâ. And for all these Boastings of new Lights, Inbeamings, and Inspirations; that Man that follows his Reason, both in the Choice and Defence of his Religion, will find himself better led and directed by this one Guide, than by an hundred Directories. And thus much for the first Condition.

2. The second Condition required to denominate a thing properly a Mystery, is, that it be above the Reach of Reason to find it out, and that it be first knowable only by Revelation. This, I suppose, I shall not be called upon to prove, it being a thing clear in itself.

But we have been told by some, that there are some Hints and Traces of the Article of the Trinity to be found in some Heathen Writers, as Trismegistus and Plato, who are said to make Mention of it. To which I answer, first, that if there do occur such Hints of a Trinity in such Writers; yet it follows not hence, that they owed them to the Invention of their own Reason, but received them from others by Tradition, who themselves first had them from Revelation. But, secondly, to the Case in hand; I answer more fully, that it cannot be denied, but that some Christians have endeavoured to defend the Truth imprudently and unwarrantably, by bad Arts, and falsifying of Ancient Writers; and that such Places as speak of the Trinity are spurious, or at least suspicious: As the whole Book that now goes under the Name of Trismegistus, called his Pæmander, may justly be supposed to be.

But that we may a little aid and help out our Apprehensions in conceiving of this great Mystery, let us endeavour to see, whether upon the Grounds and Notions of Reason, we can frame to ourselves any thing that may carry in it some Shadow and Resemblance blance at least of one single, undivided Nature's casting itself into three Subsistences, without receding from its own Unity. And for this Purpose, we may represent to ourselves an infinite Rational Mind, which, considered under the first and original Perfection of Being or Existence, may be called the Father; inasmuch as the Perfection of Existence is the First and Productive of all others. Secondly, in the same infinite Mind may be considered the Perfection of Understanding, as being the first great Perfection that issues from the Perfection of Existence, and so may be called the Son, who also is called $\delta \ \lambda \acute{o} \gamma \omega \varsigma$, the Word, as being the first Emanation of that infinite Mind. And then, thirdly, when that infinite Mind, by its Understanding, reflects upon its own Essential Perfections, there cannot but ensue an Act of Volition and Complacency in those Perfections, arising from such an intellectual Reflection upon them; which may be called the Holy Ghost, who therefore is said to proceed both from the Father and the Son, because there must be not only Existence, but also Understanding, before there can be Love and Volition. Here then, we see, that one and the same Mind is both Being, Understanding, and Willing; and yet we can neither say that Being is Understanding, nor that Understanding is Willing; nor, on the contrary, that Understanding is merely Being, nor that Willing is Understanding. Forasmuch as the proper Natural Conception of one is not the Conception of the other, nor yet commensurate to it. And this I propose, neither as a full Explication, nor, much less, as a just Representation of this great Mystery; but only (as I intimated before, and intend no more now) as some remote and faint Resemblance, or Adumbration thereof. For still this is, and must be acknowledged unconceivably above the Reach and Ken of any Humane Intellect; and as a Depth, in which the tallest Reason may swim, and, if it ventures too far, may chance to be swallowed up too.

Nay, I think, that it was a thing not only locked up from the Researches of Reason, amongst those that were led only by Reason, I mean the Gentiles; but that it was also concealed from, or at best but obscurely known by the Jewish Church. And Peter Galatine assigns a Reason, why God was not pleased to give the Jews any express Revelation of this Mystery; namely, that People's great Stupidity and Grossness of Apprehension, together with their exceeding Prone-ness to Idolatry ; by reason of the former of which, they would have been apt to entertain very uncouth and mistaken Conceptions of the Godhead and the Three Persons, as if they had been three distinct Gods ; and thereupon to have been easily induced to an Idolatrous Worship and Opinion of them ; and therefore, that the Unfolding of this Mystery was reserved till the Days of the Messias, by which time the World should, by a long Increase of Knowledge, grow more and more refined and prepared for the Reception of this so sublime and mysterious an Article.

This was his Reason for God's concealing it from the Jews ; for that God did so, the Old Testament, which is the great Ark and Repository of the Jewish Religion, seems sufficiently to declare ; there being no Text in it, that plainly and expressly holds forth a Trinity of Persons in the Godhead. Several Texts are indeed urged for that Purpose, though (whatever they may allude to) they seem not yet to be of that Force and Evidence, as to infer what some undertake to prove by them. Such as are,

(1.) Those

(1.) Those Words in the first of Genesis, Bara Elohim: Where Elohim signifying God, and being of the Plural Number, is joined with Bara, creavit, a Verb of the Singular. Whence some collect, that the former Word imports a Plurality of Persons, and the latter an Unity of Essence. But others deny that any such peculiar Meaning ought or can be gathered from that, which is indeed no more than an Idiom and Propriety of the Hebrew Language. So that Elohim applied to others besides God, is often joined with a Singular Number.

(2.) Another Place alledged for the same Purpose, is that in Gen. i. 26 Let us make Man, in our own Image, where they say that there is a Consultation amongst many Persons in the Godhead. But to this also it is answered, that the Term Let us make, does not of Necessity imply any Plurality, but may import only the Majesty of the Speaker; Kings and Princes being accustomed to speak of themselves in the Plural Number: As we will, and require you, and it is our Royal Will and Pleasure. This is the common Dialect of Kings, and yet it infers in the Speaker no Plurality; for then surely a King would speak very unlike a Monarch

(3.) There

(3.) There is a third Place also, in Isa. vi. 3. where the threefold Repetition of Holy, Holy, Holy, applied to God, is urged by some to relate distinctly to the three Hypostases of the Godhead. But this is thought by others to have so little of an Argument in it, as scarce to merit any Answer; it being so usual with all Nations and Languages to express any thing vehement or extraordinary, by thrice repeating the Word used by them: Suitable to which, are those Expressions that occur in Classic Authors, as Ter geminis tollit honoribus, and O ter felices, and Illi robur & as triplex circa pectus erat, with infinite the like Instances: In all which, the Manner of Speaking serves only to express the Greatness of the Thing spoke of. So that these, and such like Places of Scripture, carry not in them any such evident Proof of the Trinity, as to persuade us, that the Jewish Church could from hence arrive to any clear Knowledge of this Article. The forementioned Galatine indeed affirms the Talmudists to speak several things concerning it very plainly; and from hence concludes, that in regard the Talmud is a Collection of the several Sayings and Writings of the old Jewish Doctors upon the Old Testament, it must import, that since they

they wrote such things of the Trinity, and the Messias, there was then a Knowledge of these things in the Jewish Church. But I fear the Authority of those Talmudical Writings will weigh so little in this Case, that if the Letter of the Scripture will not otherwise speak a Trinity, but as it is helped out, and expounded by the Talmud, few sober Persons will seek for it there. The only solid Proof, that makes towards the Evi^oction of a Trinity from thence, I conceive to lie in those Texts that prove the Divine Nature of the Messias, whose Coming was then expected by all the Jews. Otherwise, surely, the Knowledge of this Article could but very obscurely be gathered from the bare Writings of Moses and the Prophets, and consequently was by no means received with that Explicitness in the ancient Jewish Church, that it is now in the Christian.

As for the Opinion of the Modern Jews touching this Matter, we shall find, that these acknowledge no such Thing as a Trinity, but utterly reject and explode it. And as for the Mahumetan Religion, (which being a Gallimaufry made up of many, partakes much of the Jewish) that also wholly denies it. And the Professors of it, in all their publick

Perfor-

Performances of Religious Worship, with much Zeal and Earnestness frequently reiterate and repeat this Article; There is but one God, there is but one God; not so much out of Zeal to assert the Unity of the Godhead, as to exclude the Trinity of Persons maintained by the Christians.

I conclude therefore, that it is very probable, that the Discovery of this Mystery was a Privilege reserved to bless the Times of Christianity withall, and that the Jews had either none, or but a very weak and confused Knowledge of it. It was the great Arcanum for the Receiving of which the World was to be many Ages in preparing. As long as the Veil of the Temple remained, it was a Secret not to be looked into; an Holy of Holies, into which even the High Priest himself did not enter. And thus much for the second Condition required to make or constitute a Mystery; namely, that it be above the Strength of bare Reason to find it out, before it is revealed.

3. The third and last is this: That after it is revealed, it be yet difficult to be understood. And he who thinks the contrary, let him make Trial. For although there is nothing in Reason to contradict, yet neither is is there any thing to comprehend it. We may as well shut a Mountain within a Mole-Hill, or take up the Ocean in a Cockle-Shell as reach the stupendous Sacred Intricacies of the Divine Subsistence, by the short and feeble Notions of a Created Apprehension.

Reason indeed proves the Revelation of it by God; but then having done this, here it stops, and pretends not to understand and fathom the Nature of the Thing revealed.

If any one should plead a Parity of the Case, as to this Article of the Trinity, and that about Transubstantiation; and alledge, that since we deny not a Trinity, though we understand it not, but account it a Mystery, and so believe it; why may we not take Transubstantiation also in the Number of Mysteries, and believe it, though it be intricate and impossible to be understood?

To this I answer, (1.) in general, that no Man discoursing, or proceeding rationally upon this Subject, refuses to believe Transubstantiation merely upon this Account, that it is impossible to be understood. (2.) I affirm, that the Case between Transubstantiation and the Trinity is very different; the former being contradicted by the Judgment of that Faculty, of which it is properly the Object; the

the latter being not at all contradicted, but only not comprehended by the Faculty, to which the Judgment and Cognizance of it does belong. To make which clear, we must observe, that both the Bread and the Body of Christ, about which Transubstantiation is said to be effected, being endued with Quantity, Colour, and the like, are the proper Objects of Sense, and so fall under the Cognizance of the Sight and Touch; which Senses being entire, and acting as naturally they ought, they both can and do certainly judge of their proper Objects, and upon such Judgment find it to be a Contradiction for a small Body retaining its own proper Dimensions, at the same time to have the Dimensions of a Body forty times greater. For one Body to be circumscribed, and so compassed in one Place, and at the same time to fill a thousand more, I say it is a Contradiction; for it makes the same thing in the very same respect to be circumscribed, and not to be circumscribed; circumscribed, because encompassed in such a Place; and yet not circumscribed, because extending itself beyond that Place to many others.

But now, on the other side, the Divine Nature and the Trinity are not the Objects of Sense, and consequently Sense passes no Judgment upon them. But they are the Objects of (and so only tryable by) the Mind, and the Understanding; taking in these things from the Reports not of Sense, but Revelation. Which Supreme Faculty being thus informed by Revelation tendring these Reports to its Apprehension, and withall finding that none of those Rules or Principles, by which it judges of the Truth or Falsity of what it apprehends, do at all contradict what Revelation thus speaks and reports of the Divine Nature and the Trinity; it rationally judges, that they may, and ought to be assented to.

For the Stress of the Point lies here, and let all the Reason of Mankind prove, if it can, That wheresoever the Denomination of Three is ascribed to any Nature, it must of Necessity multiply the Nature itself, and not only its Relations. Which being so; those that make the Article of the Trinity parallel to that of Transubstantiation, in Point of its Contrariety to Reason; if they will speak and argue to the Purpose, must undertake to prove, that for One infinite Being or Nature to be in any Respect, or upon any Account whatsoever, Three, without a Triplication of that Nature, and so a Loss of its Unity is as contrary and repugnant to some known Principle of Reason discoursing upon the Reports of Revelation; as for that Thing, which all my Senses tell me to be a little Piece of Bread, to be yet both for Figure and Dimension really a Man's Body, is contradictory to all those Principles, by which Sense judges of those Things that properly fall under the Judgment of Sense.

Let this, I say, be clearly and conclusively made out, and the Business is done. But till then, they must give us leave to judge, that there is as much Difference between the Article of the Trinity as stated by us, and that of Transubstantiation as stated by them, as there is between Difficulty and Contradiction.

And now, if there be any, whose Reason is so unruly and over-curious, as to be still inquisitive and unsatisfied, such must remember, that when we have made the utmost Explications of this Article, we pretend not thereby to have altered the Nature of the Subject we have been treating of; which, after all, is still a Mystery; and they must know moreover, that when the sacred Mysteries of Religion are discoursed of, the Business of a Christian is Sobriety and Submission, and his Duty to be satisfied, even though he were not convinced. The Trinity is a fundamental Article of the Christian Religion; and as he that denies it, may lose his Soul; so he that too much strives to understand it, may lose his Wits. Knowledge is nice, intricate, and tedious; but Faith is easy; and what is more, it is safe. And why should I then unhinge my Brains, ruin my Mind, and pursue Distraction in the Disquisition of that which a little Study would sufficiently convince me to be not intelligible? Or why should I by chewing a Pill make it useless, which swallowed whole might be Curing and Restorative? A Christian, in these Matters, has nothing to do but to believe; and since I cannot scientifically comprehend this Mystery, I shall worship it with the Religion of Submission and Wonder, and casting down my Reason before it, receive it with the Devotions of Silence, and the humble Distances of Adoration.

But here having drawn the Business so far, I cannot but take Notice of some of those blasphemous Expressions which the Socinians use, concerning the sacred Mystery of the Trinity; their Terms (as I have collected some

 “ Tripersonatus. Idolum Portentosum. Fig- “ mentum Sanatæ. Antichristi Cerberus. Tri- “ ceps Geryon. Idolum Trifrons. Monstrum “ Triforme. Deus incognitus, adeoque pro- “ cul rejiciendus, & Satanae conditori suo re- “ stituendus. Now, that the Authors of these ugly Appellations shew themselves not only bold and impious, but also (what by no means they would be thought) very unreasonable, will, I think, appear from these two Considerations:

First, That the Doctrine so broadly decried by them, is at least very difficult, and hardly comprehensible; and therefore, though it could not be proved true, yet, upon the same Score, it can as hardly be proved false.
 But now these Expressions ought to proceed not only upon the Supposition of its bare Falsity, but also upon the Evidence, and unde-niable Clearness of its Falsity; or they must needs be impudent and intolerable.

He who says, that it is clear, that there can be no such thing as the Quadrature of the Circle, makes an impudent Assertion; for, though possibly there can be really no such thing, yet since there have been such considerable Reasons for it, as to engage the greatest Wits in the Search after it, no Man can rationally say, that it is clear and manifest, that there is no such Thing. But besides, in this Case, they deal very irrationally in rejecting the Doctrine of the Trinity, because it is not intelligible; when not only in Divinity, but also in Philosophy, (where yet, not Faith, but strict Ratiocination should take place) they acknowledge many Things, which the best Reason will scarce be able to frame an explicit Notion and Apprehension of. Such as are the Composition and Division of continued Quantities, and the like; which these Men, I believe, will not deny, though it would set them hard to give a clear Account of them.

Secondly, The same Charge of Absurdity lies against these Men upon this Account, that they prefer their particular Reason before the united Reason of a much greater Number than themselves; every one of which were of as great Industry to search, and of as great Abilities to understand the Mysteries of Divinity, as these Men can be presumed to be.

Now, as this is much beside good Manners, so indeed it is no less short of good Reason; which will prove thus much at least: That when a few Learned Persons deny a Proposition, sition, and others forty times more Numerous, and altogether as Learned, do unanimously affirm it; it is very probable, that the Truth stands rather with the Majority.

For if I should demand of these Men, how they come to judge the Doctrine of the Trinity to be false? they must tell me, that they have studied the Point, considered the Text, examined it by the Principles of Reason, and that by the Use of these Means they come at length to make this Conclusion.

But to this I answer, that others, who have studied the Point as much, considered the Text as exactly, and examined it by as strong Principles of Reason, as their Opposites could pretend to, and so standing upon equal Ground with them in point of Abilities, have much the Advantage of them in point of Number.

But you will say; must I therefore conclude, that what is affirmed by such a Majority of Persons so qualified is certainly true? I answer, No; but this I assert; that it is great Reason, though their Assertion appear never so strange to me, that I should yet suspend my Judgment, and not peremptorily conclude it false; since there is hardly any Means, or Way of Ratiocination used by one to prove it a Falsity, but by the very same Way and Means others persuade themselves, that they as strongly prove it to be a Truth.

And thus I think, that these Mens Exceptions against this great Article are, to such as understand Reason, sufficiently proved irrational. But since these Men reject the Doctrine of the Trinity upon Pretence both of its Impiety and Absurdity, it is but requisite, that they should acquit themselves in all their Doctrine, from holding any thing either impious or absurd. But yet, that they cannot do so, these following Positions maintained by them, will, I believe, demonstrate.

1. To assert, as Valkelius, in his second Book De Verâ Religione, and the fourth Chapter, not obscurely does, the Matter of the Universe to be a Passive Principle eternally co-existing with God the Active; is impious, and not consistent with God's infinite Power; for if Matter has its Being from itself, it will follow, that it can preserve itself in Being against all Opposition, and consequently, that God cannot destroy it, which makes him not Omnipotent.

2. To allow God's Power to be infinite, and yet his Substance to be finite, is monstrously absurd; but to assert, as Crellius in his Book De Attributis Dei, in the 27th Chapter, does, that his Substance is circumscribed within the Compass of the highest Heaven, is clearly to make it finite.

3. To allow all God's Prophecies and Predictions recorded in Scripture, of future Contingent Passages, depending upon the free Choice of Man's Will, to have been certain and infallible, and yet his Prescience or Fore-Knowledge of the same contingent Things not to be certain, but only conjectural, as Socinus, in the 8th Chapter of his Prelections, does affirm; is out of Measure absurd and ridiculous.

4. To affirm Christ to be a mere Creature, and no more, and yet to contend, that he is to be invoked and worshipped with Divine Worship; is exceedingly absurd, and contrary to all the Discourses of right Reason; and withall, as offensive and scandalous to Jews and Turks, and such-like, as the bare Affirmation of his Divine Nature can be pretended to be. But Socinus, though he denies this, yet is so earnest for the Divine Adoration and Invocation of Christ, that he affirms, that of the Two, it is better to be a Trinitarian, than not to ascribe this to him.

5. To assert, that the People of God, under the Jewish OEconomy, lay under the Obligation of no Precept to pray to God, as Volkelius, in his 4th Book De Verâ Religione, and the 9th Chapter, positively affirms; is an Assertion highly impious, and to all pious Minds abominable.

6. To assert, that it is lawful for a Man to tell a Lye, to secure himself from some great Danger or Inconvenience, as the same Volkelius in the 4th Book, and 19th Chapter, does; is such a thing, as not only consists not with Piety and Sincerity, but tends to drive even Common Honesty and Society out of the World.

7. To assert, that it is unlawful for Christians in any Case to wage War, as Socinus himself does in his 2d Epistle to Christophorus Morstinus, a Polonian Commander, in which he allows him to bring his Army into the Field in Terrorem Hostium, provided that he neither strikes a Stroak, nor draws Blood, nor cuts off a Limb: This, I say, is grossly absurd and unnatural, and contrary to the eternal Principle of Self-Preservation; as engaging Men, even for Conscience Sake, to surrender their Lives and Fortunes to any Thief or Murderer, that shall think fit to require them. Neither can Socinus, in Reason, so urge those Words of our Saviour, (in Mat. v. 39. of not resisting Evil, in this Case, if he will be but true to his own Principle. For in his 3d Book De Christo Servatore, and the 6th Chapter, disputing against Christ's Satisfaction, he pleads, that in regard it is (as he says) contrary to Reason, though the Scripture should never so often affirm it, yet it ought not to be admitted or assented to. Now, if this be his Rule, I demand of him, whether, for a Man to preserve himself and that even with the Destruction of the Life of the Person assailing him, supposing that he cannot possibly do it otherwise, be not as undeniable a Dictate or Principle of Natural Reason, as any that he can pretend to be contradicted by Christ's Satisfaction. And therefore, if he can lay aside Christ's Satisfaction, though the Scripture were never so express for it, in regard of the Contrariety he pretends in it to Reason; why may not we upon the same Grounds assert the Necessity of Self-Preservation in the Instance of War, though the Scripture expressly forbids it? Since for a Man

Man to relinquish his own Defence, is indubitably contrary to the Dictates of Nature, and consequently of Reason.

But we need not recur to this, for the warranting Men under the Gospel to defend their Lives, though with the Destruction of those that would take them away. Only this I alledge as an Argument ad Hominem, which sufficiently shews, how slight and desultorious this Man is in his Principles and Way of Arguing, while at one time he frames to himself a Principle for his present Turn, and at another makes Assertions, and raises Discourses, which that Principle most directly overthrows. Now all the fore-mentioned Absurdities (with many more that might be reckoned) are the Tenets of those who deny the Article of the Trinity, because (forsooth) it is impious and absurd; that is, who strain at one Gnat, having already swallowed so many vast Camels. And yet these are the Persons, who in all their Writings have the Face to own themselves to the World for those Heroes, whom God, by his special Providence, has raised up to explain Christian Religion, and to reform the Doctrine of the Church. I suppose, just in the same Sense, that the School of Calvin was to reform her Discipline. And

And now in the last place: Because this Article is of so great Moment, and stands (as it were) in the very Front of our Religion; so that it is of very high Concernment to all to be sound and thorough-paced in the Belief of it: I shall shew,

1. What have been the Causes that have first unsettled, and at the last destroyed the Belief of it in some. And,

2. What may be the best Means to settle and preserve the Belief of it in ourselves and others.

For the first of these: There are three things, which I think have been the great Causes that have took some off from the Belief of this Article. As,

(1.) That bold, prophane, and absurd Custom of some Persons, in attempting to paint and represent it in Figure. He who paints God, does a Contradiction; for he attempts to make that visible, which he professes to be invisible. The Ministers of Transylvania and Sarmatia, rank Assertors of the Socinian Heresy, * in a certain Book, (wherein they make Confession of their Faith as to these Articles) insist upon nothing so much, nor indeed so plausibly, for their Rejection of the

* See a Latin Book in 4to, entitled, Præmonitiones Christi, & Apostolorum, per ministros quosdam in Sarmatiâ & Transylvania, &c.

Article of the Trinity, as those several strange Pictures, and Images of the Trinity, which some Persons had set up in several of their Churches: Sometimes describing it by one Head carved into three Faces, to which, so set up in a certain Church, they subjoin this Distich;

Mense Trifrons isto Janum pater urbe Bi-frontem

Expulit, ut Solus regnet in orbe Trifrons;

That is to say, that the God having three Faces, had driven, or (if you will) outfaced poor Janus out of the World, who had but two. And likewise elsewhere such another;

Trifrontempellas, ni miser esse velis.*

Sometimes also they represent it by a Ring set with three Diamonds, in three equi-distant Places of it; and sometimes by the Picture of three Men of an equal Pitch sitting together at one Table, and upon one Seat: And sometimes the same is expressed by the Image of an old Man, a Child, and a Dove; one signifying the Father, one the Son, and the third the Holy Ghost: All which Things being so

Reason

Reason has of God, have brought many sober Parts of the World to nauseate and abhor our whole Religion, and to reject Christianity as only a new Scheme of the old Gentile Idolatry: And withall, have warranted the fore-mentioned Hereticks to think they had Cause for all those vile and wretched Appellations, with which we shew how they bespattered this Divine Mystery; which Blasphemies will, no doubt, be one Day laid at the Door, not of those only who denied, but of those also who painted the Trinity; and by so doing, made others to deny it. And indeed, so far has the common Sort of Mankind took Offence at these Things, that if the Belief of a God were not very deeply imprinted in Man's Nature, such Men's cursed irrational Boldness, in presuming to paint him, would go very near to bring all those about them, by degrees, to question the very Deity itself.

2. A second Cause of the same Evil, is the equally bold and insignificant Terms which some of the Schoolmen have expressed this great Article by; who pursuing their own Phænomena as undoubted Truths, speak as peremptorily and confidently of this profound Mystery, as if it were a Thing obvious

vious to the first Apprehensions of Sense. It was a good and a pious Saying of an antient Writer, Periculosum est de Deo etiam vera dicere. No Wonder therefore, if these Men, discoursing of the Nature and Subsistence of God, in a Language neither warrantable nor apprehensible, have by their Modalities, Suppositalities, Circuminceptions, and twenty such other Chimeras, so misrepresented this adorable Article of the Trinity to Mens Reason, as to bring them first to loath, and at length to deny it.

3. A third Cause, which has much weakened some Mens Belief of this Article, has been the imprudent Building it upon some Texts of Scripture, which indeed will evince no such thing. Such as those Places which I mentioned out of the Old Testament; and such, as one of the Ancients once brought for a Proof of the eternal Generation, and Deity of the Word, from that Expression of David, in Psal. xliv. 1. Quisquamne dubitat (says he) de Divinitate Filii, cum legerit illud Psalmistæ, Cor meum eructavit verbum bonum? Concerning which, and the like Allegations, I shall only make one very obvious, but as true (and perhaps too true) a Remark, that whatsoever is produced and insisted upon in behalf half of any great and momentous Point of Religion, if it comes not fully close and home to the same, it is always found much more effectual to expose the Truth it is brought for, than to support it, and to confirm the Heretick it is brought against, than to convince him.

And thus having shewn some of the Causes that undermine Mens Belief of the Article of the Trinity; I shall now assign some Means also, to fix and continue it in such Minds, as do already embrace it. And these shall be briefly two.

1. To acquiesce in the bare Revelation of the thing itself; and in those Expressions, under which it is revealed. As for the thing itself, God has expressly said, that there are Three above the Rank of created Beings, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. And as for the Words, in which he has conveyed this to us, they are few, easy, and intelligible, and to be believed just as they are proposed; that is, simply, and in general, and without entring too far into Particulars.

2. To suppress all nice, and over-curious Enquiries into the peculiar Nature, Reason, and Manner of this Mystery. For God having

having not thought fit to reveal this to us any farther, than he has yet actually done, sufficiently declares it to have been his Intent, that it should indeed be no farther known, nor indeed searched into by us; and perhaps so far as it is yet unknown, it may, to a created Reason, be also unknowable. For when we are once assured that the Thing itself is; for us to amuse ourselves, and others, with bold perplexing Questions, (as they can be no better) how, and which Way it comes to be so, especially in Matters relating to Almighty God, must needs be equally Irreverent and Impertinent. Those Words of an ancient Commentator upon St. John, contain in them an excellent Rule, and always to be attended to, Firmam fidem (says he) Mysterio adhibentes, nunquam, in tam sublimibus, illud quomodo aut cogitemus, aut proferamus. Which Rule, had it been well observed, both in this, and some other Articles of our Religion, not only the Peace of particular Churches and Consciences, but also the general Peace of Christendom, might in great Measure have been happily preserved by it.

Let this therefore be fixed upon, that there is no Obedience comparable to that of the derstanding; no Temperance, which so much commends the Soul to God, as that which shews itself in the Restraint of our Curiosity. Besides which two important Considerations, let us consider also, that an over anxious Scrutiny into such Mysteries, is utterly useless, as to all Purposes of a rational Enquiry. It wearies the Mind, but not informs the Judgment. It makes us conceited, and fantastical in our Notions, instead of being sober and wise to Salvation. It may provoke God also, by our pressing too much into the Secrets of Heaven, and the concealed Glories of his Nature, to desert and give us over to strange Delusions. For they are only Things revealed, (as Moses told the Israelites, in Deut. xxix. 29.) which belong to the Sons of Men to understand and look into, as the sole and proper Privilege allowed them by God, to exercise their noblest Thoughts upon: But as for such high Mysteries as the Trinity, as the Subsistence of one Nature in three Persons, and of three Persons in one and the same individual Nature, these are to be reckoned in the Number of such sacred and secret Things, as belong to God alone perfectly to know, but to such poor Mortals as we are, humbly to fall down before, and adore.

To which God, incomprehensible in his Nature, and wonderful in his Works, be rendred and ascribed, (as is most due) all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

Ill-disposed Affections, both naturally and penally the Cause of Darkness and Error in the Judgment.

OF all the fatal Effects of Sin, none looks so dreadfully, none strikes so just an Horror into considering Minds, as that every sinful Action a Man does, naturally disposes him to another; and that it is hardly possible for him to do any thing so ill, but that it proves a Preparative and Introduction to the doing of something worse. Upon which Account, that notable Imprecation of the Psalmist, upon his own and the Church's Enemies, in Psal. lxxix. 28. namely, That they may fall from one Wickedness to another, is absolutely the bitterest and most severe of any extant in the whole Book of

God,

God, as being indeed the very Abridgment of that grand Repository of Curses, the xxviiith Chapter of Deuteronomy; and that with the Addition of something besides, and of so much a more killing Malignity, than all of them put together; by how much the Evil of Sin is confessedly greater, than the Evil of any Suffering for it whatsoever. The like Instances to which, we have in the Text now before us, of a Sort of Men, first casting off the Love of the Truth, and from thence passing into a State of Delusion; and lastly, settling in a steady, fixed Belief of a Lye. By such wretched Gradations is it, that Sin commonly arrives at its full ἀκμὴ, or Maturity. So that in Truth, it is the only Perpetual Motion which has yet been found out, and needs nothing but a Beginning to keep it incessantly going on. Accordingly, as every immoral Act in the immediate and direct Tendency of it, is certainly a Step downwards, and a very large one too; so in all Motions of Descent, it is seldom or never found, that a Thing so moving makes any Stop in its Fall, till it is fallen so far, that it is past falling any farther. And much the same is the Case with a Man, as to his Spirituals; after he has been long engaged in a Course of Sinning, his Progress in it grows infinite, and his Return desperate.

Now in the Words I have here pitched upon, as they stand in Coherence with the precedent and subsequent Verse, there are these two Things to be considered :

First, A severe Judgment denounced against a certain Sort of Men ; namely, that God would send them such strong Delusion, that they should believe a Lye. And,

Secondly, The meritorious procuring Cause of this Judgment in the foregoing Verse ; to wit, their not receiving the Love of the Truth.

Where it is manifest, that by the Words Truth, and a Lye, are not to be here meant, all Truth and Falshood generally or indefinitely speaking, nor yet more particularly all that is true or false upon a Philosophical Account. For these Truths or Falshoods the Apostle does not in this Place concern himself about ; but such only as belong properly to Religion, with reference to the Worship of

Almighty God, and the Salvation of Mens Souls. In a word, by Truth here, is meant nothing else but the Gospel, or Doctrin of Christianity; nothing being more frequent with the inspired Penmen of Holy Writ, than to express the Christian Religion by the Name of Truth; and that sometimes absolutely, and without any Epithet or Addition, and sometimes with some additional Term of Specification; as in Tit. i. 1. it is called, The Truth according to Godliness; and in Ephes. iv. 15. The Truth as it is in Jesus; with the like in several other Places. So that still the great ennobling Characteristick of the Gospel, is Truth; Truth eminently and transcendently such; and for that Cause, by a distinguishing Excellency, called The Truth; from whence, by irrefragable Consequence, it must also follow, that whatsoever is not Truth, can be no Part of Christian Religion. A Bottom so firm and sure for Christianity to rest upon, that it cannot be placed upon a surer and more unshakable; besides this farther Advantage accruing to it thereby, that as Truth and Goodness by an eternal, indissoluble Union, (as strong as Nature, or rather as the God of Nature can make it)

stand essentially and inseparably combined, and even identified with one another; so, upon the same Account, we may be assured, that the Goodness of the Gospel cannot but adequately match and keep Pace with the Truth of it; both of them being perfectly commensurate, both of them equally Properties of it, equally included in, and flowing from its very Constitution. So that the Gospel being thus held forth to the World, as the liveliest Representation, and fullest Transcript of those two glorious Perfections of the Divine Nature, to wit, its Truth and Goodness; it must needs, by the first of them, recommend itself to our Understandings, as the most commanding Object of our Esteem, and by the other to our Wills, as the most endearing Object of our Choice.

Which being thus premised, if we would bring the entire Sense of the Words into one Proposition, it may, I conceive, not unfitly be comprehended in this, viz.

That the not entertaining a sincere Love and Affection for the Duties of Religion, does both naturally, and by the just Judgment of God besides, dispose Men to Errors and Deceptions about the great Truths of Religion.

This,

This, I say, seems to me to take in the main, if not whole Design of the Words; for the better Prosecution of which, I shall cast what I have to say upon them, under these following Particulars: As,

I. I shall shew, how the Mind of Man can believe a Lye.

II. I shall shew, what it is to receive the Love of the Truth.

III. I shall shew, how the not receiving the Love of the Truth comes to have such an Influence upon the Understanding or Judgment, as to dispose it to Error and Delusion.

IV. I shall shew, how God can be properly said to send such Delusions.

V. Since his sending them, is here mentioned as a Judgment, (and that a very great one too) I shall shew, wherein the Greatness of it consists. And,

VI. And Lastly, I shall improve the Point into some useful Consequences and Deductions from the Whole.

Of each of which in their Order. And,

I. For the first of them. To shew, how the Mind of Man can believe a Lye. There is certainly so great a Suitableness between Truth,

Truth, and an human Understanding, that the Understanding of itself can no more believe a Lye, than the Taste rightly disposed can pronounce a bitter Thing sweet. The formal Cause of all Assent, is the Appearance of Truth; and if a Lye is believed, it can be so no farther, than as it carries in it the Appearance of Truth. But then, what, and whence are these Appearances? Appearance, no doubt, is a Relative Term, and must be between two; for one thing could not be said to appear, if there were not another for it to appear to. So that there must be both an Object and a Faculty, before there can be an Appearance; and consequently, from one of these two must spring all Falshood at any time belonging to it. But the Question is, from which of them? And in answer to it, it is certain, that the Object itself cannot cause a false Appearance of itself. For if so, when the Mind has conceived a false Apprehension of God, God who is the Object, would be the Cause of that false Apprehension. But it is certain, that Objects operate not efficiently upon the Faculties; for if they should, since the Object is the same to all, viz. both those who entertain true, and those who who entertain false Apprehensions of it, it would be impossible for the same Thing, so far as it is the same, to produce such contrary Effects. It is the same Body which appears to one of such a Shape, and to another of a quite different. And therefore, the Difference must needs be on the Beholder's Side, and rest in the Faculty of Perception, not in the Thing perceiv'd. This we may pronounce confidently and truly, that the Object duly circumstantiated is never in Fault, why it is not rightly apprehended. Objects are merely passive; and if they were not so, Men would certainly be both learned, and better than they are; for neither can Learning, nor Religion thrust itself into the Heads or Hearts of Men, whether they will or no. Truth shews itself to be Truth, and Falshood represents itself as Falshood, (and so far is a good Representer) whether Men apprehend them so or no. For the Object is not to be condemned for the Failures of the Faculty, any more than a Man, who speaks audibly and intelligibly, is to be blamed for not being heard; no Body being bound to find Words and Ears too.

Well

Well then; since a Lye cannot be believed, but under the Appearance of Truth, and since a Lye cannot give itself any such Appearance, it is evident, that if any Man believes a Lye, it is from something in himself that he does so. There are Lyes, Errors, and Heresies about the World, both plausible and infinite, but then they naturally appear what they are; and if Truth be naked to the Skin, Error is and must be so to the Bone; and the fairest Falshood can no more oblige Assent, than the best dressed Evil can oblige the Choice.

And thus having given both Falshood, and the Devil, the Father of it, their Due, and cleared even the grossest Lye from being the Cause that it is believed, and thereby left it wholly at the Door of him who believes it; let us in the next place enquire, what may be the Causes on the Believer's part, which make any Object, and particularly a Lye, appear otherwise to him, than really it is, and upon that Account gain his Belief. Now these are two.

1. An undue Distance between the Faculty and its proper Object.

2. An Indisposition in the Faculty itself.

And,

1. For

1. For the first of these. As Approximation is one necessary Condition of Perception; so, too much Distance prevents and hinders it, by setting the Object too far out of our Reach, and if the Apprehensive Faculty offers at an Object so placed, and falls short of the Apprehension of it, the Fault is not in the Object, but in that. And here, by Distance, I mean not only an Interval in point of Local Position, which, if too great, certainly hinders all corporeal Perception; but likewise a Distance, or rather Disparity, of Natures; such as is between Finite and Infinite, Material and Spiritual Beings, consisting in the great Disproportion there is between one and the other. And from hence it is, that the Mind of Man is incapable of apprehending any thing almost of God, or indeed of Angels; the Distance between their Natures being so exceeding great. For though God, as the Evangelist St. Luke tells us, in Acts xvii. 27. be not far from every one of us; nay, as it is in the next Verse, that he is so near, or rather intimate to us, that in him we live and move, and have our Being; so that it is as impossible for us to exclude him, as it is to comprehend him; yet still the vast Difference of his Nature from ours, makes the Distance between them so unspeakably great, that neither can our Corporeal, nor Intellectual Powers form any true Idea of him. And from hence it is, that there is nothing, about which the Mind, and Apprehensive Faculties of Man, have so frequently and foully blundered, as about the Divine Nature and Persons, and (what is founded upon both) the Divine Worship. But,

2. The other Cause, which makes any Object, and particularly a Lye, appear otherwise than really it is, is the Indisposition of the Intellectual Faculty; which Indisposition, in some degree or other, is sure to follow from Sin, both original and actual. For so much as there is of Deviation from the eternal Rules of right Reason and Morality in the Soul; so much there will of necessity be of Darkness in it too; and so much of Darkness as there is in it, so far must it be unavoidably subject to pass a false Judgment upon most Things that come before it. Otherwise there is nothing in Reason, considered purely and simply as such, which is, or can be unsuitable to Religion, or indeed to the Nature of any Thing; but so much the contrary, that if we could imagine a Man all Reason, without any Byass from his Sensitive Part, it were impossible, but that, upon the first sufficient Offer, he should (as we may so express it) with both Arms embrace Religion. But the Case has been much altered since the Fall of our first Parents, and the fatal Blow thereby given to all the Powers of Man's Mind; besides the farther Debilitation and Distemper brought upon it, by many actual and gross Sins. So that now the Understandings of Men are become like some bodily Eyes, disabled from an exact Discernment of their proper Object, both by a natural Weakness, and a supervening Soreness too.

And thus I have accounted for the true Cause which sometimes prostitutes the noble Understanding of Man to the lowest of Dishonours, the Belief of a Lye; namely, either the Remoteness of the Faculty (whether in point of Distance or Difference) from its Object, or some Weakness or Disorder in it; either of which will be sure to pervert its Operation; and then a Fault in the first Apprehension of any Thing, will not fail to produce a false Judgment, and that a false Belief likewise, about the same. And so I proceed to the

II. Particular proposed, viz. to shew what it is to receive the Love of the Truth,

And

And this we shall find implies in it these two Things:

1. An high Esteem and Valuation of the real Worth and Excellency of it; this is the first and leading Act of the Mind. Truth must be first enthroned in our Judgment, before it can reign in our Desires; and as it is the leading Faculty, so it is the Measure of the rest: For no Man's Love of any thing can rise above his Esteem of it, nor can his Appetites exert themselves upon any Object, not first vouched by his Apprehensions. For which Cause, the Holy Ghost in Scripture, the better to advance Religion in our Thoughts, represents it by things of all others the most highly accounted of in the World, as Crowns, Thrones, Kingdoms, hidden Treasure, and the like; all which Expressions, though far from being intended according to the strict and philosophical Truth of things, but rather as Allusions to them; yet still were founded in the universally acknowledged Course of Nature, which ever was, and will be, for Men to be first allured by the Worth of things, before they can desire the Property or Possession of them; and to consider the Value, before they design the Purchase. But, be the Matter as it may, our Affections

(to be sure) will bid nothing for any thing, till our Judgment has set the Price. Thus S. Paul evinces his Love to Christ, from his transcendent Esteem of him; I account all Things (says he) but Dung and Dross, that I may win Christ, Phil. iii. 8. And he who accounts a Thing as Dung, will no doubt trample upon it as such. The Rule of Contrarities will be found a clear Illustration of the Case. For Hatred generally begins in Contempt, or something very like it; and it is certain in Matter of Fact, as well as Reason, that we leave off to love any thing or Person, as soon as we begin to despise them. He, who in Scorn turns away his Eye from looking upon an Object, will hardly be brought to reach out his Hand after it: Let a Man therefore set his Understanding Faculty on work, and put it to examine and consider, to view and review the intrinsic Value of Religion, what it is, and what it offers, before he proceeds to make it his Portion so far, as to be ready to quit all the World for it, should they both come to rival his Choice as Competitors; Let him, I say, by a strict and impartial Enquiry, descend into himself, and see whether he can upon these Terms (for lower and easier it knows none)

judge it absolutely eligible; and if not, let him assure himself, that without a Passport from the Judgment, it will never gain a free and full Admittance into the Affections. For still it is through the Eye that Love enters into the Heart: Nay, so mighty an Influence has the judging Faculty in this Case, that it is much disputed, whether the last Dictate of the Judgment about any Object does not necessarily determine, and draw after it the Choice of the Will; and perhaps there is scarce any Point in Moral Philosophy of a nicer Speculation, and an harder Decision; for as the Affirmation of this on the one side seems to border upon Stoicism, and to entrench upon the Freedom of the Will; which after the Supposal of all Things requisite to its Acting, ought nevertheless still to retain a Power to exert, or not exert an Act of Volition: So on the other side, to affirm, that after the Understanding has made the last Proposal of the Object to the Will, the Will may yet refuse it, and go contrary to it, seems to infer this great Inconvenience, that the Will, in order to its acting, needs not the preceding Act or Conduct of the Intellect to make a sufficient Proposal of the Object to it, since after it is so proposed, it may notwithstanding divert its Actings quite another way; and then, if it can, in this manner proceed without a Guide, the Will is not so blind a Faculty as the Schools make it. For he who goes one way, when his Guide directs him another, manifestly shews that he both can, and does go without him. But I shall dispute this Point no farther; it being (as I conceive) sufficient for our present Purpose, that the Act of the Understanding proposing the Object, must of Necessity precede, whether the Act or Choice of the Will follow it or no. Though for my own part, I cannot see, that the holding the Necessity of the Will's following the last Dictate or Proposal of the Understanding, does at all prejudice its Freedom; (which is rather opposed to Coaction from without, than to a Determination from within) forasmuch as it was in the Power of the Will to have diverted the Understanding from its Application to any Object, before it came to form its last Judgment of it; and consequently, the whole Proceeding of the Understanding being under the free Permission of the Will, the Act of the Will closing with this last Determination, was originally and virtually free, though formally and immediately in this latter Sense, necessary. As God necessarily does, what he first absolutely decreed, and yet the whole Act is free, since the Decree itself was the free Issue and Result of his Will. But I beg Pardon, if I have dwelt too long upon this Point. It was, because I thought it requisite to shew, what is the Part and Office, and how great the Force and Power of the Understanding, in recommending the Truths of Religion to the Souls of Men; that so they may not acquiesce in a slight, superficial Judgment, or Apprehension of them; which, we may rest satisfied, will never have any considerable Effect, or work any thorough Change upon the Heart; and if so, all will come to nothing; for the Foundation is ill laid, and the Superstructure cannot be firm. And upon this Account, no doubt it is, that the Scripture ascribes so much to Faith; indeed, in effect, the whole Work of Man's Salvation; and yet it is but an Act of the Understanding, and properly and strictly speaking, can be no more: Yet nevertheless, of such a mighty and controuling Influence upon the Will is it, that if it be strong, vigorous, and of the right kind, it draws the whole Soul after it, and works all those Wonders, which stand recorded of it in the 11th of the Hebrews, which from first to last is but a Panegyrick upon the invincible Strength, and heroick Atchievements of this Grace. In a word, if a Man, by Faith, can bring his Understanding to receive, and entertain the Divine Truths of the Gospel so, as to look upon the Promises of it as conveying the greatest Good and Happiness to Man, that a Rational Nature is capable of, and the Threatnings of it as denouncing the bitterest and most insupportable Evils, that a Created Being can sink under, and both of them as Things of certain and infallible Event: This is for a Man truly to value his Religion, and to lay such a Foundation of it in his Judgment, as shall never disappoint or shame his Practice. Accordingly in the

II. Place. The other Thing implied in, and intended by the Receiving the Love of the Truth, is the Choice of it, as of a Thing transcendently good, and particularly agreeable to our Condition. Generals, we commonly say, are fallacious; but it is certain, that they are always faint. And therefore, it is not merely what is good, as to the general Notion of it, (which can minister to little more than bare Theory and Discourse) but particularly what is good for me, which must

must engage my Practice. To esteem a Thing, we have shewn, is properly an Act of the Understanding; but to choose it, is the Part and Office of the Will. And Choosing is a considerable Advance beyond bare Esteem; forasmuch as it is the End of it, and consequently perfects it, as the End does every Action, which is directed to it. It is the most proper, genuine, and finishing Act of Love. For the great Effect of Love, is to unite us to the Thing we love; and the Will is properly the uniting Faculty, and Choice the uniting Act, which brings the Soul and its beloved Object together. Judgment and Esteem, indeed, is that which offers and recommends it to the Soul; but it is Choice which makes the Match. For the Truth is, the Soul of Man can do no more, nor reach farther, than first to esteem an Object, and then to choose it. And therefore, till we have made Religion our fixed Choice, it only floats in the Imagination, and is but the Business of Talk and Fancy. But it is the Heart after all, which must appropriate and take hold of the great Truths of Christianity for its Portion, its Happiness, and chief Good. And then, and not till then, a Man is practically, and in good earnest a Christian; and that which before was but Notion and Opinion, hereby passes into Reality and Experience; and from a mere Name, into the Nature and Substance of Religion. For still, if a Man would make his Faith, or Religion, a vital Principle for him to live and act by, it must be such an one as the Apostle tells us, works by Love; there must be something of this blessed Flame to invigorate, and give activity to it. But where a Man neither loves, nor likes the Thing he believes, it is odds but in a little time he may be brought also to cast off the very Belief itself; and, in the mean while, it is certain, that it can have no Efficacy, no Operation, or Influence upon his Life or Actions; which is worse than no Belief at all; for better, a great deal, none, than to no Purpose.

And thus, having shewn, what is meant by, and implied in, the receiving the Love of the Truth, it may, I conceive, help us to an easy and natural Account of its Opposite or Contrary; to wit, the Rejecting, or not receiving the same; the great Sin, as we before observed, for which the Persons here in the Text stand concluded under so severe a Doom. For the farther Explication of which, we may very rationally suppose the Condition of those Men to have been this, viz. That upon the Preaching of Christianity, the Truth of it quickly overpowered their Assent, and broke in upon their Apprehensions with the highest Evidence and Conviction; but the searching Purity and Spirituality of the same Doctrines equally encoutring their worldly Interests, and their predominant beloved Corruptions, soon caused in their Minds a secret Loathing of the Severity of those Truths, and so by Degrees, a direct Hatred and Hostility against them, as the great Disturbers of those Pleasures, and Interrupters of the Caresses of those Lusts, which had so betwitched their Hearts, and seized their Affections. It is wonderful to consider, what a strange Combat and Scuffle there is in the Soul of Man, when clear Truths meet with strong Corruptions; one Faculty or Power of it embracing a Doctrine, because true; and another with no less Fury rising up against it, because severe and disagreeable. Thus, what should be the Reason, that those high and excellent Precepts of Christianity, requiring Purity of Heart, Poverty of Spirit, Chastity of Mind, Hatred of Revenge, and the like, find so cold a Reception, or rather so sharp a Resentment in the World? Is it because

Men think they are not Truths? By no means, but because they are severe, grating, uneasy Truths; they believe them sufficiently, and more than they desire, but they cannot love them; and for that Reason, and no other, they are rejected, and thrown aside in the Lives and Practices of Men; not because they cannot, or do not convince their Understandings, but because they thwart, and bid Defiance to their Inclinations. Truth is so connatural to the Mind of Man, that it would certainly be entertained by all Men did it not by Accident contradict some beloved Interest or other. The Thief hates the Break of Day; not but that he naturally loves the Light as well as other Men; but his Condition makes him dread and abhor that, which of all Things he knows to be the likeliest Means of his Discovery. Men may sometimes frame themselves to hear and attend to the mortifying Truths of Christianity; but then they hear them only as they use to hear of the Death of Friends, or the Story of a lost Estate; they are true, but troublesome and vexatious. So often does the Irksomness of the Thing reported make Men angry with the Truth of the Report, and sometimes with the very Person of the Reporter porter too. And therefore, let none wonder, if God inflict so signal a Judgment upon this Sort of Sin: For when Men shall resolutely reject clear, pregnant, and acknowledged (as well as important) Truths, only because they press hard upon their Darling Sin, and would knock them off from the pleasing Embraces of the World, and the Flesh, and from dying in them; what do they else but sacrifice the Glory of their Nature, their Reason, to their Brutality? and make their noblest Perfections bow down, and stoop to their basest Lusts? What do they, I say, but crush and depress Truth, to advance some pitiful, sensual Pleasure in the room of it; and so, like Herod, strike off the Baptist's Head, only to reward the Dances of a Strumpet? This is the great Load of Condemnation, which lies so heavy upon the World, (as S. John tells us) That Men see the Light, but love Darknes, bend before the Truth of a Doctrine, but abhor its Strictness and Spirituality. The Doctrine of Christianity being in this, like that Fore-runner of Christ just now mentioned by us; who was indeed (as our Saviour himself styled him) a shining, but withall a burning Light. And as the Shining both of the one and the other, in the glorious Evidence of Truth beaming out from both, could not but, even in spite of Sin, and all the Powers of Darknefs, be infinitely pleasing to all who had the Sight thereof; so its Burning Quality exerting itself in the searching Precepts of Self-Denial and Mortification, was, no doubt, to all vicious and depraved Minds, altogether as tormenting and intolerable. And so I proceed to the

III. Particular proposed by us. Which was to shew, how the not receiving the Love of the Truth into the Will and Affections, comes to dispose the Understanding to Error and Delusion. Now, I conceive, it may do it these following Ways:

1. By drawing off the Understanding from fixing its Contemplation upon a disgusted offensive Truth. For though it is not in the Power of the Will, when the Understanding apprehends a Truth clearly and distinctly, to countermand its Assent to it; yet it has so great an Influence upon it, that it is able antecedently to hinder it from taking that Truth into a full and thorough Consideration. And while the Mind is not taken up with an actual Attention to the Truth proposed to it, so long it is obnoxious to the Offers and Impressions

Impressions of the contrary Error. For the first Adherencies, or rather Applications of the Soul to Truth, are very weak and imperfect, till they are furthered and confirmed by a frequent Converse with it, and so, by degrees, come to have the general Notions of Reason endear'd and made familiar to the Mind, by renewed Acts of Attention and Speculation; which ceasing, if a Falshood comes recommended to the Soul with any Advantage, that is to say, with Agreeableness, though without Argument, it is ten to one but it enters and takes Possession. And then the Poison is infused; let the Man get it out again as he can. He who will not insist attentively and closely upon the Examination of any Truth, is never like to have his Mind either clearly inform'd of it, or firmly united to it. For Want of Search is really and properly the keeping off the due Approximation of the Object, without which, a true Apprehension of it is impossible. So that if a Man has corrupt Affections, averse to the Purity and Excellency of any Truth, it is not imaginable, that they will suffer his Thoughts to dwell long upon it, but will do their Utmost to divert and carry them off to some other Object, which he is more inclined to, and enamoured with; and then, what Wonder is it, if under such Circumstances the Mind is betrayed by the Biass of the Affections, and so lies open to all the treacherous Inroads of Fallacy and Imposture? As for instance, he whose corrupt Nature is impatient of any Restraint from Morality or Religion, will be sure to keep his Mind off from them, as much as possibly he can; he will not trouble himself with any Debates or Discourses about the Truth or Evidence of such Things as he heartily wishes were neither evident nor true. In a word, he will not venture his Meditations upon so unwelcome, and so afflicting a Subject. And thus having rid himself of such Notions; the contrary Documents of Atheism and Immorality still bringing with them a Compliance with those Affections which all Thoughts of Religion were so greivous to, will soon find an easy, unresisted Admittance into an Understanding naked, and unguarded against the several Arts and Stratagems of the grand Deceiver. A Man indeed may be sometimes so surprized, as not to be able to prevent the first Apprehension and Sight of a Truth; but he is always able to prevent the Consideration of it; without which, the other can work upon him very little. For though Apprehension shews the Object, it must be Consideration which applies it. But again,

2. A Will vitiated, and grown out of Love with the Truth, disposes the Understanding to Error and Delusion, by causing in it a Prejudice and Partiality in all its Reflections upon, and Discourses about it. He, who considers of a thing with Prejudice, has judged the Cause before he hears it, and decided the Matter, not as really it is, but as it either crosses or comports with the Principles, which he is already prepossessed with: The Understanding, in such a Case, being like the Eye of the Body, viewing a white thing through a red Glass; it forms a Judgment of the Colour, not according to the Thing it sees, but according to that by which it sees. And upon the like Account it is, that the Will and the Affections never pitch upon any thing as odious, but that sooner or later they bribe the Judgment to represent it to them as ugly too. We know the Miracles, the astonishing Works, and excellent Discourses of our Saviour could not strike the Hearts of those whom he preached to, through the mighty Prejudice they had conceived against his Person and Country. But that they still opposed all, even the most cogent and demonstrative Arguments he could bring for his Doctrine, with that silly Exception, Is not this the Carpenter's Son? And that one ridiculous Proverb, that no Good could come out of Galilee, (as slight as it was) yet proved strong enough to obstruct their Assent, and arm their Minds against that high Conviction and mighty Sway of Evidence, which shined forth in all his miraculous Works: So that this senseless Saying alone fully answered, or (which was as effectual for their Purpose) absolutely overbore them all. In like manner, we find it elsewhere observed by our Saviour himself, of that selfish, rotten, and yet demure Generation of Men, the Pharisees; that they could not believe, because they received Honour one of another, Joh. v. 44. They had (it seems) bewitched the People into an extravagant Esteem and Veneration of their Sanctity, and by that means had got no small Command over their Purses, their Tables, and their Families; nay, and more than ordinary Footing and Interest in the Jewish Court itself. So that they ruled without Controul, getting the highest Seats in Synagogues, that is, in their chief Assemblies or

Consistories; and they loved also to feed as high as they sate, still providing themselves with the best Rooms, and not the worst Dishes (we may be sure) at Feasts. Nor would ever such Pretenders have fasted twice a Week, but that they knew it afforded them five Days besides to feast in; so that having thus found the Sweets of a crafty, long-practised Hypocrisy, from which they had reaped so many luscious Privileges, they could not but have an horrible Prejudice against the Strictness of that Doctrine, which preached nothing but Self-Denial, Humility, and a Contempt of the Honours and Emoluments of the World, which they themselves so passionately doted upon; and therefore no wonder, if they threw it off as a Fable, and an Imposture, though recommended with all the Attestations of Divine Power, which had in them a Fitness to inform or convince the Reason of Man. So far did the Corruption of their Will advance their Prejudice, and their Prejudice destroy their Judgment. But,

3. The third and last Reason which I shall assign for proving, that the Will's not embracing the Love of the Truth, betrays the Understanding to Error and Delusion, is from the peculiar Malignity which is in every Vice, or corrupt Affection, to darken and besot the Mind, the N^o 5, the great Guide, and Superintendant of all the Faculties of the Soul; for so near a Connection, or rather Cognation is there between the Moral and Intellectual Perfection of it, * (as I have elsewhere observ'd) that a great Flaw in the former, never fails in the Issue to affect the latter; though possibly how this is done, is not so easily accounted for. Nevertheless, that irrefragable Argument Experience sufficiently proves many things, which it is not able to explain, nor indeed pretends to be so. Aristotle has observed of the Vices of the Flesh, (and his Observation is in a great Degree true of all other) that they do peculiarly cloud the Intellect, and debase a Man's Notions, emasculate his Reason, and weaken his Discourse; and in a word, make him upon all these Accounts, much less a Man than he was before. And for this Cause, no doubt, has the same Author declared young Men, in whom the fore-mentioned Sort of Vices is commonly most predominant, not competent Auditors of Moral Philosophy, as having turned the Force of their

* The Reader may please to cast his Eye upon the second Sermon of the 3^d Volume, where this Subject is more professedly and largely treated of.

Minds to things of a quite contrary Nature. But this Mischief reaches much farther; for sure it is, that when wise Men (be their Years what they will) become vicious Men, their Wisdom leaves them; and there appears not that Keeness and Briskness in their apprehensive and judging Faculties, which had been all along observed in them, while attended with Temperance, and guarded with Sobriety. So that, upon this fatal Change, they do not argue with that Strength, distinguish with that Clearness; nor in any Matter brought into Debate, conclude with that Happiness and Firmness of Result, which they were wont to do.

Shew me so much as one wise Counsel, or Action of Marcus Antonius, a Person otherwise both Valiant and Eloquent; after that he had subdued his Understanding to his Affections, and his Affections to Cleopatra. How Great was Lucullus in the Field, and how Great in the Academy? But abandoning himself to Ease and Luxury; Plutarch tells us, that he survived the Use of his Reason, grew infatuated, and doted long before he died, though he died before he was old.

All which tends to demonstrate, that such is the Nature of Vice, that the Love thereof entring into the Will, and thrusting out the Love of Truth, it is no wonder, if the Understanding comes to sink into Infatuation and Delusion; the Ferment of a vicious Inclination lodged in the Affections, being like an intoxicating Liquor received into the Stomach, from whence it will be continually sending thick Clouds, and noisome Steams up to the Brain. Filth and Foulness in the one will be sure to cause Darkness in the other. Was ever any one almost observed to come out of a Tavern, an Alehouse, or a jolly Meeting, fit for his Study, or indeed for any thing else, requiring Strefs, or Exactness of Thought? The Morning, we know, is commonly said to be a Friend to the Muses, but a Morning's Draught was never so. And thus having done with the third Particular proposed from the Text, come we now to the

IV. Viz. To shew, how God can be properly said to send Men Delusions. God (says the Apostle, 1 Joh. i. 5.) is Light, and in him there is no Darkness at all. And that which in no respect is in him, cannot, we may be sure, proceed from him. Upon which Account, it must needs be very difficult to shew and demonstrate, how God can derive Ignorance, Darkneſs, and Deception into the Minds of Men. And the great Difficulty of giving a rational and good Account of this, and ſuch-like Inſtances, drove Manes, an early Heretick, with his Followers, (called all along the Manichees, or Manicheans) to aſſert two Firſt, Eternal, Independent Beings, one the Cauſe of all Good, the other the Cauſe of all Evil; as concluding, that the Evil which is in the World muſt needs have ſome Cauſe, and that a Being infinitely Good could not be the Cauſe of it; and conſequently, that there muſt be ſome other Principle from the Malignity of whoſe Influence flowed all the Ignorance, all the Wickedneſs and Villany, which either is, or ever was in the World. But the generally received Opinion of the Nature of Evil, viz. That it is but a mere Privation of Good, and conſequently needs not an efficient, but only a deficient Cauſe, as owing its Production and Riſe not to the Force, but to the Failure of the Agent; this Conſideration, I ſay, has render'd that Notion of Manes of a firſt Independent Principle of Evil, as uſeleſs and impious in Divinity, as it is abſurd in Philoſophy.

This Principle therefore being thus removed, let us ſee how it can comport with the Goodness, and absolute Purity of the Divine Nature, to have such Effects ascribed to it, and how, without any Derogation to the glorious Attribute of God's Holiness, he can be said to send the Delusions, mentioned in the Text, into the Minds of Men. Now, I conceive, he may be said to do it these four Ways :

1. First by withdrawing his enlightening Influence from the Understanding. This, I confess, may seem at first an obscure, enthusiastick Notion to some ; but give me leave to shew, that there is sufficient Ground for it in Reason. And for this Purpose, I shall observe to you, that it was the Opinion of some Philosophers, particularly of Aristotle, and since him of Averroes, Avicenna, and some others, that there was one Universal Soul belonging to the whole Species, or Race of Mankind, and indeed to all things else according to their Capacity : Which Universal Soul, by its respective Existence in, and Communication of itself to each Particular Man, did exert in him those noble Acts of Understanding, and Ratiocination, proper to his Nature ; and those also in a different Degree and Measure of Perfection, according as the different Crasis or Disposition of the Organs of the

the Body made it more or less fit to receive the Communication of that Universal Soul; which Soul only (by the way) they held to be immortal; and that every particular Man, both in respect of Body and Spirit, was mortal: His Spirit being nothing else but a more refined Disposition and Elevation of Matter.

Others detesting the Impiety of this Opinion, did allow to every Individual Person a distinct immortal Soul, and that also endued with the Power and Faculty of Understanding and Discourse inherent in it. But then, as to the Soul's Use, and actual Exercise of this Faculty; upon their observing the great Difference between the same Object, as it was sensible, and affected the Sense, and as it was intelligible, and moved the Understanding, they held also the Necessity of another Principle without the Soul, to advance the Object, a gradu sensibili ad gradum intelligibilem, (as they speak) and so to make it actually fit to move and affect the Intellect. And this they called an Intellectus Agens; so that although the Soul was naturally endued with an Intellectual Power; yet, by reason of the great Distance of material, corporeal Things from the spiritual Nature of it, it could never actually apprehend them, till this Intellectus Agens did irradiate and shine upon them, and so prepare and qualify them for an Intellectual Perception. And this Intellectus Agens, some, and those none of the lowest Form in the Peripatetick School, have affirmed to be no other than God himself, that great Light which enlightens not only every Man, but every thing (according to its Proportion) in the World.

The Result and Application of which Discourse to my present Purpose is this; that certainly * those great Masters of Argument
and

* For it is ascribed to no less Persons than to Plato, and Aristotle after him, (as borrowing it from him) and that by several of the most eminent Interpreters of the latter, both Ancient and Modern; all of them proceeding upon this Ground, that in order to the actual Intellection of any Object, there is a spiritual Intellectual Light necessary to enable the object to move, or affect the intellectual Faculty, which yet the Object cannot give to itself, nor yet strike or move the said Faculty without it. And therefore they say, that there is required an Intellectus Agens, or Being distinct both from the Object and the Faculty too, which may so advance and spiritualize the Object, by casting an higher Light upon it, as to render it fit, and prepared thereby for an intellectual Perception. And so much as every thing which is such or such Secondarily, and by Participation from another, supposes some other to be so Primarily, and Originally by and from itself; and since and Knowledge could not but have been some weighty and considerable Reasons thus to interest an External Principle in the Intellectual Operations of Man's Mind. And so much of Reason, do I, for my part, reckon to be at the Bottom of this Opinion, that I have been often induced to think, that if we

God is the Primum Intelligibile in the Intellectual World, as the Sun is the Primum Visibile in the sensible and material World; they affirm the same Necessity of a superior and intellectual Light issuing from God, in order to move the Intellect, and form in it an intellectual Apprehension of things, which there is of a Light beaming from the Sun, for the causing an Act of Vision in the visive Faculty. And this they insist upon, not only as a Similitude for Illustration, but as a kind of Parallel Case, as to this particular Instance, how widely soever the things compared may differ from one another upon many other Accounts. This, I say, was held by several of the most noted of the Peripatetick Tribe; though others, I know, who are profess'dly of the same, do yet in this Matter go quite another way; allowing indeed, that there is, and must be an Intellectus Agens, but that it is no more than a different Faculty of the same Soul, or a different Function of the same Faculty; but by no means an Agent, or intelligent Being distinct from it. This, I confess, is of very nice Speculation, and made so by the Arguments producible on both sides, and consequently not so proper to make a Part in such a popular Discourse as I am here engag'd in; nor should I have ever mentioned it barely as a Philosophical Point, but as I conceived it improv'd into a Theological Use, as I have endeavour'd to improve it in the Discourse itself; to which therefore, I have chose rather to annex this by way of Annotation, than to insert it into the Body thereof.

should but strip things of mere Words and Terms, and reduce Notions to Realities, there would be found but little Difference (so far as it respects Man's Understanding) between the Intellectus Agens asserted by some Philosophers, and the Universal Grace, or common Assistances of the Spirit, asserted by some Divines; (and particularly by John Goodwin, calling it, the Pagan's Debt and Dowry) and that the Assertors of both of them seem to found their several Assertions upon much the same Ground; namely, upon their Apprehension of the Natural Impotence of the Soul of Man, immersed in Matter, to raise itself to such spiritual and sublime Operations, as we find it does, without the Assistance of some higher and divine Principle. And accordingly, this being admitted, that the Soul is no otherwise able to exert its Intellectual Acts, than by a Light continually flowing in upon it, from the great Fountain of Light, (whether that Light assists it by strengthening the Faculty itself, or brightening the Object, or both, it matters not, since the Result of both, as to the main Issue of the Action, will be the same.) I say, this being admitted, that God beams this Light into Man's Under-standings standing, and that, as a Free Agent, by voluntary Communications; so that he may withdraw or suspend what he thus communicates, as he pleases; how natural, how agreeable to Reason is it to conceive, that God being provoked by gross Sins, may deliver the Sinner to Delusion and Infatuation, by a Suspension and Substraction of this Light? For may not God blast the Understanding of such an one, by shutting up those Influences, which were wont to enliven his Reason in all its Discourses and Argumentations. Certain it is, that this frequently happens; and that the Wit and Parts of Men, who hold the Truth in Unrighteousness, are often blasted, so that there is a visible Decay of them, a strange unusual Weakness and Failure in them; and this not to be ascribed to any known Cause in the World, but to the just Judgment of God, stopping that eternal Fountain from which they had received their continual Supplies. This to me seems very intelligible, and equally rational: And accordingly may pass for the first Way, by which God may be said to send Delusion into the Minds of Men. But,

2. God may be said to do the same, by giving Commission to the great Deceiver, and

Spirit of Falshood to abuse and seduce the Sinner. A signal and most remarkable Example of which, we have in 1 Kings xxxii. 22. when Ahab was grown full ripe for Destruction, we find this Expedient for his Ruin pitched upon; viz. That he was to be persuaded to go up to Ramoth Gilcad, to fall there. But how, and by what Means was this to be effected? Why, the Text tells us, That there came forth a Spirit, and stood before the Lord, and said, I will persuade him. And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith? And he said, I will go forth, and will be a Lying Spirit in the Mouth of all his Prophets. And God said, Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also; go forth, and do so. We see here the Evil Spirit sent forth, and fully empowered by Almighty God to accomplish his Delusions upon a bold, incorrigible Sinner. And what Method God took then, we cannot deny, or prove it unreasonable, but that he may take still; where the same Sins prepare and fit Men for the same Perdition.

How the Devil conveys his Fallacies to the Minds of Men, and by what Ways and Arts he befools their Understandings, I shall not here dispute; nor, being sure of the thing itself, from the Word of God, that it is so, shall I be much solicitous about the Manner how. But thus much we may truly, and, by Consequence, safely say, that since it is too evident, that the Devil can make false Resemblances and Representations of things pass before our bodily Eyes; so that we shall be induced to believe, that we see that, which physically, and indeed, we do not see: Why may he not also suggest false Images of things, both to the Imagination, and to the Intellectual Eye of the Mind, (as different as they are from one another) and so falsify our Notions, and disorder our Apprehensions? It is plainly asserted in 2 Cor. iv. 4. That the God of this World has blinded the Minds of them which believe not. The great Sophister, and Prince of Darkness, (God permitting him) can strangely blindfold our Reason, and muffle our Understanding; and, no doubt, the chiefest Cause, that most of the obstinate, besotted Sinners of the World are not sensible, that the Devil blinds and abuses them, is, that he has indeed actually done so already.

For, how dreadfully did God consign over the Heathen World to a perpetual Slavery to his Deceits? They worshipped him, they consulted with him, and so absolutely were they sealed up under the Ruling Cheat, that they

they took all his Tricks and Impostures for Oracle and Instruction. And the Truth is, when Men, under the powerful Preaching of the Gospel, (such as the Church of England has constantly afforded) will grow Heathens in the Viciousness of their Practices, it is but just with God, to suffer them (by a very natural Transition) to grow Heathens too in the Grossness of their Delusions.

3. A third Way, by which God may be said to send Men Delusions, is by a providential disposing of them into such Circumstances of Life, as, through a peculiar Suitableness to their Corruption, have in them a strange Efficacy to delude and impose upon them. God, by a secret, unobserved Trace of his Providence, may cast Men under an heterodox, seducing Ministry, or he may order their Business and Affairs so, that they shall light into atheistical Company, grow acquainted with Hereticks, or possibly meet with pestilent Books, 'and with Arguments subtilly and speciously urged against the Truth; all which falling in with an ill-inclined Judgment, and worse-order'd Morals, will wonderfully recommend and set off the very worst of Errors to a Mind thus prepared for their Admission: No guard being sufficient to hinder their entring, and taking Possession, but where Caution and Virtue keep the Door. The Want of which Quality has been the grand, if not sole Cause, which in all Ages has brought so many over to, and in the Issue settled and confirmed them in some of the foulest Sects, and absurdest Heresies, that ever infested the Christian Church; and so deeply have the Wretches drank in the Delusion, that they have lived and died in it, and transmitted the surviving Poison of it to Posterity. And yet, as far and wide as such Heresies have reigned and raged in their Time, and as woful an Havock as they have made of Souls, they have been often taken up at first by mere Accident, or upon some slight, trivial, unprojected Occasion; no less unperceivable in their Rise, than afterward formidable in their Progress. But, as what is said of Affliction, in Job v. 6. may with equal Truth and Pertinence be said of every notable Event, bad as well as good, namely, that it comes not out of the Dust; so the Direction of all such small, and almost undiscernible Causes to such mighty Effects, as often follow from them, can proceed from nothing, but that all comprehending Providence, which casts its superintending Eye, and governing Influence over all, even the most minute and inconsiderable Passages in the World; inconsiderable indeed in themselves, but in their Consequences by no means so.

And therefore, as we find it expressed of him who kills a Man unwillingly, and by some undesigned Stroak or Accident, that God delivers that Man into his Hands, Exod. xxi. 12. so when a Man, by such odd, unforeseen Ways and Means, as we have before mentioned, comes to be drawn into any false, erroneous Belief or Persuasion, it may, with as true and solid Consequence, be affirmed, that by all this God sends such a Man a Delusion. As for instance, when by the special Disposal of God's Providence, Hushai the Archite suggested that Counsel to Absalom, in 2 Sam. xvii. 11, 12. which he believed, and followed to his Destruction; we may say, and that neither improperly, nor untruly, that God sent him that Deception; for it is expressly added in the 14th Verse, That God had appointed to defeat the Counsel of Achitophel, to the Intent that he might bring Evil upon Absalom. Likewise how emphatically, full and pregnant to the same Purpose, is that Instance of a false Prophet accustomed customed to deceive himself and others, in Ezek. xiv. 9. If the Prophet, says God, be deceived when he has spoken a thing, I the Lord have deceived that Prophet. God here names and appropriates the Action to himself, by a Way of proceeding incomprehensible indeed, but unquestionably just.

Let this therefore pass for a third Way, by which God delivers over a Sinner to Error and Circumvention. Which Point I shall conclude with those Exclamatory Words of St. Paul, so full of Wonder and Astonishment, in Rom. xi. 33. How unsearchable are his Judgments, and his Ways past finding out! So many Windings and Turnings, so many untraceable Meanders are there in the Providence of God, to carry on the Delusion of those Sinners who have been first so sedulous and industrious to delude themselves. In all which Passages, nevertheless, (how unaccountable soever they may be to us) still the Delusion is in him alone, who embraces it, a Sin; but in God who sends it, undoubtedly a Judgment only, and a very righteous one too. And now in the

4. And last place: We are not to omit another notable Way of God's delivering Sinners to Delusion; which is mentioned in the 9th Verse of the Chapter from whence our Text is taken, namely, his permitting Lying Wonders to be done before them. A Miracle in a large and general Sense is no more, but Effectus aliquis manifestus, cujus causa ignoratur; a manifest Effect, of which the Cause is not understood: But in a more restrained and proper Sense, it is defined a Work or Effect evident to Sense, and exceeding the Force of Natural Agents. Now, whether such an one can be done to confirm and give Credit to a Falshood proposed to Mens Belief; God lending his Power for the Trial of Men, to see, or rather to let the World see, whether they will be drawn off from the Truth or no, may well be disputed; though that Place in Deut. xiii. 1, 2. seems shrewdly to make for the Affirmative.

But as for that former Sort of Miracles, which indeed are only strange Things causing Wonder, and so may proceed from mere Natural Causes applying Activa Passivis, there is no question, but such as these may be done to confirm a false Doctrine or Assertion. Thus when Pharaoh harden'd his Heart against the express Command, and declared Will of God, God permitted him to be confirmed in his Delusion, by the Enchantments and Lying Wonders ders of the Magicians; all which were done only by the Power of the Devil. Forasmuch as Angels, both good and bad, having a full Insight into the Activity and Force of Natural Causes, by new and strange Conjunctions of the Active Qualities of some, with the Passive Capacities of others, can produce such wonderful Effects, as shall generally amaze and astonish poor Mortals, whose shorter Sight is not able to reach into the Causes of them.

The Church of Rome has (in this respect) sufficiently declared the little Value she has for the old Christian Truth, by the new upstart Articles she has superadded to it; and, besides this, to confirm one Error with another, she farther professes a Power of doing Miracles. So that, laying aside the Writings of the Apostles, we must, it seems, resolve our Faith into Legends; and old Wives Fables must take Place of the Histories of the Evangelists. And the Truth is, if Nonsense may pass for Miracle, Transubstantion has carried her Miracle-working Gift far above all the Miracles that were ever yet wrought in the World. But as for the many other miraculous Feats which she and her Sons pretend to, and boast of, I shall only say thus much of them; That though I doubt not, but most of them are the impudent Cheats of daring, designing Persons, set a foot and practised by them, to defy God, as well as to delude Men; yet it is no ways improbable, but that God may suffer the Devil to do many of them above what a bare Humane Power is able to do, and that in a Judicial and Penal way; thereby to fix and rivet both the Deceivers and Deceived in a Belief of those Lyes and Fopperies, which, in Opposition to the Light of Reason and Conscience, they had so industriously enslaved their Understandings to.

And now, I think, it is of as high Concernment to every Man, as the Salvation of his Soul ought to be, to reflect with Dread upon these severe and fearful Methods of Divine Justice. We, through an infinite and peculiar Mercy, have yet the Truth set before us; the pure, unmixed Truth of the Gospel, with great Light and Power held forth to us. But if we shall now obstinately shut our Eyes against it, stave it off, and bolt it out of our Consciences, and all this only from a secret Love to some base Minion Lust or Corruption, which that Truth would mortify, and root out of our Hearts; let us remember, that this is the very Height of Divine

Divine Vengeance; that those, who love a Eye, should be brought at length to believe it, and (as a natural Consequent of both) to perish by it too.

Which God, the great Fountain of Truth, and Father of Lights, of his infinite Compassion prevent. To whom be rendred and ascribed, (as is most due) all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

Ill-disposed Affections, both naturally and penally the Cause of Darknes and Error in the Judgment.

PART II.

2 THESS. ii. 11.

And for this Cause God shall send them strong Delusion, that they should believe a Lye.

WHEN I first made an Entrance upon these Words, I gathered the full Sense and Design of them (as I judged) into this one Proposition, viz.

That the not entertaining a sincere Love and Affection for the Duties of Religion, naturally, and by the just Judgment of God also, disposes Men to Error and Deceptions about the great Truths of Religion.

Which to me seeming to take in, and comprehend the full Sense and Drift of the Words,

Words, I then cast what I had to say upon them into these following Particulars.

I. To shew, how the Mind of Man can believe a Lye.

II. To shew, what it is to receive the Love of the Truth.

III. To shew, how the not receiving the Love of the Truth, comes to have such a malign Influence upon the Understanding, as to dispose it to Error and Delusion.

IV. To shew, how God can be properly said to send Men Delusions. And,

V. Since his sending them is here mentioned as a Judgment, (and a very severe one too) the next thing I propose was to shew wherein the extraordinary Greatness of it did consist. And,

VI. And Lastly, To improve the Point into some useful Consequences and Deductions from the Whole.

The Four first of these I have already dispatched in the preceding Discourse upon this Text and Subject; and so shall now proceed to the

V. Which was to shew, wherein the extraordinary and distinguishing Greatness of this Judgment did consist. For it is certain, that the Text here accounts and represents it above the ordinary Rate of Judgments commonly sent by God.

And this, I conceive, will remarkably shew itself to such, as shall consider it these two Ways:

1. Absolutely in itself.
2. In the Consequents of it.

Under the first of which two Considerations, the peculiar Dreadfulness of this Judgment will more than sufficiently appear, upon these two Accounts: As,

(1.) That it is Spiritual; and so directly affects and annoys the prime and most commanding Part of Man's Nature, his Soul; that noble Copy and Resemblance of its Maker, in small indeed, but nevertheless one of the liveliest Representations of him, that the God of Nature ever drew; and that in some of his greatest and most amiable Perfections. And if so, can any thing be imagined to come so like a killing Blast upon it, as that which shall at once strip it of this glorious Image,

Image, and stamp the black Pourtraiture of the foulest of Beings in the room of it? Besides, since nothing can either please or afflict to any considerable Degree, but by a close and intimate Application of itself to a Subject capable of such Impressions, still it must be the Spirituality of a Judgment, which entering where Body and Matter cannot, is the only thing that can strike a Man in his principal Capacity of being miserable; and consequently in that Part which enables him (next to the Angels themselves) to receive and drink in more of the Wrath, as well as Love of God, than any other Being whatsoever. In a spiritual, uncompounded Nature, the Capacities of Pain and Pleasure must needs be equal; though in a Corporeal, or Compounded one, the Sense of Pain is much acuter, and goes deeper than that of Pleasure is ever found to do. Accordingly, as to what concerns the Soul or Spirit, no doubt, our chief Passive, as well as Active Strengths are lodged in that; though it being an Object too near us to be perfectly apprehended by us, we are not able in this Life to know distinctly what a Spirit is, and what it can bear, and what it cannot. But our great Creator, who exactly knows our Frame, and had the first first Ordering of the whole Machine, knows also where, and by what a Soul or Spirit may be most sensibly touched and wounded, better a great deal than we, who are animated and acted by that Soul, do or can. And therefore, where he designs the severest Stroaks of his Wrath, we may be sure, that it is this spiritual Part of us which must be the great Scene, where such Tragical Things are to be acted. So that, if an angry Providence should at any time smite a Sinner in his nearest Temporal Concerns, we may, nevertheless, look upon such an Infliction, how sharp soever, but as a Drop of scalding Water lighting upon his Hand or Foot; but when God fastens the Judgment upon the Spirit or Inner Man, it is like scalding Lead poured into his Bowels, it reaches him in the very Center of Life; and where the Center of Life is made the Center of Misery too, they must needs be commensurate, and a Man can no more shake off his Misery, than he can himself.

Every Judgment of God has a Force more or less destructive, according to the Quality and Reception of the Thing which it falls upon. If it seizes the Body, which is but of a mortal and frail Make, and so (as it were) were) crumbles away under the Pressure, why then the Judgment itself expires through the Failure of a sufficient Subject or Recipient, and ceases to be predatory, as having nothing to prey upon. But that which comes out of its Creator's Hands, Immaterial and Immortal, endures and continues under the heaviest Stroak of his Wrath; and so is able to keep pace with the Infliction (as I may so express it) both by the Largeness of its Perception, and the Measure of its Duration. He, who has a Soul to suffer in, has something by which God may take full hold of him, and upon which he may exert his Anger to the utmost. Whereas, if he levels the Blow at that which is weak and mortal, the very Weakness of the Thing stricken at, will exclude the Violence of the Stroak: As when a sharp, corroding Rheum falls upon the Lungs; that Part being but of a spongy Nature, and of no hard Substance, little or no Pain is caused by the Distillation, but the same falling upon a Nerve fastened to the Jaw, or to a Joint, (the Consistency and Firmness of which shall give Force to the Impression) it presently causes the quickest Pain and Anguish, and becomes intolerable. A Cannon Bullet will do terrible Execution upon a Castle-Wall, or a Rampart, but none at all upon a Woolpack.

The Judgments, which God inflicts upon Men, are of several Sorts, and intended for several Ends, and those very different. Some are only probative, and designed to try and stir up those Virtues, which before lay dormant in the Soul. Some again are preventive, and sent to pull back the unwary Sinner from the unperceived Snares of Death, which he is ignorantly approaching to. And some, in the last Place, are of a punitive or vindictive Nature, and intended only to recompense or revenge the Guilt of past Sins; as Part of the Sinner's Payment in Hand, and as so many Fore-tastes of Death, and Earnests of Damnation.

Accordingly, we are to observe, that the Malignity of Spiritual Judgments consists chiefly in this, That their End, most commonly, is neither Trial nor Prevention, but Vengeance and Retribution. They are Corrosives, made not to heal, but to consume. And surely, such an one is the Judgment of being sealed up under a Delusion. Sampson, we read, endured many Hardships and Affronts, and yet sunk under none of them; but when an universal Sottishness was fallen upon all his his Faculties, and God's wonted Presence had forsook him, he presently became, as to all the generous Purposes of Life and Action, an uselefs and a ruined Person.

Whereas, on the other side, suppose, that God should visit a Man with extreme Poverty; yet still, he, who is as poor as Job, may be as humble, as patient, and as pious as Job too; and such Qualities will be always accounted Pearls and Treasures, though found upon the vilest Dunghill: Or, what if God should dash a Man's Name and Reputation, and make him a Scorn and a By-Word to all who know him; yet still the Shame of the Cross was greater, and one may be made the Way and Passage to a Crown, as well as the other? It was so, we are assured, to our great Spiritual Head; and why may it not, in its Proportion, prove the same likewise to his Spiritual Members? For the Conjunction between them is intimate, and the Inference natural. Or what again, if God should think fit to smite a Man with Sores, Sickness, and noisome Ulcers in his Body? yet even these, as offensive as they are, cannot unqualify a Lazarus for Abraham's Bosom. And so for all other Sorts of Calamities incident to this mortal State; should we ransack all the Magazines of God's Temporal Judgments, not one of them all, nor yet all of them together, can reach a Man in that, which alone can render him truly happy or miserable. For though the Mountains (as the Psalmist expresses it) should be carried into the Sea, and the whole World about him should be in a Flame, yet still (as Solomon says) a wise and a good Man shall be satisfied from himself; his Happiness is in his own Keeping; he has it at home, and therefore needs not seek for it abroad. But,

(2.) The Greatness of the Judgment of being brought under the Power of a Delusion, consists not only in the Spirituality of it, whereby it possesses and perverts the whole Soul in all the Powers and Offices of it, but more particularly, that it blasts a Man in that peculiar, topping Perfection of his Nature, his Understanding: For Ignorance and Deception are the very Bane of the Intellect, the Disease of the Mind, and the utmost Dishonour of Reason: There being no Sort of Reproach which a Man resents with so keen, and so just an Indignation, as the Charge of Folly. The very Word Fool draws Blood, and nothing but Death is thought an Equivalent to the Slander: Forasmuch as it carries in it an

insulting Negative upon that, which constitutes the Person so charged properly a Man; every Degree of Ignorance being so far a Recess and Degradation from Rationality, and consequently from Humanity itself. Nor is this any Modern Fancy or Caprice lately taken up, but the constant and unanimous Consent of all Nations and Ages. For what else do we think could make the Heathen Philosophers so infinitely laborious, and, even to a Miracle, industrious in the Quest of Knowledge? What was it, that engrossed their Time, and made them think neither Day nor Night, nor both of them together, sufficient for Study? But because they reckoned it a base, and a mean thing to be deceived, to be put off with Fallacy and Appearance instead of Truth and Reality, and overlooking the Substance and Inside of Things, to take up with mere Shadow and Surface. It was a known Saying of the Ancients, ἀπὸ σώματος νόσον, ἀπὸ ψυχῆς ἀμάθειαν. Keep off Ignorance from thy Soul, as thou wouldest a Disease or a Plague from thy Body. For when a Man is cursed with a blind, and a besotted Mind, it is a sure, and therefore a sad Sign, that God is leading such an one to his final Doom; it is both the Cause and the Fore-runner of his Destruction. For when the Malefactor comes once to have his Eyes covered, it shews, that he is not far from his Execution. In a word, he who has sunk so far below himself, as to have debased the governing Faculties of his Soul, and given up his Assent to an imperious, domineering Error, is fit for nothing but to be trumped and trampled upon, to be led by the Nose, and enslaved to the Designs of every bold Encroacher, either upon his Interest, or his Reason. And such, he may be sure, he shall not fail to meet with; especially, if his Lot casts him upon a Country abounding with publick, countenanced, religious Cheats, both Natives and Foreigners, Broachers of Heresies, Leaders of Sects, Tools and Under-Agents to our Romish Back-Friends, who can willingly enough allow them all Conventicles for the only proper Places to serve God in, and the Church (if need be) to serve a Turn by; of which, and the like Impostors, it may be truly said, with reference to their abused Profelytes, that they wear and carry the Trophies of so many captivated Reasons about them; that they cloath themselves with the Spoil of their wretched Intellectuals, and so, in effect, tread the very Heads of their Disciples

Disciples under their Feet. This is the Treatment which they are sure to find from such sanctified Deceivers ; these the Returns, which Delusion, submitted to, still rewards her Votaries with. And may God, I beseech him, in his just Judgment order Matters so, that such Practices and such Rewards may inseparably accompany and join one another, not only by an occasional, but by a fixed and perpetual Communion.

In the mean time, if Slavery be that, which all generous and brave Spirits abhor ; and to lose the choicest of Nature's Freeholds, and that in the most valuable of things, their Reason, be the worst of Slaveries ; then surely it must be the most inglorious Condition that can befall a rational Creature, to be possessed, rid, and governed by a Delusion. For still (as our Saviour has told us in Job. viii. 32.) it is the Truth which must make us free ; the Truth only, which must give a Man the Enjoyment, the Government, and the very Possession of himself. In a word, Truth has set up her Tribunal in the Soul, and sitting there as Judge herself, there can be no Exception against her Sentence, nor Appeal from her Authority.

But besides all this, there is yet something farther, which adds to the Misery of this kind of Slavery and Captivity of the Mind under Error; and that is, that it has a peculiar Malignity to bind the Shackles faster upon it, by a strange, unaccountable Love, which it begets of itself, in a Man's Affections. For no Man entertains an Error, but, for the Time that he does so, he is highly pleased and enamoured with it, and has a more particular Tendernefs and Fondnefs for a false Notion, than for a true; (as some for a Bastard, more than for a Son) for Error and Deception by all, who are not actually under them, are accounted really the Madness of the Mind. And Madness, it must be owned, naturally keeps off Melancholy, though often caused by it. For it makes Men wonderfully pleased with their own Extravagancies; and few, how much soever out of their Wits, are out of Humour too in Bedlam.

Now the Reason of this different Acceptableness of Truth and Error in the first Offers of them to the Mind, and the Advantage which the latter too often gets over the former, is, I conceive, from this, that it is natural for Error to paint and dawb, to trim, and use more of Art and Dress to set it off to the Mind, than Truth is observed to do. Which, trusting in its own native and substantial Worth, scorns all meretricious Ornaments, and knowing the Right it has to our Assent, and the indisputable Claim to all that is called Reason, she thinks it below her to ask that upon Courtesy, in which she can plead a Property; and therefore, rather enters than insinuates, and challenges Possession instead of begging Admission. Which being the Case, no wonder if Error, oiled with Obsequiousness, (which generally gains Friends, though it deserves none worth having) has often the Advantage of Truth, and thereby slides more easily and intimately into the Fool's Bosom, than the Uncourtlinefs of Truth will suffer it to do. But then again, we are to observe withall, that there is nothing which the Mind of Man has a vehement and passionate Love for, but it is so far enslaved, and brought into Bondage to that Thing. And if so; can there be a greater Calamity, that for so noble a Being as the Soul is, to love and court the Dictates of a commanding Absurdity? Nothing certainly being so tyrannical as Ignorance, where Time, and long Possession enables it to prescribe; nor so haughty and assuming, where Pride and Self-Conceit bids it set up for Infallible.

But now, to close this Point, by shewing, how vastly the Understanding differs from itself, when informed by Truth, and when abused by Error: Let us observe, how the Scripture words the Case, while it expresses the former by a State of Light, and the latter by a State of Darkness. Concerning both which, as it is evident, that nothing can be more amiable, suitable, and universally subservient both to the Needs, and to the Refreshments of the Creature, than Light: So nothing is deservedly accounted so dismal, hateful, and dispiriting, as Darkness is; Darkness, I say, which the Scripture makes only another Work for the Shadow of Death; and always the grand Opportunity of Mischief, and the surest Shelter of Deformity. For though to want Eyes be indeed a great Calamity, yet to have Eyes and not to see, to have all the Instruments of Sight, and the Curse of Blindness together, this is the very Height and Crisis of Misery, and adds a Sting and a Reproach to what would otherwise be but a Misfortune. For nothing envenoms any Calamity, but the Crime which deserves it.

I come

I come now to consider the distinguishing Greatness of the Judgment of God's sending Men strong Delusion, by taking a View of the Effects and Consequents of it; and we need cast our Eyes no farther than these Two. As,

1. That it renders the Conscience utterly useless, as to the great Office to be discharged by it in the Regulation and Supervisal of the whole Course of a Man's Life. A blind Watchman (all must grant) is equally a Nufance and an Impertinence. And such a Paradox, both in Reason and Practice, is a de-luded Conscience, viz. a Counsellor who cannot advise, and a Guide not able to direct. Nothing can be more close and proper to the Point now before us, than that Remark of our Saviour, in Matth. vi. 23. If the Light that is in thee be Darkness, how great must that Darkness be? Why, as great, no doubt, and of as fatal Consequence to the Affairs and Government of the Microcosm, or lesser World, as if, in the greater, God should put out the Sun, and establish one great, universal Cloud in the room of it; or, as if the Moon and Stars, instead of governing the Night, should be governed by it, and the noble Influences of the one should,

for Usefulness, give place to the Damps, and deadning Shades of the other. All which would quickly be granted to be monstrous and preposterous Things; and yet not more so, than to imagine a Man guided by a benighted Conscience in the great Concerns of Eternity; and to have that put out, which God had set up as the Sovereign Light of the Soul, to sit and preside there as the great Pilot to steer us in all our Choices, and to afford us those standing Discriminations of Good and Evil, by which alone a Rational Agent can proceed warrantably and safely in all his Actions.

As for the Will and the Affections, they are made to follow and obey, not to lead, or to direct. Their Office is not Apprehension, but Appetite; and therefore the Schools rightly affirm, that the Will, strictly and precisely considered, is Cæca Potentia, a blind Faculty. And therefore, if Error has perverted the Order, and disturbed the Original OEconomy of our Faculties; and a blind Will thereupon comes to be led by a blind Understanding, there is no Remedy, but it must trip and stumble, and sometimes fall into the noisome Ditch of the foulest Enormities and Immoralities. But now, whether this be not one of the

the highest Instances of God's vindictive Justice, thus to confound a Man with an erroneous, deceived Conscience, a little Reflexion upon the Miseries of one in such a Condition will easily demonstrate. For see the Tumult and Anarchy of his Mind; having done a good and a lawful Action, his Conscience alarms him with Scruples, with false Judgments, and anxious Reflexions; and, perhaps, on the other hand, having done an Act in itself evil and unlawful, the same Conscience excuses and acquits him, and soothes him into such Complacencies in his Sin, as shall prevent his Repentance, and so ascertain his Perdition. But now, what shall a deluded Person do in this sad Dilemma of Sin and Misery? For, if the Trumpet gives an uncertain Sound, who can prepare himself for the Battle? If it sounds a Charge, when it should sound a Retreat, how can the Soldier direct his Course? But, being thus befooled by the very Methods and Means of Safety, must of necessity find himself in the Jaws of Death before he is aware, and betrayed into his Enemy's Hands, without any Possibility of Help or Relief from his own. In like manner, where a Delusion enters so deep into, and gets such fast hold of the Conscience, that it corrupts or justles out the first Marks and Measures of Lawful and Unlawful, and thereby overthrows the standing Rules of Morality; a Man, in such a woful and dark Estate, can hardly be accounted in the Number of Rational Agents: For, if he does well, it is by Chance, neither by Rule nor Principle; nor by Choice, but by Luck; and if, on the contrary, he does ill, yet he is not assured, that he does so, being acted, in all that he goes about, by a blind Impetus, without either Forecast or Distinction. Both the Good and Evil of his Actions is brutish and accidental, and in the whole Course of them he proceeds as if he were throwing Dice for his Life, or at Cross and Pile for his Salvation. And this brings me to the other killing Consequence, wherein appears the Greatness of this Judgment of being delivered over to a Delusion. And that is,

2. Final Perdition mention'd by the Apostle, in the Verse immediately following the Text. God (says he) shall send them strong Delusion, that they should believe a Lye; that they all might be damned, who believed not the Truth. This is the utmost Period, to which Delusion brings the Sinner, but no less than what was intended by it from the very First.

Every

Every Error is in the Nature of it destructive. I do not say, that it always actually destroys; since the Tendency of an Action is one thing, but the Event another. For as in the Body there is hardly any Sore or Distemper, (how curable soever by Art or Physick) but what in the Malignity of its Nature, and the utmost Improvement of that Malignity, tends to the Ruin and Demolition of the whole Constitution: So in the Soul there is no considerable Error, which at any time infects it, (especially if it disposes to Practice) but being suffered to continue and exert its progressive and diffusive Quality, will be still spreading its Contagion, and by degrees eating into the Conscience, till it festers into a kind of spiritual Gangrene, and becomes mortal and incurable.

I must confess, I cannot imagine, that those Hereticks who err fundamentally, and by Consequence damnably, took their first Rise, and began to set up with a fundamental Error, but grew into it by insensible Encroachments, and gradual Insinuations, inuring and (as it were) training up the Belief to lesser Essays of Falshood, and proceeding from Propositions only suspicious, to such as were false,

from false to dangerous, and at length from dangerous to downright destructive. Hell is a deep Place, and there are many Steps of Descent to the Bottom of it; many obscure Vaults to be passed through, before we come to utter Darkness. But still the Way of Error is the Way to it. And as surely and naturally as the first Dusk and Gloom of the Evening tends to, and at last ends in the thickest Darkness of Midnight, so every Delusion, sinfully cherished and persisted in, (how easily soever it may sit upon the Conscience for some time) will, in the Issue, lodge the Sinner in the deepest Hell, and the blackest Regions of Damnation. And so I come to the

VI. And last Thing proposed for the handling of the Words; and that was, to draw some useful Consequences and Deductions from the five foregoing Particulars. As,

First of all. Since the Belief of a Lye is here undoubtedly noted for a Sin; and since Almighty God in the Way of Judgment delivers Men to it for not receiving the Love of the Truth; it follows, by most clear and undeniable Consequence, that it is no ways inconsistent with the Divine Holiness to affirm, that he may punish one Sin with another.

Though the Manner, how God does so, is not so generally agreed upon by all. For some here affirm, that Sin is said to be the Punishment of Sin, because in most sinful Actions, the Committer of them is really a Sufferer in and by the very Sin which he commits. As for Instance, the envious Man at the same time contracts the Guilt, and feels the Torment of his Sin; the same thing defiles and afflicts too; merits an Hell hereafter, and withall anticipates one here. The like may be said of Theft, Perjury, Uncleanness, and Intemperance; the Infamy, and other Calamities inseparably attending them, render them their own Scourges, and make the Sinner the Minister of God's Justice in acting a full Revenge upon himself. All this, I must confess, is true, but it reaches not the Matter in Question; which compares not the same Sin with itself, whereof the Consequences may undoubtedly be afflictive, but compares two distinct Sins together, and enquires concerning these, whether one can properly be the Punishment of the other?

Besides, if we weigh and distinguish Things exactly, when the envious Man groans under the Gnawings and Convulsions of his base Sin, and the lewd Person suffers the Brand and Disrepute of his Vice; in all this, Sin is not properly punished with Sin; but the Evil of Envy is punished with the Trouble of Envy, and the Sin of Intemperance with the Infamy of Intemperance; but neither is a State of Trouble, nor a State of Disgrace or Infamy properly a State of Sin; these are natural, not moral Evils; and opposed to the Quiet and Tranquillity, not to the Virtue of the Soul; for a Man may be virtuous without either Ease or Reputation. This Way therefore is short of resolving the Problem enquired into; which precisely moves upon this Point, viz. Whether for the Guilt of one Sin God can, by way of Penalty, bring the Sinner under the Guilt of another?

Some seem to prove, that he cannot, and that in the Strength of this Argument, that every Punishment proceeding from God as the Author of it, is just and good; but no Sin is or can be so; and therefore no Sin can be made by God the Punishment of another.

But nevertheless, the Contrary is held forth in Scripture, and that as expressly, as Words can well declare a Thing; for besides the clear Proof thereof, which the very Text carries with it, it is yet farther proved by those two irrefragable Places, in Rom. i. 24. The Apostle has these very Words, Wherefore God also gave them up to Uncleaness; and again in the 26th Verse, For this Cause God gave them up to vile Affections. Besides several other Places pregnant to the same Purpose, both in the Old Testament and the New. From all which it is certain, that God may make one Sin the Punishment of another. Though it still is to be remembered, that it is one thing for God to give a Man over to Sin, and quite another for God to cause him to sin; the former importing in it no more, than God's providential ordering of a Man's Circumstances so, that he shall find no Check or Hindrance in the Course of his Sin; but the latter implying also a positive Efficiency towards the Commission or Production of a sinful Act; which God never does, nor can do; but the other he both may, and, in a judicial Way, very often does.
Apostle

To the Argument therefore alledged, I answer thus: That it is very consonant both to Scripture and Reason, to distinguish in one and the same thing several Respects; and accordingly in Sin, we may consider the moral Irregularity of it; and so being in the very Nature of it Evil, it is impossible that there should be any Good in it; or we may consider Sin, as to the Penal Application of it to the Person who committed it, and as a Means to bring the just Judgment of God upon him for what he had done; and so some Good may be said to belong to it, though there be none at all in it.

Or to express the same thing otherwise, and perhaps more clearly and agreeably to vulgar Apprehensions. Sin may be considered either, 1. With reference to the proper Cause of it, the Will of Man committing or producing it, and so it is absolutely and entirely Evil. Or, 2. It may be considered, as it relates to the supreme Judge and Governor of the World, permitting, ordering, disposing and over-ruling the Existence and Event of it, to the Honour of his Wisdom and Justice; and so far it may be called Good, and consequently sustain the Nature of a Punishment proceeding from God. But you will reply; Can Sin be any ways good? I answer, That naturally and intrinsically it cannot, but extrinsically, accidentally, and occasionally, as ordered to a Subserviency to God's Glory, it may; and the Providence of God is no farther concerned about it: That is to say, it is good and just, that God should so order and dispose of an obstinate Sinner,

(as he did once of Pharaoh) that he should, through his own Corruption, fall into farther Sin, in order to his farther Punishment: But surely, this does by no means infer, that the Sins he thus falls into are good, though God's ordering of them may be so; and Darkness will be Darkness still, though God can, and often does bring Light out of it. That the Jews having rejected the Gospel so powerfully preached to them, should be delivered to Hardness of Heart, and final Impenitence, was just, and, by Consequence, good. But this is far from inferring, that the Hardness of Heart and Impenitence were so too. Sin may give Occasion for a great deal of Good to be exercised upon it, and about it, though there be none inherent in it; and upon that Account, when any Good is ascribed to it, or affirmed of it, it is purely by an extrinsick Denomination, and no more.

Now these Distinctions rightly weighed and applied, will fully and clearly accord the Doctrine laid down by us, both with the Notions of Human Reason, and the Holiness of the Divine Nature; and consequently render all Objections, and popular Exclamations against either of them, empty and insignificant.

Nor

Nor indeed is it very difficult, and much less impossible, to give some tolerable Account, how God delivers a Sinner over to farther Sins. For it may be very rationally said, that he does it partly by with-holding his restraining Grace, and leaving corrupt Nature to itself, to the full Swing and Freedom of its own extravagant Actings. Whereby a Man adds Sin to Sin, strikes out furiously, and without Controul, till he grows obstinate and incurable. And God may be said to do the same also by administering Objects and Occasions of Sin to such or such a Sinner, whose corrupt Nature will be sure to take Fire at them, and so actually to throw itself into all Enormities. In all which, God is not at all the Author of Sin, but only pursues the great Works, and righteous Ends of his Providence, in disposing of Things, or Objects in themselves good or indifferent towards the compassing of the same; howbeit, through the Poison of Mens vicious Affections, they are turned into the Opportunities and Fuel of Sin, and made the Occasion of their final Destruction.

But now of all the Punishments which the great and just God in his Anger inflicts, or brings upon a Man for Sin, there is none comparable to Sin itself. Men are apt to go on securely, pleasing themselves in the repeated Gratifications of their Vice; and they feel not God strike, and so are encouraged in the Progress of their Impiety. But let them not, for all that, be too confident; for God may strike, though they feel not his Stroke, and perhaps the more terribly for their not feeling it. Forasmuch as in Judgments of this Nature, Insensibility always goes deepest; and the Wrath of God seldom does such killing Execution, when it thunders, as when it blasts. He has certainly some dreadful Design carrying on against the Sinner, while he suffers him to go on in a smooth, uninterrupted Course of Sinning, and what that Design is, and the dreadfulnes of it, probably will not be known to him, till the Possibilities of Repentance are cut off, and hid from his Eyes; at present, it looks like the suffering a Man to perish and die by a Lethargy, rather than jog or awaken him. Believe it, it is a sad Case, when the Sinner shall never perceive, that God is angry with him, till he actually feels the Effects of his Anger in another World, where it can neither be pacified, nor turned away.

2. The Second great Consequence from the Doctrin hitherto treated of by us, of the Naturalness of Mens going off from the Love of the Truth to a Disbelief of the same, shall be to inform us of the surest and most effectual Way to confirm our Faith about the sacred and important Truths of Religion; and that is, to love them for their transcendent Worth and Purity; to fix our Inclinations and Affections upon them; and in a word, not only to confess, own, and acknowledge them to be Truths, but also to be willing that they should be so; and to rejoice with the greatest Complacency, that there should be such Things prepared for us, as the Scripture tells us there are. For we shall find, that Truth is not so much upon Terms of Courtesy with the Understanding, (which upon a clear Discovery of itself, it naturally commands) as it is with the Will and the Affections, which (though never so clearly discovered to them) it is always almost forced to woe, and make suit to.

I have been ever prone to take this for a Principle, and a very safe one too, viz. That there is no Opinion really good, (I mean good in the natural, beneficent Consequences thereof) which can be false. And accordingly,

when Religion, even Natural, tells us, That there is a God, and that he is a Rewarder of every Man according to his Works; that he is a most wise Governor, and a most just and impartial Judge, and for that Reason has appointed a Future Estate, wherein every Man shall receive a Retribution suitable to what he had done in his Life-time. And moreover, when the Christian Religion farther assures us, That Christ has satisfied God's Justice for Sin, and purchased eternal Redemption and Salvation, for even the greatest Sinners, who shall repent of, and turn from their Sins; and withall, has given such excellent Laws to the World, that if Men perform them, they shall not fail to reap an eternal Reward of Happiness, as the Fruit and Effect of the fore-mentioned Satisfaction; as on the other side, that if they live viciously, and die impenitent, they shall inevitably be disposed of into a Condition of eternal and insupportable Misery. These, I say, are some of the principal Things, which Religion, both Natural and Christian, proposes to Mankind.

And now, before we come to acknowledge the Truth of them; let us seriously, and in good Earnest examine them, and consider, how good, how expedient, and how suitably to all the Ends and Uses of humane Life it is, that there should be such Things; how unable Society would be to subsist without them; how the whole World would sink into another Chaos and Confusion, did not the Awe and Belief of these Things (or something like them) regulate and controul the Exorbitances of Mens head-strong and unruly Wills. Upon a thorough Consideration of all which, I am confident, that there is no truly wise and thinking Person, who (could he suppose, that the fore-cited Dictates of Religion should not prove really true) would not however wish at least that they were so. For allowing, (what Experience too sadly demonstrates) that an Universal Guilt has passed upon all Mankind through Sin; and supposing withall, that there were no Hopes, or Terms of Pardon held forth to Sinners; would not an Universal Despair follow an Universal Guilt? And would not such a Despair drive the Worship of God out of the World? For certain it is, that none would pray to him, serve, or worship him, and much less suffer for him, who despaired to receive any Good from him. And on the other side, could Sinners have any solid Ground to hope for Pardon of Sin, without an antecedent Satisfaction made to the Divine Justice so infinitely wronged by Sin? Or could the Honour of that great Attribute be preserved without such a Compensation? And yet farther, could all the Wit and Reason of Man conceive, how such a Satisfaction could be made, had not Religion revealed to us a Saviour, who was both God and Man, and upon that Account only fitted and enabled to make it? And after all, could the Benefits of this Satisfaction be attainable by any, but upon the Conditions of Repentance, and Change of Life; would not all Piety and Holy Living be thereby banished from the Societies of Men? So that we see from hence, that it is Religion alone which opposes itself to all the dire Consequences, and (like the Angel appointed to guard Paradise with a flaming Sword) stands in the Breach against all that Despair, Violence, and Impiety, which would otherwise irresistibly break in upon, and infest Mankind in all their Concerns, Civil and Spiritual.

And this one Consideration (were there no farther Arguments for it, either from Faith or Philosophy) is to me an irrefragable Proof of the Truth of the Doctrines delivered by it. For, that a Falshood (which, as such, is the Defect, the Reproach, and the very Deformity of Nature) should have such generous, such wholesome, and sovereign Effects, as to keep the whole World in Order, and that a Lye should be the great Bond or Ligament which holds all the Societies of Mankind together; keeping them from cutting Throats, and tearing one another in pieces, as (if Religion be not a Truth, all these salutary, publick Benefits must be ascribed to Tricks and Lyes) would be such an Assertion, as, upon all the solid Grounds of Sense and Reason, (to go no farther) ought to be looked upon as unmeasurably Absurd and Unnatural.

But our Saviour prescribes Men an excellent and unfailing Method to assure themselves of the Truth of his Doctrine, Joh. vii. 17. If any one (says he) will do the Will of the Father, he shall know of my Doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself. If Men could but be brought to look upon the Agenda of Christianity as suitable, they would never judge the Credenda of it irrational. There is a strange Intercourse, and mutual Corroboration between Faith and Practice. For as Belief first engages Practice, so Practice strengthens and confirms Belief.

The

The Body first imparts Heat to the Garment, but the Garment returns it with Advantage to the Body. God beams in peculiar Evidences and Discoveries of the Truth, to such as embrace it in their Affections, and own it in their Actions. There may be, indeed, some plausible, seeming Arguments brought against the Truth, to assault and shake our Belief of it: But they generally prevail, not by their own Strength, but by our Corruption; not by their Power to persuade, but by our Willingness to be deceived. Whereas, on the contrary, true Piety would effectually solve such Scruples, and Obedience answer all Objections. And so I descend now to the

3. And last of the Consequences deducible from the Doctrine first proposed by us; and this shall be to give some Account of the true Cause and Original of those two great Evils, which of late have so disturbed these Parts of the World; to wit, Atheism and Fanaticism. And,

(1.) For Atheism. Most sure it is, that no Doctrine or Opinion can generally gain upon Mens Minds, but (let it be never so silly and phantastical) it must yet proceed from some real Cause; and more particularly, either from the seeming Evidence of the Thing forcing a Belief of itself upon a weak Intellect, or from some strange, unaccountable Inclination of the Will and the Affections to such an Hypothesis: For the first of these, I would fain see some of those cogent, convincing Arguments, by which any one will own himself persuaded, that there is no God, or that he does not govern the Affairs of the World, so as to take a particular Cognizance of Mens Actions, in designing to them a future Retribution, according to the Nature and Quality of them here. It being all one to the World, whether there be no God, or none who governs it.

But how pitiful and ridiculous are the Grounds, upon which such Men pretend to account for the very lowest and commonest Phænomena of Nature, without recurring to a God and Providence? Such as, either the fortuitous Concourse of infinite little Bodies of themselves, and by their own Impulse (since no other Nature or Spirit is allowed by these Men to put them into Motion) falling into this curious and admirable System of the Universe. According to which Notion, the blindest Chance must be acknowledged to surpass and outdo the Contrivances

of the exactest Art: A Thing which the common Sense and Notion of Mankind must, at the very first Hearing, rise up against and explode. But if this Romance will not satisfy, then in comes the Eternity of the World, (the chief and most avowed Opinion set up by the Atheists, to confront and answer all the Objections from Religion;) and yet after all these high Pretences, so great and inextricable are the Plunges and Absurdities which these Principles cast Men into, that the Belief of a Being distinct from the World, and before it, is not only towards a good Life more conducive, but even for the Resolution of these Problems more philosophical. And I do accordingly here leave that old, trite, common Argument, (though nevertheless venerable for being so) drawn from a constant Series, or Chain of Causes, leading us up to a Supreme Mover, (not moved himself, by any thing but himself) a Being simple, immaterial, and incorporeal: I leave this, I say, to our High and mighty Atheists to baffle and confute it, and substitute something more Rational in the room of it, if they can; and in order thereunto, to take an Eternity to do it in.

But

But if this be the Case, why then is it made a Badge of Wit, and an Argument of Parts, for a Man to commence Atheist, and to cast off all Belief of Providence, all Awe and Reverence of Religion? Assuredly in this Matter, Mens Conviction begins not at their Understandings, but at their Wills, or rather at their brutish Appetites; which being immersed in the Pleasures and Sensualities of the World, would by no means, if they could help it, have such a thing as a Deity, or a future Estate of Souls to trouble them here, or to account with them hereafter. No; such Men, we may be sure, dare not look such Truths as these in the Face, and therefore they throw them off, and had rather be befooled into a friendly, favourable, and propitious Lye; a Lye which shall chuck them under the Chin, and kiss them, and at the same time strike them under the fifth Rib. To believe that there is no God to judge the World, is hugely suitable to that Man's Interest, who assuredly knows, that upon such a Judgment he shall be condemned; and to assert, that there is no Hell, must needs be a very benign Opinion to a Person engaged in such Actions, as he knows must certainly bring him thither. Men are Atheists, not because they have better Wits than other Men, but because they have corrupter Wills; nor because they reason better, but because they live worse.

(2.) The next great Evil, which has of late infested the Christian Church, and that Part of it in our Nation, more especially, is Fanaticism; That is to say, a Pretence to, and Profession of a greater Purity in Religion, and a more spiritual, perfect Way of worshipping Almighty God, than the National Established Church affords to those in Communion with it. This, I say, was, and is the Pretence; but a Pretence, so utterly false, and shamefully groundless, that in comparison of the Principle which makes it, Hypocrisy may worthily pass for Sincerity, and Pharisaism for the truest and most refined Christianity.

But as for those, who own and abet such Separations, to the infinite Disturbance both of Church and State, I would fain have them produce those mighty Reasons, those invincible Arguments which have drawn them from the Communion of the Church into Conventicles, and warranted them to prefer Schisms and Divisions before Christian Unity and Conformity: No; this is a thing which we may expect long enough, before they will so much as offer at, and much less perform; there being but little of Argument to be expected from Men professing nothing but Inspiration, and the Impulse of a Principle discernible by none but by themselves. And for my own part, I must sincerely declare, that upon the strictest Search I have been able to make, I could never yet find, that these Men had any other Reason or Argument to defend themselves and their Practices by, but that senseless and impolitick Encouragement which has been all along given them. But for all that, Men, who act by Conscience, as well as pretend it, will do well to consider, that in humane Laws and Actions, it is not the Penalty annexed which makes the Sin, nor consequently the withdrawing it which takes away the Guilt, but that the Sanctions of Men, as well as the Providence of God, may suffer, and even serve to countenance many Things in this World, which shall both certainly and severely too be reckoned for in the next.

In the mean time, to give a true, but short Account of the Proceedings and Temper of these Separatists. It was nothing but a kind of Spiritual Pride, which first made them disdain to submit to the Discipline, and from thence brought them to despise, and turn their Backs upon the established Worship of our Church; the sober, grave, and primitive Plainness of which began to be loathed by such brainsick, fanciful Opiniators, who could please themselves in nothing but Novelty, and the Ostentation of their own extemporary, senseless Effusions; fit to proceed from none, but such as have the Gift of Talking in their Sleep, or Dreaming while they are awake.

And for this Cause, no doubt, God in his just and severe Judgment delivered them over to their own sanctified and adored Nonsense, to confound and lose themselves in an endless Maze of Error and Seduction: So that, as soon as they had broke off from the Church, (through the Encouragement given them by a Company of Men, which had overturned all that was settled in the Nation) they first ran into Presbyterian Classes, from thence into Independent Congregations. From Independents they improved into Anabaptists. From Anabaptists into Quakers: From whence being able to advance no farther, they are in a fair Way to wheel about to the other Extreme of Popery. A Religion and Interest the most loudly decried, and most effectually served by these Men, of any other in the World besides.

But whosoever, in the great Concerns of his Soul, would pitch his Foot upon sure Ground; let him beware of these Whirl-Pools, and of turning round and round, till he comes to be seized with such a Giddiness, as shall make him fall finally and irrecoverably, not from the Church only, but even from God himself, and all Sense of Religion. And therefore, to prevent such a fatal Issue of things; let a Man in the next place consider, that the way to obtain a settled Persuasion of the Truth of Religion, is to bring an honest, humble, and unbiaſſed Mind, open to the Embraces of it; and to know withall, that if he chooses the Truth in Simplicity, God will confirm his Choice with Certainty and Stability.

To which God, the Father of Lights, and the Fountain of all Truth, be render'd and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

LUKE xii. Ver. 15.

P A R T I.

LUKE xii. 15.

And he said unto them, take heed, and beware of Covetousness; for a Man's Life consisteth not in the Abundance of the Things which he possesseth.

IN these Words our Saviour cautions his Disciples, and the rest of his Hearers, against Covetousness: A Vice, which by striking in with some of the most active Principles of our Nature, and at the same time perverting them too, has ever yet been, and will, no doubt, ever be too hard for all the Rules and Arguments brought against it from bare Morality. So that, as a Grammatician once answered his Prince, offering to enter into a Dispute with him upon a Grammatical Point, that he would by no means dispute with one who had many Legions at his Command; so as little Success is like to be found in managing a Dispute against Covetousness, which sways and carries all before it, in the Strength of that great Queen-Regent of the World, Money; the absolute Commandress of Fleets and Armies, and (which is more) very often of their Commanders too. So hard has common Experience found it for some to draw their Swords heartily, even against an Enemy, who has first drawn his Purse to them; such an universal Influence has this mighty Vice: A Vice, which, by a kind of amphibious Quality, is equally strong by Sea and Land, and consequently never out of its Element; whatsoever Place, Station, or Condition it may be in. From which, and too many the like Instances, it will, I fear, prove but too evident, that let Philosophers argue, and Rhetoricians declaim never so much against this always decried, but yet always practised Vice, Covetousness will hardly ever lose its Reputation and Credit in Mens Minds, (whatsoever it may in their Mouths) so long as there shall be such a Thing in the World, as Money, to hold them fast by.

The Words contain in them these two general Parts:

I. A Dehortation or Dissuasive from Covetousness. Take heed, and beware of Covetousness.

II. A Reason enforcing it, and coupling the latter Part of the Text with the former, by the causal Particle [For] for a Man's Life consisteth not in the Abundance of the Things which he possesseth.

If we take the whole Complex of the Dehortation and the Reason of it together, as they are joined in the Text, we shall find that they are intended as an Answer to a tacit Argumentation apt to be formed by the Minds of Men, in the behalf of Covetousness, and founded upon these three Principles:

1. That it is natural, (and, I may add also, allowable) for every Man to endeavour to make his Condition in this Life, as happy, as lawfully he can.

2. That to abound with the good Things of this World, seems the direct and ready Way to procure this Happiness. And,

3. That

3. That Covetousness is the proper and effectual Means to acquire to a Man this Abundance.

Upon these three Principles, I say, is built that Plea or Discourse, with which the Heart of every Worldling, upon the Face of the Earth, endeavours to satisfy itself of the Reasonableness of Covetousness. It being impossible, without some Pretence of Reason, for a Rational Agent to maintain a quiet Mind in any ill Course or Practice whatsoever: No Man ever doing any thing, which, at the Time of his doing it, he does not actually judge, that he has Reason to do the same, whether that Judgment be right or wrong, true or false. And therefore, since our Saviour, in the Text we are upon, first supposes, and then sets himself to confute this Plea, by overthrowing some of those sophistical, or sophistically applied Principles, upon which it leaned, the particular Knowledge of them was regularly to be premised by us, as the Basis and Ground work of the whole Prosecution of the Subject now before us. In which, we shall begin with the first General Part of the Text; to wit, the Dehortation itself, and so confining our Discourse wholly wholly to this at present, we will consider in it these three following Particulars:

1. The Author of this Dehortation, who was Christ himself; the great Instructor, as well as Saviour of the World.

2. The Thing he dehorts us from; to wit, the meanest and most sordid of all Vices, Covetousness. And,

3. And Lastly. The Way prescribed by him, as the most sovereign and effectual Preservative from it; to wit, a constant Guard, and a watchful Eye over it. Take heed, says he, and beware of it; the present Danger, and the consequent Mischief making the utmost Caution against it, no more than sufficient.

All which Particulars put together, viz. the Quality of the Person dehorting us, the Nature of the Thing he dehorts us from, and the Certainty of the Remedy he advises us to, make it disputable, whether we are to take the Words of the Text, as the absolute Command of a Legislator, or the endearing Counsel of a Friend: I think we have great Reason to account them both, and that the Text will sufficiently justify the assigning a double Ground of the Precept, where the Doubling of that, must needs also double our Obligation to the Practice; while as a Counsel, we ought to follow it; and as a Command, we are bound to obey it.

To proceed therefore upon the forementioned Particulars; we shall treat of each of them in their Order. And,

I. For the great Author of the Dehortation or Dissuasion here set down, who was Christ himself. He said unto them, beware of Covetousness. That is, [He] emphatically [He] with a peculiar Significance. For in all Persuasions to, or Dissuasions from any thing, the Arguments enforcing both, must be either founded upon the Authority of the Person proposing them, or the Reason and Evidence of the Thing proposed. As to the first of which, can any thing in Nature be imagined more convincing, than the Assertion or Word of one, whose infinite Knowledge makes it impossible for him to be deceived, and whose infinite Goodness makes it equally impossible for him to deceive? The first of which must be abundantly sufficient to oblige our Belief, and the other to claim our Obedience. But both of them inseparably accompanied the Words of our Saviour; who (as the Evangelist tells us) speaking as one having Authority,

Authority, and (by the very Testimony of his Enemies) as none ever spoke before him, could not sink below this high Character, in his Discourses upon any Occasion or Subject whatsoever; but upon none more eminently did he, or could he shew it, than upon this of Covetousness; where nothing but the superlative Abilities of the Speaker could reach the Compass of the Subject spoken to; nor any thing, but the unblemished Virtue of the Reprover, put the Thing reprov'd out of Countenance, or all Defence of itself imaginable. For it is Innocence which enables Eloquence to reprove with Power; and Guilt attacked flies before the Face of him who has none. And therefore, as every Rebuke of Vice comes, or should come from the Preacher's Mouth, like a Dart or Arrow thrown by some mighty Hand, which does Execution proportionably to the Force or Impulse it received from that which threw it; so our Saviour's matchless Virtue, free from the least Tincture of any thing immoral, armed every one of his Reproofs with a piercing Edge, and an irresistible Force: So that Truth, in that respect, never came naked out of his Mouth, but either cloathed with Thunder, or wrapped up in all the Powers of Persuasion; still his Person animated, and gave Life and Vigour to his Expression; all his Commands being but the Transcript of his own Life, and his Sermons a living Paraphrase upon his Practice; thus, by the strongest Way of Argumentation, confuting, and living down Covetousness long before he preached against it. For though it is most true, that, in Hearing the Word, Men should consider only the Nature of the Matter delivered to them, (which, if it contains a Duty, will be sure to make good its Hold upon them, be the Quality of him who delivers it what it will;) yet since also the Nature of Man is such, that in all Addresses to him, the Person himself will be still as much considered as his Discourse, and perhaps more; and since the Circumstances of his Condition will always have a mighty, determining Influence upon the Credibility of his Words, we will consider our Saviour discoursing against Covetousness under these two Qualifications:

(1.) As he was Lord of the Universe. And,

(2.) As he was depressed to the lowest Estate of Poverty.

By the former of which, he possessed the Fulness of the Godhead Bodily; by the latter, he humbled, and (according to the Apostle's postle's Phrase) even emptied himself to the abject Estate of a Servant. He who was the First-born of the Almighty, and so, by the Title of Primogeniture, Heir of all Things, and, by Consequence, had an universal, unlimited Claim to all that was Great or Glorious within the whole Compass of Nature, yet had so little of this Claim in Possession, that he tells us, he was in a poorer and more forlorn Condition, than the very Foxes of the Field, or the Fowls of the Air, as to the common Accommodations of Life. It was a Saying in the Jewish Church, and received with an Universal Reverence, both by the Learned and Unlearned, that the World was made for the Messias. And we Christians hold, That it was made by him too. For he was (as the Prophet Esay styles him) the Mighty God, and consequently, the Creator of all that was not God. The Son of Abraham by one Nature, and Eternally before Abraham by another. And yet this wonderful Almighty Person, whom the whole World could not circumscribe, by reason of the Divinity and Immensity of his Being, had not so much in the same World, as where to lay his Head, by reason of the Meanness of his Condition. From all which it follows, that since the Quality of the Person persuading makes one great Part or Ingredient in the Persuasion, nothing could come more invincibly, by way of Argument, against Covetousness, than a Discourse against it from the Mouth of him, who created, governed, and had a rightful Title to all things, and yet possessed Nothing. And thus much for the first thing to be considered in the Dehortation; namely, the Person dehorting, who was Christ himself. Pass we now to the

2. Thing to be considered in it, to wit, the Thing we are dehorted from, which is Covetousness. And here, one would think, it might well be supposed, that there needed no great Pains to explain what this is, if we may rationally conclude, that Men know the Things they practise, or (in other Words) understand what they do; yet since the very Nearness of the Object sometimes hinders the Sight of it, and nothing is more usual, than for Men to be most of all Strangers at Home, and to overlook the darling Sin lying in their own Bosoms, where they think they can never sufficiently hide it, (especially from themselves) I shall endeavour to give some Account of the Nature of this Vice. And that,

(1.) Negatively, by shewing what it is not.
And,

(2.) Positively, by declaring what it is, and wherein it does consist; for there is often a Fallacy on both Sides. And,

(1.) For the Negative. Covetousness is not that prudent Forecast, Parsimony, and Exactness, by which Men bound their Expences according to the Proportion of their Fortunes. When the River is shallow, surely it is concerned to keep within its own Banks. No Man is bound to make himself a Beggar, that Fools or Flatterers may account him generous; nor to spend his Estate to gratify the Humour of such, as are like to be the first who shall despise and slight him, when it is spent. If God bestows upon us a Blessing, we may be confident, that he looks upon it as worth our keeping. And he only values the good Providence of God for giving him an Estate, who uses some Providence himself in the Management of it; and by so doing, puts it into his Power to relieve the Poverty of the Distressed, and to recover a sinking Friend, when the Circumstances of Things shall stamp his Liberality with the Name of Charity and Religion. For indeed, he only is in a true Sense charitable, who can sacrifice that to Duty, which otherwise he knows well enough, both how to prize, and make use of himself; and he alone can be said to love his Friend really, who can make his own Convenience bow to his Friend's Necessity, and thereby shews, that he values his Friendship more than any thing that his Friend can receive from him. But he, who with a promiscuous undistinguishing Profuseness does not so much dispense, as throw away what he has, proclaims himself a Fool to all the Intelligent World about him; and is utterly ignorant, both of what he has, and what he does; till at length having emptied himself of all, he comes to have his Purse and his Head both alike.

We never find the Scripture commending any Prodigal but one, and him too only for his ceasing to be so. Whose Courses, if we reflect upon, we shall see his Prodigality bringing him from his revelling Companions, and his riotous Meats, to the Swine, and to the Trough; and from imitating their Sensuality, by a Natural Consequence to take up with their Diet too. Prodigality is the Devil's Steward and Purse-Bearer, ministering to all Sorts of Vice; and it is hard, if not impossible, for a prodigal Person to be guilty guilty of no other Vice, but Prodigality. For Men generally are prodigal, because they are first intemperate, luxurious or ambitious. And these, we know, are Vices too brave and costly to be kept and maintained at an easy rate; they must have large Pensions, and be fed with both Hands, though the Man who feeds them starves for his Pains. From whence it is evident, that that which only retrenches, and cuts off the Supplies of these gaping, boundless Appetites, is so far from deserving the ugly Name of Avarice, that it is a noble Instrument of Virtue, a Step to Grace, and a great Preparation of Nature for Religion. In a word, so far as Parsimony is a Part of Prudence, it can be no Part of Covetousness.

And thus having shewn Negatively, what the Covetousness here condemned by our Saviour is not: Let us now shew Positively, What it is, and wherein it does consist. And we shall find, that it consists in these following Things:

(1.) An anxious, carking Care about the Things of this World. Such a Care, as is expressed in Matth. vi. 28. by taking Thought; the Greek Word is, ἵτ μεριμνᾶτε, and in the 31st Verse, μὴ ἐν μεριμνήσητε. A Word importing importing such a Thoughtfulness, as distracts and (as it were) divides the Mind, and after it has divided it, unconscionably takes both Parts to itself. In short, such a Care is here meant, as lies like a kind of Wolf in a Man's Breast, perpetually gnawing and corroding it, and is elsewhere expressed by St. Luke xii. 29. by being of doubtful Mind. As when a Man after all his Labours, in the sober, rational, and industrious Pursuit of his lawful Calling, yet distrusts the Issues of God's Providence for a competent Support therein, and dares not cast himself upon that Goodness of God, which spreads its Fatherly Bounty over all, even the least, the lowest, and most contemptible Parts of the Creation. Such an one is a direct Reproach to his great Lord and Maker, while he can find in his Heart to think him so careful of the very meanest Rank of Beings, as in the meantime to overlook the Wants of his noblest Creatures, whom he made to lord it over all the rest, and (as a farther Honour) designed themselves for his own peculiar Service; but yet so, that he never intended that they should serve even him the Lord of all for nothing. No; the Methods of Providence are far from being so preposterous, as while it adorns the Lilies, and cloths the very Grass of the Field, to leave him naked, who was ordered by God and Nature to set his Feet upon both, and while it feeds the Fowls of the Air, and the Beasts of the Land, to suffer him to starve, for whose Food both of them were made. Besides that Man has a Claim also to a Promise for his Support and Sustainance, which none ever missed of, who came up to the Conditions of it. And now, can God require an easier and more reasonable Homage from the Sons of Men, than that they should trust him, who neither will, nor can fail them? And withall, rest satisfied, quiet, and composed in their Thoughts, while they do so? For surely, the infinite Power and Goodness of God may much more rationally be depended upon, than a Man's own pitiful Projects and Endeavours, so much subject to Chance and Disappointment, be the Man himself never so skilful, never so laborious. See with what Strength of Reason our Saviour argues down this solicitous, restless Temper of Mind, in the forementioned 6th of St. Matthew, from this one unanswerable Consideration, that if God so carefully and tenderly provides for Mankind in their greatest Concernments, surely he will not relinquish them in those, where the Difficulty of a Supply is less, and yet their Inability to supply themselves altogether as great. Is not the Life (says our Saviour) more than Meat, and the Body than Raiment? And shall we commit the former to the common Mercies of Providence, but wholly distrust it for the latter? And instead thereof, fly for Succour to our own short, fallible Contrivances? When it is certain, that our Thinking can no more of itself work an Alteration in our Civil, than it can in our Natural Estate; nor can a Man independently upon the over-ruling Influence of God's Blessing, care and carek himself one Penny richer, any more than one Cubit taller: The same All-disposing Power no less marking out the exact Bounds and Measures of our Estates, than determining the just Stature of our Bodies; and so fixing the Bulk and Breadth of one, as well as the Height of the other. We vainly think, we have these Things at the Disposal of our own Wills, but God will have us know, that they are solely the Result of His. But,

(2.) Covetousness implies in it also, a Rapacity in getting. When Men (as it were) with open Mouth fly upon the Prey; and catch with that Eagerness, as if they could never open their Hands wide enough, nor reach them out far enough, to compass the Objects of their boundless Desires. So that, had they, (as the Fable goes of Briareus) each of them an hundred Hands, they would all of them be employed in grasping and gathering, and hardly one of them in giving or laying out; but all in receiving, and none in restoring; a thing in itself so monstrous, that nothing in Nature besides is like it, except it be Death and the Grave, the only things I know, which are always robbing and carrying off the Spoils of the World, and never making Restitution. For otherwise, all the Parts of the Universe, as they borrow of one another, so they still pay what they borrow, and that by so just and well ballanced an Equality, that their Payments always keep pace with their Receipts. But on the contrary, so great, and so voracious a Prodigy is Covetousness, that it will not allow a Man to set Bounds to his Appetites, though he feels himself stinted in his Capacities; but impetuously pushes him on to get more, while he is at a loss for Room to bestow, and an Heart to enjoy what he has already. This ravenous Vultur-like Disposition the Wise-Man expresses, by making Haste to be rich.

Prov. xxviii. 20. adding withall, that he who does so, shall not be innocent. The Words are a Meiosis, and import much more than they exprefs, as there is great Reason they should; for so much of Violence is there in the Course or Practice here declared against, that neither Reason nor Religion, Duty nor Danger shall be able to stop such an one in his Career, but that he will leap over all Mounds and Fences, break through Right and Wrong, and even venture his Neck in Pursuit of the Design his Head and his Heart are so set upon. And this, I confess, is Haste with a Witness, but not one Degree more, than what is implied in making haste to be rich. For from hence it is, that we see some Estates, like Mushrooms, spring up in a Night, and some who were begging or borrowing at the beginning of the Year, ready to be Purchasers before it comes about. But this is by no means the Course or Method of Nature; the Advances of which are still gradual, and scarce discernible in their Motions; but only visible in their Issue. For no body perceives the Grass grow, or the Shadow move upon the Dial, till after some Time and Leisure we reflect upon their Progress. In like manner, usually and naturally, Riches, if lawful, rise by Degrees, and rather come dropping by small Proportions into the honest Man's Coffers, than pouring in like a Torrent or Land-Flood, which never brings so much Plenty, where at length it settles, but it does as much Mischief all along where it passes.

Upon the whole Matter, the greedy Getter is like the greedy Eater; it is possible, that by taking in too fast, he may choak or surfeit, but he will hardly nourish and strengthen himself, or serve any of the noble Purposes of Nature, which rather intends the Security of his Health, than the Gratification of his Appetite.

And in this respect, Covetousness, a thing of itself bad enough, is heightened by the Conjunction of another every whit as bad, which is Impatience. A Quality sudden, eager, and insatiable, which grasps at all, and admits of no Delay; scorning to wait God's Leisure, and attend humbly and dutifully upon the Issues of his wise and just Providence. Such Persons would have Riches make themselves Wings to fly to them; though one, much wiser than they, has assured us, Prov. xxiii. 5. that when they make themselves Wings, they intend to fly away.

But certainly, in this Business of growing rich, poor Men (though never so poor) should slack their Pace, (how open soever they found the Way before them) and (as we may so express it) join something of the Cripple to the Beggar, and not think to fly, or run forthwith to a total and immediate Change of their Condition, but to consider, that both Nature and Religion love to proceed leisurely and gradually, and still to place a middle State between two Extremes. And therefore, when God calls needy, hungry Persons to Places and Opportunities of raising their Fortunes, (a thing which of late has happened very often) it concerns them to think seriously of the Greatness of the Temptation which is before them, and to consider the Danger of a full Table to a Person ready to starve. But generally such, as in this manner step immediately out of Poverty into Power, know no Bounds, but are infinite and intolerable in their Exactions. So that in Prov. xxviii. 3. Solomon most elegantly compares a poor Man oppressing the Poor, to a sweeping Rain which leaves no Food. A Rain which drives and carries off all clean before it; the least Finger of a poor Oppressor being heavier than the Loins of a rich one;

one ; for while one is contented to fleece the Skin, the other strips the very Bones. And all this to redeem the Time of his former Poverty, and at one Leap (as it were) to pass from a low and indigent, into a full and magnificent Condition. Though, for the most part, the righteous Judgment of God overtakes such Persons in the Issue, and commonly appoints this for their Lot, that Estates sudden in the Getting, are but short in the Continuance. They rose, (as I shew) like Land-Floods, and like them they fell.

3. Covetousness implies in it all sinister and illegal Ways of getting. And if we dwell fully upon this, we shall find, that it is not for nothing, that Covetousness is called by the Apostle, 1 Tim. vi. 10. The Root of all Evil. A Root as odious for its Branches, as the Branches for their Fruit ; a Root fed with Dirt and Dunghills, and so no wonder, if of as much Foulness, as Fertility: There being no kind of Vice whatsoever, but Covetousness is ready to adopt, and make use of it, so far as it finds it instrumental to its Designs ; and such is the Cognation between all Vices, that there is hardly any, but what very often happens to be instrumental, and conducing to others besides itself. It is Cove-tousness which commands in chief, in most of the Insurrections and Murders, which have infested the World; and most of the Perjuries and pious Frauds which have shamed down Religion, and even dissolved Society, have been resolved into the commanding Dictates of this Vice. So that, whatsoever has been pretended, Gain has still been the Thing aimed at, both in the grosser Outrages of an open Violence, and the sanctified Rogueries of a more refined Dissimulation. None ever acted the Traytor and the Judas expertly, and to the Purpose, but still there was a Quid dabitis behind the Curtain. Covetousness has been all along, even in the most villanous Contrivances, the principal, though hidden Spring of Motion; and lying, cheating, hypocritical Prayers and Fastings, the sure Wheels, by which the great Work (as they called it) has still gone forward. Nay, so mighty a Sway does this pecuniary Interest bear even in Matters of Religion, that Toleration itself, (as sovereign a Virtue as it is said to be of, for preserving Order and Discipline in the Church) yet, without Contribution, would hardly be able to support the separate Meetings of the Dissenting Brotherhood; but that, if the People should

once grow fullen, and shut up their Purfes, it is fhrewdly to be feared, that the Preachers themfelves would shut up the Conventicles too: At present, 'tis confefled, the Trade is quick and gainful, but ftill, like other Trades, not to be carried on without Money. Gold is the beft Cordial to keep the Good-Old-Caufe in Heart: and there is little Danger of its fainting, and much lefs of ftarving, with fo much of that in its Pocket.

The Truth is, Covetoufnefs is a Vice of fuch a general Influence and Superintendency over all other Vices, that it will ferve its Turn, even by thofe, which at firft View feem moft contrary to it. So that it will command Votaries to itfelf, even out of the Tribe of Epicurus, and make Uncleanness, Drunkennefs, and Intemperance itfelf minifter to its Defigns; for let a Man be but rich and great, and there fhall be enough to humour him in his Lufts, that they may go Sharers with him in his Wealth; enough to drink, and sot, and caroufe with him, if by drinking with him, they may come alfo to eat, and drink, and live upon him, and by creeping into his Bofom, to get into his Pocket too; fo that we need not go to the cozening, lying, perjured Shop-keeper, who will curse himself into Hell forty times over, to gain Two-Pence or Three-Pence in the Pound extraordinary, and sits retailing away Heaven and Salvation for Pence and Half-Pence, and seldom vends any Commodity, but he sells his Soul with it, like brown Paper, into the Bargain. I say we need not go to these forlorn Wretches, to find where the covetous Man dwells, for sometimes we may find him also in a clean contrary Disguise, perhaps gallanting it with his Ladies; or drinking and roaring, and shaking his Elbow in a Tavern with some rich young Cully by his Side; who from his dull, rustick Converse, (as some will have it) is newly come to Town to see Fashions, and know Men (forsooth;) and having newly buried his Father in the Country, to give his Estate a more honourable Burial in the City.

In short, the covetous Person puts on all Forms and Shapes, runs through all Trades and Professions, haunts all Places, and makes himself expert in the Mystery of all Vices, that he may the better pay his Devotions to his God Mammon. And so in a quite different Way from that of the blessed Apostle, he becomes all things to all Men, that he may by any Means gain something ; for he cares not much for gaining Persons, where he can gain nothing else.

4. And lastly, Covetousness implies in it a Tenaciousness in keeping. Hitherto we have seen it filling its Bags, and in this Property we find it sealing them up. In the former, we have seen how eagerly it can catch ; and in this latter, it shews us how fast it can gripe. And we need no other Proof of the peculiar Baseness of this Vice, than this. For as the prime, and more essential Property of Goodness, is to communicate and diffuse itself ; so, in the same Degree, that any Thing encloses, and shuts up its Plenty within itself, in the same it recedes, and falls off from the Nature of Good. If we cast our Eyes over the whole Creation, we shall find every Part of the Universe contributing something or other, either to the Help, or Ornament of the whole. The great Business of Providence is to be continually issuing out fresh Supplies of the Divine Bounty to the Creature, that lives and subsists like a Lamp fed by continual Infusions from the same Hand, which first lights and sets it up. So that Covetousness is nothing so much, as a grand Contradiction to Providence, while it terminates terminates wholly within itself. The covetous Person lives as if the World were made altogether for him, and not he for the World, to take in every thing, and to part with nothing. Charity is accounted no Grace with him, nor Gratitude any Virtue. The Cries of the Poor never enter into his Ears; or if they do, he has always one Ear readier to let them out, than the other to take them in. In a word, by his Rapines and Extortions, he is always for making as many poor as he can, but for relieving none, whom he either finds or makes so. So that it is a Question, whether his Heart be harder, or his Fist closer. In a word, he is a Pest and a Monster; Greedier than the Sea, and Barrenner than the Shoar: A Scandal to Religion, and an Exception from common Humanity; and upon no other Account fit to live in this World, but to be made an Example of God's Justice in the next.

Creditor and Debtor divide the World, and he who is not one, is certainly the other. But the covetous Wretch does not only shut his hand to the Poor in Point of Relief, but to others also in Point of Debt. Upon which Account, the Apostle James upbraids the rich Men, in Jam. v. 4. Behold, says he, the Hire

Hire of the Labourers who have reaped down your Fields, which of you is kept back, crieth.

These, it seems, being the Men who allow neither Servants nor Workmen any other Wages, than (as the Saying is) their Labour for their Pains. Men, generally as the World goes, are too powerful to be just, and too rich to pay their Debts. For whatsoever they can borrow, they look upon as lawful Prize, and extremely despise and laugh at the Folly of Restitution. But well it is for the poor Orphan and the Oppressed, that there is a Court above, where the Cause of both will be infallibly recognized, and such Devourers be forced to disgorge the Widows Houses they had swallowed, and the most righteous Judge be sure to pay those their Due, who would never pay any else theirs.

The Truth is, the Covetous Person is so bad a Pay-Master, that he lives and dies as much a Debtor to himself, as to any one else: His own Back and Belly having an Action of Debt against him; while he pines, and pinches, and denies himself, not only in the Accommodations, but also in the very Necessities of Nature; with the greatest Nonsense imaginable, living a Beggar, that he may die rich, and leave behind him a Mass of Money, valuable upon no other Account in the World, but as it is an Instrument to command and procure to a Man those Conveniencies of Life, which such an one voluntarily, and by full Choice deprives himself of.

Nor does this Vice stop here, but, as I verily believe, one great Reason which keeps some Persons from the blessed Sacrament, may be resolved into their Covetousness. For God, in that Duty, certainly calls for a Remembrance of the Poor, and therefore there must be something offered, as well as received by the worthy Communicant. But this the covetous Wretch likes not, who perhaps could brook the Duty well enough, were it an Ordinance only for receiving and taking in; but since it requires also something to be parted with, he flies from the Altar, as if he were to be sacrificed upon it; and so, turning his Back upon his Saviour, chooses rather to forget all the Benefits of his precious Death and Passion, than to cast in his Portion into the Poor's Treasury; a strange Piece of good Husbandry certainly, for a Man thus to lose his Soul, only to save his Pelf.

And thus much for the second thing considerable in the Dehortation; namely, the Thing

Thing we are therein dehorted from, which is, that mean, sordid, and degrading Vice of Covetousness. The Nature of which I have been endeavouring to make out; both Negatively, by shewing, what it is not; and Positively, by shewing, what it is, and wherein it consists. I proceed now to the

III. And last Thing to be considered in the Dhortation. Which is, the Way and Means whereby we are taught to avoid the Thing we are thus dehorted from. And that is, by using a constant Care and Vigilance against it. Take heed, and beware of Covetousness. Concerning which, we must observe, that as every thing to be avoided, is properly an Evil or Mischief; so such an Evil, as is to be avoided by a singular, and more than ordinary Caution, is always attended with one or both of these two Qualifications:

1. An exceeding Aptness to prevail upon us.

2. An equal Difficulty in removing it, when it has once prevailed. In both which respects, we are eminently cautioned against Covetousness. And first, we shall find, that it is a Vice marvelously apt to prevail upon and insinuate into the Heart of Man; and that upon these three Accounts.

(2.) The Plausibility of its Pleas and Pretences. And,

(3.) The great Reputation which Riches generally give Men in the World, by whatsoever Ways or Means they were gotten. And,

(1.) It insinuates, by the near Resemblance it bears to Virtue. Virtue and Vice dwell upon the Confines of each other; always most distant in their Natures, though the same too often in Appearance; like the Borderers of two Kingdoms or Countries, the greatest Enemies, and yet the nearest Neighbours. So that it must needs require no small Accuracy of Judgment (and such as few are Masters of) to state the just Limits of both, and a Man must go nearer, than the covetous Person himself, to hit the Dividing Point, and to shew exactly where the Virtue ends, and the Vice begins. A small Accident or Circumstance often changing the whole Quality of the Action, and of lawful or indifferent, rendring it culpable and unlawful. Covetousness is confessedly a Vice, could we but know where to find it. But when it is confronted with Prodigality, it is so apt to take Shelter

Shelter under the Name and Shew of good Husbandry, that it is hard to discern the Reality from the Pretence, and to represent Nature in its true Shape. Parfimony and Saving, determined by due Circumstances, are, unquestionless, the Dictates of right Reason, and so far not allowable only, but commendable also. For surely there can be no Immorality in sparing, where there is no Law whatsoever, that obliges a Man to spend. It is the common and received Voice of the World, that nothing can be more laudably got, than that which is lawfully saved. Saving (as I hinted before) being nothing else, but a due Valuation of the Favours of Providence, and a Fencing against one of the greatest of Miseries, Poverty; which, Solomon tells us comes like an armed Man upon the Lavish and the Prodigal; and when it comes, is of itself a Curse, and a Temptation, and too often makes a Man as wicked, as he is poor. But such is the Frailty of Humane Nature, and its great Proneness to Vice, that under the Mask of Lawful Parfimony, that Amor scelestus habendi, Covetousness insensibly steals upon, and gets Possession of the Soul, and the Man is entangled and enslaved, and brought under the Power of an ill Habit, before he is so much as alarmed with its first Approaches; and ready to be carried off by the Plague, or some mortal Distemper, before he is aware of the Infection. But,

(2.) Covetousness is apt to insinuate also, by the Plausibility of its Pleas. Amongst which, none more usual and general, than the Necessity of providing for Children and Posterity; whom (all will grant) Parents should not be instrumental to bring into the World, only to see them starve when they are here. Nor are just the Necessities of a bare Subsistence to be the only Measure of their Care for them; but some Consideration is to be had also of the Quality and Condition to which they were born, and consequently were brought into not by Choice, but by Descent. For it seems not * suitable to the common, and

* But much different was the Advice of a certain Lawyer, a great Confident of the Rebels in the Time of their Reign; who, upon a Consult held amongst them, how to dispose of the Duke of Gloucester, youngest Son of King Charles the First, then in their Hands; with great Gravity (forsooth) declared it for his Opinion, That they should bind him out to some good Trade, that so he might eat his Bread honestly. These were his Words, and very extraordinary ones they were indeed. Nevertheless, they could not hinder him from being made a Judge in the Reign of King Charles the Second. A Practice not unusual in the Courts of some Princes, to encourage and prefer their mortal Enemies before their truest Friends.

most impartial Judgment of Mankind, That one of a Noble Family and Extraction should be put to Hedging and Ditching, and be forced to support himself with the Labour of his Hands, and the Sweat of his Brow. 'Tis hard Measure to be nobly Born, and basely Endowed; to wear a Title above one's Circumstances, and so serve only as a Foil to an Elder Brother. But now, by such Provisions for Posterity, the Reason and Measure of Mens Gains, from Personal, is like to grow Infinite and Perpetual; and yet no Charge of Covetousness seems here able to take Place; it being impossible for a Man to be covetous in that, in which no Getting can be superfluous. The first Plea of Avarice therefore is, Provision for Posterity.

But then, if a Man's Condition be such, that all his Cares are to terminate in his own Person, and that he has neither Sons nor Daughters to lay up for, but that his whole Family lives and dies with him, and one Grave is to receive them all, why then Covetousness will urge to him the Necessity of hoarding up against Old Age, against the Days of Weakness and Infirmary, when the Strength of his Body, and the Vigour of his Mind shall fail him, and when the World

shall measure out their Friendships and Respects to him, only according to the Dimensions of his Purse. Upon which Account, one would think, that all a Man's Gettings and Hoardings up, during his Youth, ought to pass but for Charity and Compassion to his Old Age; which must either live and subsist upon the Stock of former Acquisitions, or expect all that Misery, which Want, added to Weakness, can bring upon it. The Sight of an old Man, poor and destitute, crazy and scorned, unable to help himself, or to buy the Help of others, is a shrewd Argument to recommend Covetousness to one, even in his greenest Years, and to make the very youngest and jolliest Sparks, in their most flourishing Age, look about them. It having been the Observation and Judgment of some, who have wanted neither Wisdom nor Experience, That an old Man has no Friend but his Money. And I heartily wish I could confute the Observation.

But the like, and no less plausible a Plea will this Vice also put in for providing against Times of Persecution, or Publick Calamity; calling to a Man's Mind all the Hardships of a Civil War, all the Plunders and Rapines, when nothing was safe above Ground; but a Man was forced to bury his Bags, to keep himself alive. And therefore, though, at present, there should be Peace, and all about us calm and quiet; yet who knows how soon a Storm may arise, and the Spirit of Rebellion and Fanaticism put it into Mens Heads once more to raise Armies to plunder, and cut Throats in the Lord; and then, believe it, when the great Work shall be thus carrying on, and we shall see our Friends and our Neighbours reformed out of House and Home as formerly, it would be found worth while to have secured a friendly Penny in a Corner, which may bid us eat, when we should otherwise starve, and speak Comfort to us, when our Friends will not so much as know us.

With these, and such like Reasonings, fallaciously applied, will Covetousness persuade a Man, both of the Necessity and Lawfulness of his raising Heap upon Heap, and joining House to House, and putting no Bounds to his Gains, when his Hand is once in. And it must be confessed, that there is some Shew of Reason for what has been alledged; but when again, we shall consider, that the fore-mentioned Cases are all but future Contingencies, which are by no means to be the Rule of Mens Actions, our Duty is only to look to the Precept, and the Obligation of it, which is plain and present, and may be easily known; and for the rest, to commit ourselves to the good Providence of God. For while we are solicitously providing against the Miseries of Age and Persecution, how do we know, whether we shall ever live to be old? Or to see the Calamity of our Country? Or the Persecution of our Persons? But however, if God shall see it for his Honour to try and humble us with the Miseries of any of these Conditions, it is not all our Art and Labour, all our Parsimony and Providence, which can prevent them. And therefore, how plausible soever the Pleas of Covetousness may seem, they are far from being rational. But,

3. And Lastly. Covetousness is apt to prevail upon the Minds of Men, by reason of the Reputation which Riches generally give Men in the World, by whatsoever Ways or Means they were gotten. It is a very great, though sad and scandalous Truth, that rich Men are at the very same time esteemed and honoured, while the Ways, by which they grew rich, are abhorred and detested: For how is Gripping and Avarice exclaimed against?

gainst? How is Oppression branded all the World over! All Mankind seems agreed to run them down; and yet, what Addresses are made, what Respects shewn, what high Encomiums given to a wealthy Miser, to a rich and flourishing Oppressor! The lucky Effect seems to have atoned for, and sanctified its vile Cause; and the basest thing covered with Gold, lies hid itself, and shines with the Lustre of its Covering.

Virtue, Charity, and Generosity, are indeed splendid Names, and look bright in Sermons and Panegyricks, which few regard: But when we come to Practice and common Life, Virtue, if poor, is but a sneaking thing, looked upon disdainfully, and treated coldly; and when Charity brings a Man to need Charity, he must be content with the Scraps from the Table of the rich Miser, or the great Oppressor. For no Invitations are now made, like that in the Gospel, where Messengers are sent with Tickets to bring in Guests from the Hedges and High-Ways. No, it is not the Way in our Days to spread Tables, or furnish out Banquets for the Poor and the Blind, the Hungry and the Indigent. For in our Times, (to the just Shame of the Fops our Ancestors, as some call them) full Bellies are still oftencst feasted; and to them who have shall be given, and they shall have more abundantly. This is the Way of the World; be the Discourse of it what it will.

And as this is the general Practice of the World, so it must needs be the general Observation of the World too; for while Men reproach Vice, and carefs the Vicious; upbraid the Guilt of an Action, but adore its Success; they must not think, that all about them are so without Eyes, or common Sense, as not to spy out the Prevarication, and to take an Estimate of their real Value of Things and Persons, rather by what they do, than by what they talk. Since therefore it is so natural for every one to desire to live with as good Esteem and Reputation in the World as he can, it is no wonder, if Covetousness makes so strong a Plea for itself in the Hearts of Men, by promising them Riches, which they find so certain a Way to Honour and Respect. And thus much for the first general Reason of the Caution, given by our Saviour, against Covetousness; namely, its great Aptness to prevail upon, and insinuate into Mens Minds.

2. The other general Reason is, the exceeding great Difficulty of removing it, when

it has once prevailed. In which, and the like Cases, one would think it Argument sufficient to caution any Man against a Disease, if we can but convince him of the great Likelihood of his falling into it; and not only of that, but, in case he should fall into it, of the extreme Difficulty (sometimes next to an Impossibility) of his recovering. and getting out of it. Both which Considerations together, certainly should add something more than ordinary to the Caution of every wise Man, and make him double his Guards against so threatening a Mischief. And as for Covetousness, we may truly say of it, that it makes both the Alpha and Omega in the Devil's Alphabet, and that it is the first Vice in corrupt Nature which moves, and the last which dies. For look upon any Infant, and as soon as it can but move an Hand, we shall see it reaching out after something or other, which it should not have; and he who does not know it to be the proper and peculiar Sin of old Age, seems himself to have the Dotage of that Age upon him, whether he has the Years or no. For, who so intent upon the World commonly, as those who are just going out of it? Who so diligent in heaping up wealth, as those who have neither Will nor Time to spend it?

If we should insist upon the Reason of Things, nothing seems more a Prodigy, than to observe, how catching and griping those are, who are utterly void of all Power and Capacity of enjoying any of these things which they so eagerly catch at. All which shews, how fast this Vice rivets itself into the Heart, which it once gets hold of; how it even grows into a Part of Nature, and scarce ever leaves the Man who has been enslaved by it, till he leaves the World.

Now, if we enquire into the Reason of the difficult Removal of this Vice, we shall find, that all those Causes, which promoted its first Insinuation and Entrance into Mens Affections, contribute also to its Settlement and Continuance in the Same; as the same Sword which enables to conquer, enables also to reign and rule after the Conquest. Covetousness, we shew, prevailed by its Likeness and Resemblance to Virtue, by the Plausibility of its Pleas, and by the Reputation of its Effects. All which, as they were so many Arguments to the Soul, first to admit, and take in the Vice, so they are as potent Persuasives not to part with it. But the grand Reason, I conceive, conceive, which ties the Knot so fast, that it is hardly to be untied, is this : That Covetousness is founded upon that great and predominant Principle of Nature, which is Self-Preservation. It is indeed an ill-built Superstructure, but yet it is raised upon that lawful, and most allowed Foundation. The prime and main Design of Nature, whether in Things animate or inanimate, being to preserve or defend itself ; which since it cannot do, but by taking in Relief and Succour from Things without, and since this Desire is so very eager and transporting, it easily overshoots in the Measure of what it takes in, and thereby incurs the Sin, and contracts the Guilt of Covetousness ; which is properly an “ Immoderate Desire and Pursuit of even the “ lawful Helps and Supports of Nature.

Men dread Want, Misery, and Contempt, and therefore think, they can never be enough provided with the Means of keeping off these Evils : So that, if Want, Misery, and Contempt, were not manifestly Enemies to, and destructive of the Enjoyments of Nature ; and Nature were not infinitely concerned to secure and make good these Enjoyments ; and Riches and Plenty were not thought the direct Instruments to effect this ; there could be no such things as Covetousness in the World. But even Money (the Desire of all Nations) would sink in its Value, and Gold itself lose its Weight, though it kept its Lustre. For to what rational Purpose should Men proll and labour for that, without which Nature could continue in its full, entire Fruition of whatsoever was either needful for its Support, or desirable for its Pleasure? But it is evident, that Men live and act under this Persuasion, that unless they have Wealth and Plenty enough, they shall be needy, miserable, and despised, and that the Way to have enough, is to let nothing (if possible) go beside them. So that herein lies the Strength of Covetousness, that it acts in the Strength of Nature, that it strikes in with its first and most forcible Inclination; which is to secure itself, both in the Good it actually has, and against the Evil it fears.

In short therefore, to recapitulate the foregoing Particulars. If Caution and Vigilance be ever necessary for the Prevention of any Evil, it must be of such an one as insinuates itself easily, grows upon a Man insensibly, and sticks to him immoveably; and in a word, scarce ever loses its Hold, where it has once got it. So that a Man must be continually

watching and fencing against it, or he shall be sure to fall by it.

And thus much for the first general Part of the Text, to wit, the Dehortation from Covetousness, expressed in these Words, Take heed, and beware of Covetousness. A Vice, which no Character can reach the Compass, or fully express the Baseness of, holding fast all it can get in one Hand, and reaching at all it can desire with the other. A Vice which may but too significantly be called the * Βεβλιμια, or Appetitus Caninus of the Soul, perpetually disposing it to a Course of alternate craving and swallowing, and swallowing and craving; and which nothing can cure, or put an end to, but that which puts an end to the Man himself too. In a word, of so killing a Malignity is it, that wheresoever it settles, it may be deservedly said of it, that if it has enriched its Thousands, it has damned its ten Thousands. An hard Saying I confess; but it is the Truth of it which makes it so. And therefore happy, no doubt, is that Man, who maturely takes the Warning which our Saviour so favourably gives him; and by shunning the Contagion of a Vice so peculiarly branded and declared against, neither contracts the Guilt, nor comes within the Number of those, whom God himself in Psal. x. 3. expressly tells us he abhors.

To which God, (who so graciously warns us here, that he may not condemn us hereafter) be render'd and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.

P A R T II.

L U K E xii. 15.

And he said unto them, take heed, and beware of Covetousness; for a Man's Life consisteth not in the Abundance of the Things which he possesseth.

WHEN I entred upon the Prosecution of these Words, I observed in them these two General Parts:

I. A Dehortation, or Dissuasive from Covetousness in these Words; Take heed, and beware of Covetousness.

II. A

II. A Reason enforcing it, and joining the latter Part of the Text with the former, by the causal Particle [For] For a Man's Life consisteth not in the Abundance of the Things which he possesseth.

As for the first of these two, viz. the Dehortation, or Dissuasion from Covetousness; I have already dispatched that in a Discourse by itself, and so proceed now to the (2.) General Part, to wit, the Reason enforcing the said Dehortation, and expressed in these Words; For a Man's Life consisteth not in the Abundance of the Things which he possesseth.

In the foregoing Discourse, I shew'd, that these Words were an Answer of our Saviour, to a tacit Argumentation formed in the Minds of most Men, in the behalf of Covetousness; which grounding itself upon that Universal Principle, That all Men desire to make their Life in this World as happy as they can, proceeded to the main Conclusion, by these two Steps; to wit, that Riches were the direct and proper Means to acquire this Happiness; and Covetousness the proper Way to get and obtain Riches.

The Ground of which Arguments; namely, That every Man may design to himself as much Happiness in this Life, as by all lawful Means he can compass, our Saviour allows, and contradicts not in the least; as being indeed the first, and most native Result of those Principles, which every Man brings into the World with him. But as for the two Consequences drawn from thence; the first of them, viz. That Riches were the direct and proper Means to acquire Happiness, our Saviour denies, as absolutely false; and the second, viz. That Covetousness is the proper Way to obtain Riches, he does by no means allow for certainly true; though he does not, I confess, directly set himself to disprove it here; but in the Text now before us, insists only upon the Falseness of the former Consequence, as we, in the following Discourse, shall likewise do; though even the latter of these Consequences also shall not be passed over in its due Place.

Accordingly, our Saviour here makes it the chief, if not the sole Business of his present Sermon (and that in Defiance of the common Sentiments of the World) to demonstrate the Inability of Riches for the Attainment of true Happiness, and thereby to make good the grand Point insisted upon, viz. That a Man's Life consisteth not in the Abundance of the things which he possesseth. Where, by [Life] I suppose, there can be no need of proving, that our Saviour does not here mean [Life] barely and physically so taken, and no more; which is but a poor Thing, God knows; but by Life, according to a Metonymy of the Subject for the Adjunct, understands the Happiness of Life in the very same Sense, wherein S. Paul takes this Word in 1 Thess. ii. 8. Now (says he) we live, if ye stand fast in the Lord. That is, we live with Comfort, and a satisfactory Enjoyment of ourselves. And conformable to the same, is the Way of Speaking in the Latin, as Istuc est vivere, and Non est vivere, sed valere vita. In which, and many the like Expressions, Vivere and vita import not the mere physical Act of Living; but the Pleasure, Happiness, and Accommodations of Life; without which, Life itself is scarce worthy to be accounted Life; but only a Power of breathing, and a Capacity of being miserable.

Now, that Riches, Wealth, and Abundance, (the Things which swell so big in the Fancies of Men, promising them Mountains, but producing only a Mouse) are not,

failing Causes of that Felicity, which the grand Desires of their Nature so eagerly press after, will appear from these following Considerations :

1. That no Man, generally speaking, acquires, or takes Possession of the Riches of this World, but with great Toil and Labour, and that very frequently even to the utmost Fatigue. The first and leading Curse, which God pronounced upon Mankind in Adam, was, that in the Sweat of his Brows he should eat his Bread, Gen. iii. 19. And if it be a Curse for a Man to be forced to toil for his very Bread, that is, for the most necessary Support of Life; how does he heighten and multiply the Curse upon himself, who toils for Superfluities, and spends his Time and Strength in hoarding up that, which he has no real Need of; and which, it is ten to one, but he may never have any Occasion for.
For so is all that Wealth, which exceeds such a Competence, as answers the present Occasions and Wants of Nature. And when God comes to account with us, (let our own Measures be what they will) he will consider no more.

Now certain it is, that the general, stated Way of gathering Riches, must be by Labour and Travail, by serving other Mens Needs, and prosecuting their Business, and thereby doing our own. For there is a general Commutation of these two, which circulates, and goes about the World, and governs all the Affairs of it; one Man's Labour being the stated Price of another Man's Money; that is to say, Let my Neighbour help me with his Art, Skill, or Strength, and I will help him in Proportion with what I possess. And this is the Original Cause and Reason, why Riches come not without Toil and Labour, and a Man's exhausting himself to fill his Purse. This, I say, is the Original Cause; for I know, that, the World being once settled, Estates come to be transmitted to many by Inheritance; and such need nothing else to render them wealthy, but only to be born into the World. Sometimes also, Riches fall into Mens Hands by Favour or Fortune; but this is but seldom, and those, who are thus the Favourites of Providence, make but a small Number, in comparison of those, who get what they have by Dint of Labour, and severe Travail. And therefore, (as I said at first) this is the common, stated Way, which Providence allows Men to grow rich by.

But now, can any Man reconcile temporal Happiness to perpetual Toil? Or can he enjoy any thing truly, who never enjoys his Ease? I mean, that lawful Ease, which God allows, and Nature calls for, upon the Vicissitudes of Rest and Labour. But he, who will be vastly rich, must bid adieu to his Rest, and resolve to be a Slave, and a Drudge all his Days. And at last, when his Time is spent in heaping up, and the Heap is grown big, and calls upon the Man to enjoy it, his Years of Enjoyment are past, and he must quit the World, and die like a Fool, only to leave his Son, or his Heir a Rich Man; who perhaps will be one of the first, who shall laugh at him for what he left him, and complain, if not also curse him, for having left him no more. For such Things have happened in the World; and I do not find, that the World much mends upon our Hands. But if this be the Way of it, (as we see it is) what Happiness a Man can reap from hence, even upon a Temporal Account, needs a more than ordinary Invention to find out. The Truth is, the Absurdity of the Practice is so very gross, that it seems to carry in it a direct Contrariety to those common Notions and Maxims, which Nature would govern the Actions of Mankind by.

2. Men are usually forced to encounter, and pass through very great Dangers, before they can attain to any considerable Degrees of Wealth. And no Man, surely, can rationally account himself happy in the midst of Danger. For while he walks upon the very Edge and Brink of Ruin, it is but an equal Cast, whether he shall succeed or sink, live or die, in the Attempt he makes. He, who (for instance) designs to raise his Fortunes by Merchandize, (as a great Part of the World does) must have all his Hopes floating upon the Waves, and his Riches (the whole Support of his Heart) entirely at the Mercy of Things which have no Mercy, the Seas and the Winds. A sudden Storm may beggar him; and who can secure him from a Storm in the Place of Storms? A Place, where whole Estates are every Day swallowed up, and which has thereby made it disputable, whether there are more Millions of Gold and Silver lodged below the Salt Waters, or above them; so that, in the same Degree, that any Man of Sense desires Wealth, he must of Necessity fear its Loss; his Desires must must still measure out his Fears ; and both of them, with reference to the same Objects, must bear Proportion to one another ; which, in the mean time must needs make the Man really miserable, by being thus held in a continual Distraction between two very uneasy Passions. Nevertheless, let us after all, suppose that this Man of Traffick, having passed the best of his Days in Fears and Dangers, comes at length so far to triumph over both, as to bring off a good Estate from the Mouth of the devouring Element, and now thinks to sit down, and solace his old Age with the Acquisitions of his younger, and more daring Years ; let him, however, put what is past, and what is present into the same Balance, and judge impartially, whether the present Enjoyment, which he reaps from the Quiet and Plenty of this poor Remainder of his Age, (if he reaps any) can equal those perpetual Fears and Agonies, which not only anticipated, and brought Age upon him before its Time, but likewise by a continual racking Solitude of Thought, cut him off from all Pleasure in the proper Days of Pleasure, and from those youthful Satisfactions, which Age must by no means pretend to. I am this Day fourscore Years old, (said the aged and rich Barzillai) in 2 Sam. xix. 35. and can I yet tast what I eat, or what I drink? But (it seems) as dull as his Senses were, he was severely sensible of the Truth of what he said. And whosoever lives to Barzillai's Years, shall not with all Barzillai's Wealth and Greatness (sufficient, as we read, to entertain a King and his Army) be able to procure himself a quicker, and a better Relish of what shall be set before him, than Barzillai had. For all Enjoyment must needs be at an end, where the Powers of enjoying cease. And if, in the next place, we should pass from the Delicacies of Fare to the Splendor of Habit, (another thing which most of the World are so much taken with) what could the Purple, and the Scarlet, and all the Fineries of Cloathing avail a Man, when the Wearer himself was grown out of Fashion? In a word, every Man must be reckoned to have just so much of the World, as he enjoys of it. And the Covetous Man (we have shewn) will not, and the old Man cannot enjoy it.

But some again (the natural Violence of their Temper so disposing them) are for advancing, and enriching themselves (if possible) by War: A Course certainly, of all others, others, the most unaccountable and preposterous. For is it not highly irrational, for a Man to sacrifice the End to the Means? To hazard his Life for the Pursuit of that, which, for the Sake and Support of Life only, can be valuable? Well indeed may the Man, who has been bred up in, and accustomed to Camps, Battles, and Sieges, look Death and Danger boldly in the Face; but yet, let him not think to look them out of Countenance too; these being Evils, no doubt, too great for Mortality, with but common Sense and Reason about it, to defy. Nay, suppose we likewise, the Man of Arms so fortunate, as, in his Time, to have fought himself into an Estate, (as several such have done) yet may not, even this also, prove a very slight and contemptible Purchase, if, as soon as it is made, the Man himself should drop out of this World, and so become wholly incapable of taking Possession of what he had bought with his Life, but only by his Grave?

Thus, I say, it often fares with those Soldiers of Fortune, or Field-Adventurers, (as we may call them) from whom, if we cast our Eye a little farther, upon another Sort of Men, no less eager after Gain and Grandeur from their Management of State-Affairs; shall we find their Condition at all more secure? Their Happiness more firmly fixed? And less at a Venture than that of those of the forementioned Tribe? No surely, no less Hazards meet the Statesman at the Council Board, than accost the Soldier in the Field; and one had need be as good a Fencer, as the other ought to be a Fighter, to defend himself: The Oppositions he is to contest with, being altogether as terrible and fatal, though not in the same Dress. For he has the changeable Will of his Prince or Superiors, the Competition of his Equals, and the popular Rage of his Inferiors, to guard and secure himself against. And he must walk with a wary Eye, and a steady Foot indeed, who never trips nor stumbles at any of these cross Blocks, which, some time or other, will assuredly be cast before him; and it is well if he carries not only his Foot, but his Head too, so sure, as to fall by neither of them; many wise Men, I am sure, have fallen so. For it is not Wisdom, but Fortune which must protect such an one; and Fortune is no Man's Freehold, either to keep, or to command.

Which being truly his Case, I cannot judge that Man happy, who is in Danger to be ruined every Moment, and who can neither bring the Causes of his Ruin within the Reach of his Prospect, nor the Avoidance of them within the Compass of his Power; but notwithstanding all his Art, Wit, and Cunning, lies perpetually open to a thousand invisible, and, upon that Account, inevitable Mischiefs. And thus I have shewn the Dangers which attend the several Ways and Passages by which Men aspire to Wealth and Greatness; the Things upon which the abused Reason of Mankind so much doats, and in which it places so much Felicity, and finds so little. But,

3. Men are frequently forced to make their Way to great Possessions, by the Commission of great Sins, and therefore the Happiness of Life cannot possibly consist in them. It has been a Saying, and a remarkable one it is, that there is no Man very rich, but is either an unjust Person himself, or the Heir of one or other who was so. I dare not pronounce so severe a Sentence universally: For I question not, but through the good Providence of God, some are as innocently, and with as good a Conscience rich, as others can be poor: But the general Baseness and Corruption of Mens Practices has verified this harsh Saying of too many; and it is every Day seen, how many serve the God of this World, to obtain the Riches of it. 'Tis true, the full Reward of a Man's unjust Dealing never reaches him in this Life; but if he has not sinned away all the Sense, Tenderness, and Apprehensiveness of his Conscience, the Grudges and Regrets of it will be still like Death in the Pot, and give a sad grumbling Alay to all his Comforts; nor shall his Heart ever find any entire, clear, unmixed Content in the Wealth he has got, when he shall reflect upon the Manner of his getting it; and assure him, that nothing of all that, which he possesses in the World, is yet paid for; so that, if the Justice of God should exact his Soul in Payment of that vast Score, which his sinful Gains have run him into, when this sad Debt came once to be cleared off, who then would be the Gainer; Or what could be got, when the Soul was lost?

One Man, perhaps, has been an Oppressor, and an Extortioner, and waded to all his Wealth through the Tears of Widows and Orphans. Another with Blood and Perjury, Falshood and Lying, has borne down all before him, and now lords it in the midst of a great Estate; and the like may be said of others, others, who, by other Kinds of Baseness, have done the same. But now, can any of these thriving Miscreants be esteemed, or called happy in such a Condition? Is their Mind clear, their Conscience calm and quiet, and their Thoughts generally undisturbed? For there can be no true Happiness, unless they are so; forasmuch as all Happiness must pass through the Mind, and the Apprehension. But God has not left himself so without Witness, even in the Hearts of the most profligate Sinners, as to suffer great Guilt, and profound Peace to cohabit in the same Breast. Jonah must not think to disobey, and then to sleep securely, and unmolested. No, the Storm will quickly be about his Ears, and the terrible Remembrancer within will be rubbing up old Stories, and breaking in upon his false Repose with secret Intimations of an impending Wrath. So that, if the Tempter, at any time, be at one Elbow, to induce a Man to sin; Conscience will not fail to be jogging him at the other, to remind him what he has done, and what he is to expect thereupon. This has been the Case of the most prosperous Sinners in the World; these Remorses and Fore-Bodings have stuck close to them in the midst of all their Plenty, Power, and Splendor; a sufficient Demonstration doubtless, how thin and counterfeit all the Joys of these Grandees are, in spite of all the Flourishes and fine Shows they make in the Opinion of the foolish World, which sees and gazes upon their glistering Outside, but knows not the dismal Stings, and secret Lashes which they feel within.

And thus much for the first general Argument, proving, that true Happiness consists not in any earthly Abundance, taken from the Consideration of those Evils, through which Men commonly pass into the Possession of it. The

2. General Argument shall be taken from the Consideration of such Evils as attend Men, when they come to be actually possessed of this Abundance. As,

1. Excessive, immoderate Cares. The very Management of a great Estate, is a greater and more perplexing Trouble, than any that a poor Man can be subject to. Great Riches super-induce new Necessities; Necessities added to those of Nature, but accounted much above them; to wit, the Necessities of Pomp, Grandeur, and a suitable Port in the World. For he, who is vastly rich, must live like one who is so; and whosoever does that, makes himself himself thereby a great Host, and his House a great Inn; where the Noise, the Trouble, and the Charge is sure to be his, but the Enjoyment (if there be any) descends upon the Persons entertained by him; nay, and upon the very Servants of his Family, whose Business is only to please their Master, and live upon him, while the Master's Business is to please all that come about him, and sometimes to fence against them too. For a Gainer by all his Costs and Charges, by all that he can give or spend, he shall never be. Such being the Temper of most Men in the World, that though they are never so kindly used, and so generously entertained, yet they are not to be obliged; but go away, rather envying their Entertainer's Greatness, than acknowledging his Generosity. So that a Man, by widening or enlarging his Condition, only affords the Malicious World about him so many more Handles to lay hold of him by, than it had before. It is indeed impossible, that Riches should increase; and that Care, with many malign Accidents besides, should not increase with them. This is the dark Shadow, which still follows those shining Bodies. And Care is certainly one of the greatest Miseries of the Mind; the Toil, and very Day-Labour of the Soul. And what Felicity, what Enjoyment can there be in incessant Labour? For Enjoyment is properly attractive, but Labour expensive. And all Pleasure adds, and takes in something to the Stores of Nature; while Work and Labour is still upon the exporting, and the spending hand. Care is a consuming, and a devouring thing, and with a kind of spiteful, as well as craving Appetite, preys upon the best and noblest Things of a Man, and is not to be put off with any of the Dainties of his full Table: But his Thoughts, his Natural Rest and Recreations, are the Viands, which his Cares feed upon. And is not that wealthy great one, think we, very happy, whose Riches shall force him to lie awake, while his very Porter is asleep? And whose Greatness shall hardly allow him so much as Time to eat? Certainly, such an one sustains all the real Miseries of Want, no less than he who seeks his Meat from Door to Door. For he is as much starved, who cannot find when, as he who cannot find what to eat; and he dies as surely, who is pressed to Death with Heaps of Gold and Silver, as he who is crushed under an Heap of Stones or Dirt. The Malignity, and corroding Quality of Care is, to all Intents and purposes of Mischief, the same, be the Causes of it never so different. And whether Poverty or Riches produce the Vexation, the Impression it makes upon the Heart, is alike from both. They who will be rich, says S. Paul, 1 Tim. vi. 10. pierce themselves through with many Sorrows; and those (it seems) Sorrows not of the lighter, and more transient Sort, which give the Mind but feeble Touches, and short Visits, and quickly go off again; but they are such, as strike Daggers into it; such as enter into the innermost Parts and Powers of it; and in a word, pierce it through and through, and draw out the very Life and Spirit through the Wound they make. These are the peculiar and extraordinary Sorrows which go before, accompany, and follow Riches: And there is no Man, though in never so low a Station, who sets his Heart upon growing rich, but shall, in his Proportion, be sure to have his Share of them. But then, let us cast our Eye upon the highest Condition of Wealth and Abundance, which this World affords; to wit, the Royal Estate of Princes: Yet neither can this be truly esteemed an Estate of Happiness and Fruition; but as much advanced, above all other Conditions, in Care

Care and Anxiety, as it is in Power and Dignity. The greatest, and the richest Prince can have but the Enjoyment of one Man; but he sustains the united Cares and Concerns of as many Millions, as he commands. The Troubles of the whole Nation concenter in the Throne, and lodge themselves in the Royal Diadem. So that it may, in effect, be but too truly said of every Prince, that he wears a Crown of Thorns together with his purple Robe, (as the greatest of Princes once did) and that his Throne is nothing else, but the Seat Imperial of Care. But,

2. The second Evil which attends the Possession of Riches, is an insatiable Desire of getting more, Eccles. v. 9. He who loves Money, shall not be satisfied with it, says Solomon. And, I believe, it would be no hard Matter to assign more Instances of such as Riches have made covetous, than of such as Covetousness has made rich. Upon which Account, a Man can never truly enjoy what he actually has, through the eager Pursuit of what he has not; his Heart is still running out; still upon the Chace of a new Game, and so never thinks of using what it has already acquired. And must it not now be one of the greatest Miseries, for a Man to have a perpetual Hunger upon him, and to have his Appetite grow fiercer and sharper amidst the very Objects and Opportunities of Satisfaction? Yet so it is usually with Men hugely rich. They have, and they covet; Riches flow in upon them, and yet Riches are the only Things they are still looking after. Their Desires are answered, and while they are answered, they are enlarged; they grow wider and stronger, and bring such a Dropsy upon the Soul, that the more it takes in, the more it may; just like some Drunkards, who even drink themselves athrift, and have no Reason in the World for their drinking more, but their having drank too much already.

There cannot be a greater Plague, than to be always baited with the Importunities of a growing Appetite. Beggars are troublesome, even in the Streets, as we pass through them; but how much more, when a Man shall carry a perpetually clamorous Beggar in his own Breast, which shall never leave off crying, Give, Give, whether the Man has any thing to give or no? Such an one, though never so rich, is like a Man with a numerous Charge of Children, with a great many hungry Mouths about him to be fed, and little or nothing to feed them with. For he creates to himself a kind of new Nature, by bringing himself under the Power of new Necessities and Desires. Whereas Nature considered in itself, and, as true to its own Rules, is contented with little, and Reason and Religion enables us to take up with less, and so adds to its Strength, by contracting its Appetites, and retrenching its Occasions.

There is no Condition so full and affluent, but Content is, and will be a necessary Supplement to make a Man happy in it; and to compose the Mind in the Want of something or other, which it would be otherwise hankering after. And if so, how wretched must that Man needs be, who is perpetually impoverishing himself by new Indigences founded upon new Desires, and imaginary Emptiness, still disposing him to seek for new Reliefs and Accessions to that Plenty, which is already become too big for Consumption, and the just Measures of Nature; which never finds any real Pleasure, but in the Satisfaction of some real Want?

But as for the unfeatable Miser, whom we are now speaking of, what Difference is there between such an one, and a Man over Head and Ears in Debt, and dogged by his Creditors ditors wheresoever he goes? For the Miser is as much disquieted, dunned, and called upon by the Eagerness of his own Desires, as he whose Door is haunted and rapped at every Hour, by those who come crying after him for what he owes them; both are equally pulled and haled to do that which they are unable to do; for as the poor Man cannot satisfy his Creditors, so neither can the rich Man satisfy his grasping, endless Desires. And this is the direct and natural Result of increasing Wealth. Riches are still made the Reason of Riches; and Men get only, that they may lay up, and lay up only, that they may keep. Upon which Principle, it is evident, that the Covetous Person is always thinking himself in Want, and consequently as far from any true Relish of Happiness, as he must needs be, who apprehends himself under that Condition, which of all Things in the World he most abhors.

3. The third Evil which attends Men, in the Possession of the Abundance of this World, is, that such a Condition is the proper Scene of Temptation. It brings Men, as the Apostle tells us, in the forecited 1 Tim. vi. 9. into a Snare, and into many foolish and hurtful Lusts, and such as drown Men in Destruction and

Perdition. So hard it is for the Corruption of Man's Nature not to work, where it has such Plenty of Materials to work upon. For who so strongly tempted to Pride, as he who has Riches to bear it out? Who so prone to be luxurious, as he who has Wealth to feed and maintain his Luxury? Who so apt to besot himself with Idleness, as he who can command, and have all things, and yet do nothing? It is a Miracle almost for a rich Man not to be over-run with Vice, having both such strong Inclinations to it from within, and such Inducements and Opportunities to it from without. To be rich in Money, and rich in good Works too, rarely concur. All Opportunity and Power to gratify a Man's vicious Humour, is a shrewd Temptation to him actually to do so. Where Riches are at hand, all Impediments and Obstructions vanish. For what is it, which Gold will not command? What Sin so costly, which the rich Man may not venture upon, if he can but stretch his Conscience to the Measures of his Purse? Such an one's Condition places him in the very High-Way to Damnation? while it surrounds, and besets him with all those Allurements, which are apt to beguile and ruin Souls. And a Man must have a rare Mastery of himself, and Controul of his Affections, to be able to look a pleasing Vice in the Face, and to despise it, when the Affluence of his Fortune shall give him his free Choice of all those Pleasures, which his Nature so mightily importunes him to. But it is scarce an Age, that can give us an Instance of such an impregnable and resolved Abstemiousness under such Circumstances; Men are generally treacherous, and false to themselves, and their greatest Concerns; wretchedly weak and pliant to their innate Viciousness, when it is once called forth, and enflamed by the Provocations it receives from the Wealth and Plenty they wallow in.

Whence it is, that many hopeful young Men debauch and drown themselves in Sensuality, and come at length to lose both their Souls, and their Wits too; and that, only because it was their Lot to be born to great Estates, and thereby to have Money enough to keep Pace with their lewd Desires, and to answer them with full and constant Supplies; while others, in the mean time, whose Nature and Temper was, perhaps, not at all better than their own, have took to the Ways of Industry and Virtue, and so made themselves both useful in their Lives, and happy after their Death, only through the Mercy of Providence, stinting their Worldly Fortunes, and thereby cutting off those Incentives of Lust, and Instruments of Sin, which have inveigled and abused others, and brought them headlong to Destruction. Certain it is, that a rich Man must use great Caution to keep himself clear from Sin, and add greater Strength and Force to his Resolutions to make himself virtuous, than Men in other Circumstances need to do: For he has greater Temptations to break through, than they have; and consequently, cannot make good his Ground at the same rate of Vigilance and Activity, which Persons less assaulted may. Which being his Case, it is hard to conceive, what Happiness there can be in that Condition, which renders Virtue, a Thing in itself so difficult, infinitely more difficult; which turns the strait Gate into a Needle's Eye, and makes Hell itself, which is so broad already, ten times broader than it was before.

4. The fourth Evil attending Men, in the Possession of this Earthly Abundance, is, the Malice and Envy of the World round about them. The Bounties of Providence are generally looked upon with an evil Eye, by such as are not the Objects of them themselves. And some have no other Fault, so much as objected against them, to provoke the Invectives and Satyrs of foul Mouths, but only that they thrive in the World, that they have fair Estates, and so need not herd themselves with the Rabble, nor lick the Spittle of great ones, nor own any other Dependences, but upon God in the first place, and upon themselves in the next. So long as Malice and Envy lodge in the Breasts of Mankind, it is impossible for a Man in a wealthy, flourishing Condition, not to feel the Stroak of Mens Tongues, and of their Hands too, if Occasion serves. The fuller the Branches are, the more shall the Tree be flung at. What impeached Naboth of Treason and Blasphemy, but his spacious Vineyard, too convenient for his potent Neighbour, to let the Owner enjoy it long? What made the King of Babylon invade Judea, but the Royal Stores and Treasures displayed and boasted of by Hezekiah before the Chaldean Ambassadors, to the supplanting of his Crown, and the miserable Captivity of his Posterity? In Sylla's bloody Proscription, Matters came to that pass in Rome, that if a Man had but a fair Garden, a rich Jewel, or but a Ring of Value, it was enough to get his Name posted up in the Cut-Throat Roll, and to cost him his Life, for having any thing worth the taking from him. Seldom do Armies invade poor Day-labouring Countries; they are not the thin Weather-beaten Cottages, but the opulent trading Cities, which invite the Plunderer; and War goes on but heavily, where there is no Prospect of Spoil to enliven it. So that, whether we look upon Societies, or single Persons, still we shall find them both owing this to their great Wealth, that it gives them the Honour to be thought worth ruining, and a fit Prey for those who shall think they deserve that Wealth better than themselves; as, they may be sure, enough will.

And thus much for the second general Argument, proving, that true Happiness consists not in any Earthly Abundance, taken from the Consideration of those Evils, which, for the most part, if not always, attend, and go along with it. But,

3. The third general Argument for the Proof of the same, shall be taken from the utter Inability of the greatest Earthly Riches, to remove those Things which chiefly render Men miserable: And this will appear to us, if we reflect,

1. Upon what affects the Mind. And,
2. Upon what affects the Body. And here,

1. First for that which affects a Man's Spiritual Part, his Mind. Suppose that to be grieved, and labouring under the most pressing and unsupportable of all Grievs, Trouble of Conscience: And what can Riches, Power, or Honour contribute to its Removal? Can they pluck out any of those poisoned Arrows, which the Apprehension of God's Wrath fastens in the Soul? Can they heal the Wounds, and assuage the Anguish of a Conscience groaning, and even gasping under the Terrors of the Almighty? Nay, let the Grief arise but from a Temporal Cause, as suppose the Death and Loss of a dear Friend, the Diminution of a Man's Honour, or the like; and what miserable Comforters in any of these Cases are the heaviest Bags, and the fullest Coffers? The Pleasure arising from all other Temporal Enjoyments cannot equal the Smart, which the Mind endures from the Loss of any one of them. For what Pleasure did David find in his Crown and Scepter, and all his Royal Greatness, when his dear (though scottishly beloved) Absalom was torn from him? What Enjoyment had Haman in all all his Court-Preferments, his Grandeur and Interest in his Royal Master's Affection, when Mordecai, his most maligned Enemy, refused to cringe to him in the Gate? Why just none at all, if we may take his Word for it, who should know his own Mind best. For in Esth. v. 11, 12. when he had reckoned up all his Wealth, Glory, and Greatness, together with his numerous Off-Spring, designed (as he thought) to inherit all of it; he adds in the 13th Verse, (and a remarkable Passage it is) yet all this availeth me nothing, so long as I see Mordecai the Jew sitting in the King's Gate. The Pride of his swelling Heart, and the Envy of his malicious Eye, racked and tormented him more than all that the Splendor and Magnificence of the Persian Court (the greatest then in the World) could delight or gratify him with. And now, what poor Contributors must these earthly Enjoyments needs be to a Man's real Happiness, when an hundred Pleasures shall not be able to counter-balance one Sorrow? But that one cross Accident shall sour the whole Mass of a Man's Comforts: And the Mind shall as really droop, languish, and pine away, while a Man is surrounded with vast Treasures, rich Attendance, and a plentiful

tiful Table; as if he had neither where to lay his Head, nor where-withall to fill his Mouth. For all the Delight he does, or can reap from his other Comforts, serves only to quicken and increase the Sense of that Calamity, which has actually took Possession of him. But in the

2. Place, Let us consider the Miseries which affect the Body, and we shall find, that the greatest Pleasures arising from any Degree of Wealth or Plenty whatsoever, is so far from reaching the Soul, that it scarce pierces the Skin. What would a Man give to purchase a Release, nay, but a small Respite from the extreme Pains of the Gout or Stone; and yet, if he could fee his Physician with both the Indies, neither Art nor Money can redeem, or but reprieve him from his Misery. No Man feels the Pangs or Tortures of his present Distemper (be it what it will) at all the less for his being rich. His Riches indeed may have occasioned, but they cannot allay them. No Man's Fever burns the gentler, for his drinking his Juleps in a Golden Cup. Nor could Alexander himself, at the Price of all his Conquests, antidote, or recall the poisonous Draught, when it had once got into his Veins. When God shall think think fit to cast a Man upon his Bed of Pain or Sicknefs, let him fummon about him his Thoufands, and his ten Thoufands, his Lands and his rich Manors, and fee whether he can bribe, or buy off, or fo much as compound with his Diftemper, but for one Night's Reft. No ; the fick Bed is fo like the Grave, which it leads to, that it uſes Rich and Poor, Prince and Peafant all alike. Pain has no Reſpect of Perſons, but ſtrikes all with an equal, and an impartial Stroak.

We know how God reprov'd the fooliſh Wordling, (as our Saviour tells us) in Luke xii. 20. Thou Fool, (ſays he) this Night ſhall thy Soul be required of thee, and then whoſe ſhall all thoſe Things be, which thou haſt hoarded up? But we may bring the Sentence here pronounced much lower, and yet render it dreadful enough, even within the Compaſs of this Life; and ſay, Thou Fool, this Night, this Day ſhall thy Health and Strength be taken from thee; and then, what Pleaſure, what Enjoyment will all thy Poſſeſſions afford thee? God may ſmite thee with ſome lingering, diſpiriting Diſeaſe, which ſhall crack the Strength of thy Sinews, and ſuck the Marrow out of thy Bones; and then, what Pleaſure can it be to wrap

wrap thy living Skeleton in Purple, and rot alive in Cloth of Gold? when thy Cloaths shall serve only to upraid the Usefulness of thy Limbs, and thy rich Fare stand before thee only to reproach and tantalize the Weakness of thy Stomach; while thy Consumption is every Day dressing thee up for the Worms? All which, I think, is a sufficient Demonstration, that Plenty and Enjoyment are not the same thing. They are the inward Strength and Sufficiency of a Man's Faculties, which must render him a Subject capable of tasting or enjoying the good Things which Providence bestows upon him. But as it is God only who creates; so it is he alone who must support and preserve these; and when he withdraws his Hand, and lets Nature sink into its Original Weakness and Insufficiency, all a Man's Delights fail him, all his Enjoyments vanish. For no Man (to be sure) can enjoy himself any longer, than he can be said to be himself.

But now, if Riches are thus wholly unable of themselves to effect any thing towards a Man's Relief, under a corporal Malady, how can they, as such, deserve the Name of Felicity? For what are they good for? What can they do for him? The Man is sick, and his his Disease torments, and Death threatens him; and can they either remove the one, or keep off the other? Nothing less. But it will be answered perhaps, that when a Man is well and healthy, they may serve him for many Conveniences of Life: They may do so, I confess; but then, this also is as true, that he, who is healthy and well, may enjoy all the necessary Satisfaction which his Nature calls for, though he has no other Riches in the World, but those poor Incomes, which he daily earns with the Labour of his Hands, or the Working of his Brain. So that the Sum and Result of all their Efficacy towards a Man's Happiness, amounts but to this; that Riches may indeed minister something to the making of that Person happy, who is in such a Condition of Health and Strength, as may enable him, if he pleases, to make himself happy without them. For a bare Competence, and that a very slender one too, will answer all the Needs of Nature; and where a Competence is sufficient, an Abundance, I am sure, cannot be necessary. And this introduces the

4. And last Argument to prove, that Man's Happiness consists not in any Earthly Abundance, taken from this Consideration; that the greatest Happiness, which this Life is capable of, may be, and actually has been, enjoyed without this Abundance; and consequently, cannot depend upon it. Now, that, undoubtedly, is the chief Happiness of Life; for the Attainment of which, all other Things are designed but as the Means, and subservient Instruments. And what else can this be, but the Content, Quiet and inward Satisfaction of a Man's Mind? For why, or for what other imaginable Reason, are Riches Power, and Honour, so much valued by Men, but because they promise themselves that Content and Satisfaction of Mind from them, which, they fully believe, cannot otherwise be had? This, no doubt, is the inward Reasoning of Mens Minds in the present Case. But the Experience of Thousands (against which all Arguments signify nothing) irrefragably evince the contrary. For was there not a Sort of Men, whom we read of in the former Ages of the World, called The Antient Philosophers, who even while they lived in the World, lived above it, and in a manner without it; and yet, all the while accounted themselves the happiest Men in it? And from these, if we pass to the Professors and Practicers of an higher Philosophy, the Apostles and Primitive Christians, who ever so overflowed with spiritual Joy, as they did? A Joy unspeakable, and full of Glory, as St. Paul terms it; a Joy not to be forced or ravished from the Heart, once possessed of it, as our Saviour himself, the great Giver of it, has assured us. Hear St. Paul and Silas singing out this Joy aloud in the dismal Prison, where they sat expecting Death every Moment. And from hence to proceed to the next Ages of the Church: Who could be fuller of, and more transported with a joyous Sense of their Condition, than the Martyrs of those Primitive Times, who were so far from any of the Accommodations of this World, that their only Portion in it, was to live in Hunger, Nakedness, and Want, and stripped of every thing but the Bodies, in and through which they suffered all these Afflictions! And as this internal, spiritual Comfort, is doubtless the highest that human Nature is capable of, and may serve instead of all other, so it descends even to those of the lowest Condition. And the poor, labouring Peasant, with his coarse Fare, and a good Conscience to season, and make a Feast of it, feeds as chearfully, and with as much inward Satisfaction, as his great Landlord, or flourishing Neighbour can; there being, for the most part, as much of real Enjoyment under the meanest Cottage, as within the Walls of the stateliest and most magnificent Palaces. For does not the honest Plowman, whose Strength is his whole Estate, and his Day's Work his Revenue, carry about him as light an Heart, and as clear a Breast, as he who commands Armies, or can call 35 Millions his own? No doubt he does; and his Experience (an Evidence too great to be borne down) will vouch the same. Accordingly, let any one shew me that Enjoyment or Pleasure, which Men seek for from a vast Estate in Land or Moneys; and I will shew the same or something equal to it, full as high and satisfactory in that Man, who cannot call one Foot of Land in the whole World his own, and whose Purse never reached beyond the present, nor knew what it was to lay up for the Morrow. Many, doubtless, very many such there are, who eat their Bread with as much relish, sleep as soundly, think as chearfully, and rejoice as much in their homely Dame, and ragged Children, together with their High-shoed Companions as those who can command Sea and Land to their Tables, domineer over Kingdoms, and

Apostles

Content is the Gift of Heaven; and not the certain Effect of any thing upon Earth; and it is as easy for Providence to convey it without Wealth, as with it; it being the undeniable Prerogative of the first Cause, that whatsoever it does by the Mediation of second Causes, it can do immediately by itself without them. The Heavens can, and do every Day derive Water and Refreshment upon the Earth, without either Pipes or Conduits; though the Weakness of humane Industry is forced to fly to these little Assistances, to compass the same Effects. Happiness and Comfort stream immediately from God himself, as Light issues from the Sun, and sometimes looks, and darts itself into the meanest Corners, while it forbears to visit the largest, and the noblest Rooms. Every Man is happy or miserable, as the Temper of his Mind places him, either directly under, or beside the Influences of the Divine Nature; which enlighten and enliven the disposed Mind with secret, ineffable Joys, and such as the vicious, or unprepared Mind is wholly unacquainted with. We have nothing, and yet we possess all Things, says the Apostle,
in

in 2 Cor. vi. 10. And can a greater Happiness be imagined, than that which gives a Man here all Things in Possession, together with a glorious Eternity in Reversion? In a word, it is not what a Man has, but what he is, which must make him happy: And thus, as I have demonstrated the utter Insufficiency of Riches to make Men happy, so to confirm the high Reason of our Saviour's Dissuasive from Covetousness, against all Objections, or so much as Pretences to the contrary; we shall farther observe, that Covetousness is by no means a certain Way to procure Riches; and, if neither Riches can make a Man happy, nor Covetousness make him rich, all Pleas for it must needs be torn up by the very Roots. And for this, we need not assign any other Ground, or Cause of the strange and frequent Disappointments which Covetousness meets with in the Ends it drives at; if we consider the Nature of the Means and Instruments which it makes use of for the bringing of these Ends about. Such as are Fraud and Force, and Schism and Sedition, Sacrilege and Rebellion, all of them Practices carrying the Curse of God inseparably cleaving to them, and inherent in them. And to shew this in the Principal of them, the Violation of Things sacred, who ever knew any Family made rich by Sacrilege? Or any Robber of the Altar, but sooner or later, he fell a just Sacrifice to the Shrine he robbed? Covetousness may possibly sometimes procure such an one a broad Estate for the present, but a long one never. Wealth may brave and flourish it for a while in the Front and Forepart of his Life, but Poverty generally brings up the Rear. For the Justice of God is never in Jest, nor does it work by halves in such Cases; but whether, by a speedy or lingring Execution, by striking or eating through the cursed thing, it will be sure to make good its Blow at last. A notable Instance of which, we have in the Faction which carried all before it in the grand Rebellion of Forty One. Men were then factious and rapacious, because they were first covetous; and none more so, than a Pack of Incendiaries, who had usurped the Name of Ministers of the Gospel. For these were the Men, who with such Rage and Vehemence preached down Episcopacy and the Established Government of the Church, in hopes to have had a great Part (at least) of the Revenues of it bestowed upon them for their Pains. But, alas, poor Tools! they understood not the Work they were employed in; for the Lay-Grandees, their Masters, (who had more Wit with their Godliness) meant no such thing: No, the Hunters never intended that the Hounds should eat the Hare; but though their Throats, their Noise, and their Fangs were made use of to run it down, and catch it; yet being once caught, they quickly found that it was to be Meat only for their Masters; and that, whatsoever became of the Constitution of the Church, effectual Care was taken, that the Lands of it should go another way. And in good Earnest, it would fare but very ill with Mankind, if all that the Mouth gapes for, the Hand should be able to grasp. But Thanks be to God, innumerable are the Ways which Providence has, (some of them visible, and some secret and invisible, but all of them certain) by which it crosses and confounds the greedy Wretch, even in his most refined Contrivances, and Arts of getting; and thereby gives the World a convincing Proof, one would think, (if Experience could convince Men) that it is God, and God alone, who (as Moses said to the Israelites) must teach Men to get Wealth, as well as enable them to enjoy it. And consequently, that for a Man to be covetous, and poor too, a Miser, and yet a Beggar, is no such Paradox, as to imply either an Inconsistency in the thing itself, or a Contradiction in the Terms.

And now, in the last place, having finished the Subject before us, in the several Particulars proposed to be discoursed of by us: Let us sum up, and recapitulate, all in a few Words, viz. That since it is natural for Men to design to make their Lives as happy as they can; and since they promise themselves this Happiness from Riches, and thereupon use Covetousness, as the surest Means to attain these Riches; and yet, upon all the foregoing Accounts, it is manifest, that neither can Covetousness certainly procure Riches, nor Riches certainly procure a Man this Happiness; it must follow, by an unavoidable Inference, that Covetousness must needs be in the same Degree irrational, in which Riches are to this great end ineffectual; and consequently, that there is as little Reason for Avarice, as there is Religion in it. And therefore, that the covetous Person (whatsoever he may seem, either in his own, or the World's Opinion) is, in Truth, neither rich, reasonable, nor religious; but chargeable with all that Folly, and liable to all all that Misery, which is justly the Shame and Portion of those, who (according to those other excellent Words of our Saviour, in the 21st Verse of this Chapter) lay up Treasure for themselves, and are not rich towards God.

To whom (as the sole Giver of all Happiness, whether with or without Riches) be render'd and ascribed, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore.

Preached at

CHRIST-CHURCH, Oxon,

Before the

OCTOBER 15, 1699.

MATTH. vi. 21.

For where your Treasure is, there will your Heart be also.

AS Man is naturally a Creature of great Want and Weakness, so he does as naturally carry a most intimate and inseparable Sense of that Want and Weakness about him: And because a State of Want must needs also be a State of Uneasiness, there is nothing which Nature puts a Man with so much Force and Earnestness upon, as to attempt a Supply and Relief of the Wants which he is so sensible of, and so incommoded by. Infomuch that the whole Course of his Actings, from first to last, proceeds in this Method: First, That every Action which a Man does, is in order to his compassing or obtaining to himself some Good thereby. And Secondly, That he endeavours to compass or obtain this Good, because he desires it. And Thirdly and Lastly, That he desires it, because he wants it; or at least thinks, that he does so. So that the first Spring, which sets all the Wheels and Faculties of the Soul a going, is, a Man's Apprehension of some Good wanting to complete the Happiness of his Condition.

But, as every Good is not in the same Degree contributive to this Happiness, so neither is it in the same Degree desirable: And therefore, since Want (as we have noted) is still the Measure, as well as Ground of Desire; that which answers all the Wants, and fills all the Vacuities of a Rational Nature, must needs be the full and ultimate Object of its Desires. And this was called by the Philosophers, Man's Summum Bonum; and here, by our Saviour, Man's Treasure; both Expressions importing a Good, so comprehensively Great and Equal to all the Appetites of Nature, that the Presence and Possession of this alone renders a Man happy, and the Want or Absence of it miserable. Upon which Account, though it be impossible, that this prime or chief Good should admitt of any Plurality, so as to be really more than one, yet in regard Men take it in by their Apprehensions, which are so exceedingly subject to Error and Deception, even in their highest Concerns, and since Error is various, and indeed infinite; hence it is, that this Treasure, or Summum Bonum, falls under a very great Multiplicity: This man proposing to himself one thing, and that Man another, and a third something else for his chief Good; and that, from which alone he expects all that Happiness and Satisfaction, which the Condition of his Nature renders him either capable or desirous of.

Now the Words of the Text may be considered two ways:

I. As they are an entire Proposition in themselves. And,

II. As

II As they are an Argument relating to, and enforcing of a foregoing Precept, in the 19th an 20th Verses: And accordingly, in the Prosecution of them, we shall take in both Considerations.

I. And if we take them, as they are an entire Proposition in themselves, so they offer us these two Things:

1. Something supposed, which is, that every Man has something or other, which he accounts his Treasure, or chief Good. And,

2. Something expressly declared, namely, That whatsoever a Man accounts his Treasure, or chief Good, upon that he places his Heart, his whole Desires and Affections. And,

1. For the Thing supposed, or implied in the Words; to wit, That every Man has something or other, which he accounts his Treasure, or chief Good. The Truth and Certainty of which Proposition will appear founded upon these two Things:

(1.) The Activity of Man's Mind. And,

(2.) The Method of his Acting. And,

(1.) For the first of these. The Mind of Man is of that Spirituos, stirring Nature, that that it is perpetually at work. Something it is still in Pursuit of, either by Contemplation or Desire: The Foundation of which latter, I shew, was Want; and consequently, as Man will be always wanting something or other, so he will be always sending forth his Desires to hunt after, and bring that thing in which he wants: which is so true, that some Men having compassed the greatest and noblest Objects of their Desires, (so that Desire could no longer ascend, as being already at the Top) they have betook themselves to inferior and ignoble Exercises; so that amongst the Roman Emperors, (then Lords of a great Part of the World) we find Nero at his Harp, Domitian killing Flies, and Commodus playing the Fencer; and all this only to busy themselves some way or other: Nothing being so grievous and tedious to Humane Nature, as perfect Idleness.

But now, there is not any thing (though never so mean and trivial) which a Man does, but he antecedently designs himself some Satisfaction by the doing of it; so that he advances to every Action, as to a Degree of Happiness, as to something, which, according to its Measure and Proportion, will gratify or please him, and without which, he would be in that Degree uneasy and troublesome to himself. The Spirit of a Man, like a Flame, being of such an operative, and withall, of such a catching Quality, that it is still closing in with some desirable, suitable Good, as the Food that nourishes, and the Subject that supports it ; so impossible is it, that Desire should wholly lie still. For though the Soul had actually all that it could enjoy, yet then Desire would run out into the future, and from the present Fruition, project the Continuance and Preservation of its beloved Object. In short, what Blood is to the Body, that Desire is to the Soul ; and as the Blood will circulate, while the Body lives, so Desire will act and range about, while the Soul subsists ; and nothing but the Annihilation of one can supersede or stop the Motion of the other.

And, the Truth is, this innate Restlessness of Desire implanted in the Soul of Man, is the great Engine, by which God would draw it to himself : And if Men would be so far true to themselves, and to the most ruling Principles of their Nature, as to keep Desire still upon the Advance, till it fixed upon something, which would absolutely and fully satisfy it, it were impossible, but that, in the Issue, it should terminate in God. But that which makes this great Principle so ineffective of any true Happiness to Man, is, that he does not carry it constantly and directly forward, but often suffers it to recur, or turn aside to former false Satisfaction; first tasting an Object, and then, upon Trial, leaving it for its Emptiness; and yet afterwards returning to it again, from a vain Hope to speed better, than he had done before. So that by this Means there is a continual restless Circulation from one empty thing to another. The Soul, in this Case, being just like a sick Man, still altering his Postures, in order to his Ease; though, when he has tried all, he finds no more Ease in one, than in another; a certain Demonstration, that the Soul itself, in the present State of Nature, is in a most deplorably sick, and disordered Condition. But,

(2.) The second Argument to prove, that every Man has something or other, which he accounts his Treasure, his peculiar, or chief Good, shall be taken from the Method of his Actings, which still proceeds by a Direction of Means to one great and last End. For as an infinite Progress is exploded in all Matters of Ratiocination, as absurd and impossible, possible, so it is equally absurd in Matters of Practice: It being not more necessary to assign, and fix some first Principle of Discourse, than to state some last End of Acting: All a Man's Practices hanging loose and uncertain, unless they are governed and knit together by the Prospect of some certain End.

Now, it is the same thing which sustains these several Denominations of last End, chief Good, or Treasure; all, and every one of them signifying neither more nor less than the grand and ultimate Term, to which a rational Agent directs all his Actions and Desires: Every Man naturally and necessarily intending some one principal Thing; to the acquiring of which, all that he does, thinks, or desires, is subservient, and in which, as in a kind of Center, all his Actions meet and unite.

For though a Man has not continually, and actually the Prospect of that End, in every one of his Actions, yet he has it habitually and virtually; forasmuch, as being once designed by him, all his Actions tend to, and promote the Compassing of it: As it is not necessary, that a Traveller should have his Journey's End in his Thoughts, every every Step that he takes; but it is enough that he first designs it, and in the Strength of that Design, is by every Step carried nearer and nearer to it; every Man has some prime, paramount Object, which employs his Head, and fills his Heart rules his Thoughts, and (as it were) lies in his Bosom; and is to him above, and instead of all other Enjoyments whatsoever. And thus much for the Thing supposed, or implied in the Words, namely, that every Man has some peculiarly valued thing, which he accounts his Treasure, or chief Good. But,

2. The other thing, to be considered by us, is, that which is expressly declared in the Text, namely, that whatsoever a Man places his Treasure, or his chief Good, in, upon that he places his Heart also. Where, according to the Language of Scripture, the Word Heart compendiously denotes to us, all the Powers and Faculties of Man's Soul, together with their respective Motions and Operations. And since the Word Treasure is a metaphorical Term for a Man's prime or chief Good, we are to take an Account, how a Man prosecutes this Good, from the Analogy of those Actions which he exerts with reference to a Treasure.

Treasure; and which, I conceive, may be reduced to these Four. As,

(1.) A restless and laborious Endeavour to acquire and possess himself of it. There is no Man, who heartily, and in good Earnest desires to be Rich, or Great, or Learned, who can be idle. For Desire is the Spring of Diligence, and the Heart infallibly sets both Head and Hands, and every thing else on Work. Great Desire is like a great Fire, and all Difficulties before it are like Stubble; it will certainly make its Way through them, and devour them. From whence it is, that it generally proves so dangerous, and too often fatal, to stand between a Man, (especially, if in Place and Power) and that which he most desires; and many innocent and brave Persons have, to their Cost, found it so. For Dangers and Death itself shall be nothing; Conscience and Religion nothing; nay, the very Hopes of Heaven, and the Fears of Hell shall be accounted as nothing, when a furious, headstrong Desire shall resolve to break through them all; and, like Hannibal in his March, cut through Rocks and Mountains, till it either finds or makes a Way to its beloved Object. What made Jacob think those Seven Years of hard Service for Rachel, but a few Days, as 'tis said in Gen. xxix. 20. but the extraordinary and invincible Love which he bore to her? And what makes the Trader into foreign Countries defy the Winds, and the Seas, and hazard the Safety which he actually has and loves, but the Wealth which he loves more? All the stupendous Instances of Courage, Patience, Industry, and the like, which have so swelled the Volumes of History, and amused the World, have been but the Effects of great and victorious Desire; they are all of them but the Instruments of Love, to compass the Things which Men have first set their Hearts upon: So that when Courage takes the Field for Battle, we may be sure, that it is Desire which leads it on; filling the Mind with glorious Ideas of the Prize it contends for. All the noble Violences done to Nature, have been resolvable into this Cause; nay, the very Restraints of Appetite have been but the Effects of an Appetite more controuling and predominant.

What is it that a Man more naturally affects than Society and Converse? (it being a kind of Multiplication of himself into every Person of the Company he converses with.) And what, by Consequence, can be more uneasy to this Ζῶον Πολιτικόν, this sociable sociable Creature, than the dry, pensive Retirements of Solitude? Nevertheless, when a nobler Thing shall have seized his Imagination, and his Desires have took a Flight above the first Inclinations of his Nature, by inspiring him with the diviner Love of Knowledge, or being serviceable to his Country; why then, he can, with Delight, retreat into his Cell, dwell with himself, and converse with his own Thought, and, in those higher Speculations, forget all his merry Meetings and Companions; nay, and his very Food and Rest, and live not only above the Pleasures, but almost above the Wants of Nature too. In Prov. xviii. 1. Solomon tells us, That, through Desire, a Man having separated himself, seeketh and intermeddleth with all Wisdom. So that it is this mighty thing, Desire, which makes a Man break off, and sequester himself from all those Jollities, those airy, empty Diversions, which use to court and win the Appetites of Vulgar Souls. Thus Nature (we see) is forced to bend to Art; Art is the Daughter and Issue of Necessity; and the Standard and Measure of this Necessity is Desire; Desire, which nothing almost can withstand, or set Bounds to; which makes Paths over the Seas; turns the Night into Day; and in a word, charges through Hunger and Poverty, and all those Hardships, which humane Nature is so apt to shrink under, but it will, at length, arrive at the Satisfaction which it is in Pursuit of.

What high and vast Achievements does the Apostle, in the xith of the Hebrews ascribe to Faith? As the subduing of Kingdoms, stopping the Mouths of Lions, quenching the Violence of Fire, out of Weakness making Men strong, and that to such a Degree, as to endure Tortures, cruel Mockings, Scourgings, Bonds and Imprisonments; nay, and to be stoned, sawn asunder, and slain with the Sword. But how did Faith do all this? Why, in the Strength of Love; Faith being properly the Eye of the Soul to spy out, and represent to it those excellent, amiable Things, the Love and Desire of which should be hotter than Fire, and stronger than Death; bearing a Man through, and above all the Terrors of both, for the obtaining of so transcendent a Good. In short, Faith shews the Soul its Treasure; which being once seen by it, naturally enflames the Affections; and they as naturally engage all the Faculties and Powers of Soul and and Body, in a restless, indefatigable Endeavour after it. And thus, in all those heroick Instances of Passive Fortitude, Faith wrought by Love, and therefore it wrought Wonders.

(2.) Whatsoever a Man accounts his Treasure, that he places his whole Delight in; it entertains his Eye, refreshes his Fancy, feeds his Thoughts, and, next to his Conscience, affords him a continual Feast. It fills, and answers all his Capacities of Pleasure; and to please, we know, is much more than barely to support. It is the utmost Limit of Enjoyment; the most refined Part of Living; and, in a word, the last and highest thing which Nature looks for. It quenches a Man's Thirst, not only as Water, which just keeps Nature alive, but as Wine, which both sustains and gratifies it too; and adds a Pleasure, as well as serves a Necessity.

Nothing has so strong and fast an Hold upon the Nature and Mind of Man, as that which delights it: For whatsoever a Man delights to do, by his Good-Will he would be always doing: Delight being that which perpetuates the Union between the Will and the Object, and brings them together, by the surest, the most voluntary and constant Returns. And from hence, by the way, we may affirm it, as a certain, unfailing Truth, That no Man ever was, or can be considerable in any Art or Profession whatsoever, which he does not take a particular Delight in; for that otherwise, he will never heartily and assiduously apply himself to it; nor is it morally possible that he should.

Men, indeed, in the Courte of this World, are brought to do many Things, mere Necessity enforcing them, and the Want, and Weakness of their Condition creating that Necessity. But still, in all such Cases, the Man goes one way, and his Desires another; for he acts but as a Slave under the Eye of a severe Master; the Dread of some greater Suffering making him submit to the Disciplines of a less. But unshackle his Nature, and turn his Desires loose, and then you shall see what he will choole in order to his Pleasure, and the free unrestrained Enjoyment of himself. An Epicure may be brought to confine himself to his Chamber, and take Physick (as none generally need it more;) but will he look upon the Potion with the same Eye with which he uses to see the W.ne spa k'e in the Glafs? Or rejoice in the Company of his Physician, as much as

in that of his Boon Companions? No, the Actions of Pleasure carry quite differing Signs and Marks upon them from such as are forced; Marks, above all the Arts of Dissimulation, or the Powers of Compulsion. For so far as any thing pleases the Heart, it commands it; and the Command is absolute, and the Obedience chearful.

(3.) Whatsoever a Man accounts his Treasure, from that he derives the last Support of his Mind in all his Troubles. Let an ambitious Man lose his Friends, his Health, or his Estate; yet, if the Darling of his Thoughts, his Honour and his Fame, continue entire, his Spirit will still bear up. And let a voluptuous Man be stripped of his Credit and Good-Name, his Pleasures and Sensuality, in the midst of all his Disgrace, shall relieve him. And lastly, (to name no more) let a covetous Miser have both Pleasure and Honour taken from him, yet so long as his Bags are full, and the Golden Heaps glisten in his Eyes, his Heart will be at ease, and other Losses shall affect him little; they may possibly raze the Surface, but they descend not into the Vitals of his Comforts.

The Reason of all which is, because an ambitious Person values Honour, a voluptuous Man Pleasure, and a covetous Wretch Wealth, above any other Enjoyment in the World: All other Things being but tasteless and insipid to them, in Comparison of that one, which is the sole Minion of their Fancy, and the Idol of their Affections. And accordingly, it would be found but a vain and fruitless Attempt, to go about to move the Heart of any of these Persons, but by touching upon the proper String that ties and holds it; so that the way to humble, and bring down an ambitious, aspiring Man is to disparage him, to expose, and shew his blind-side (which such kind of Persons never fail to have;) and the most effectual Course to make a covetous Man miserable (in the right Sense) is to impoverish him: And when such a Change of Condition once passes upon such Persons, they become like Men without either Life, or Spirit, the most pitiful, forlorn, abject Creatures under Heaven, and full of that Complaint of Micah, in Judges xviii. 24. Ye have taken away my Gods, and what have I more? For whatsoever a Man accounts his chief Good, so as to suffer it to engross

and take up all his Desires, that he makes his God, that he deifies and adores, whether he knows so much or no. For certain it is, that if he would lay out himself never so much in the Acts of Religion, he could do no more even to God himself, than love him, trust in him, and rely upon him, and in a word, give him his Heart; nor, indeed, does God require any more; for it is a Man's All. Take the Heart, and you have the Man by Consequence. Govern the Spring, and you command the Motion. The whole Man (as I may so express it) is but the Appendix of his own Heart.

(4.) And lastly, whatsoever a Man accounts his Treasure, for the Preservation of that he will part with all other Things, if he cannot enjoy that, and them together. See a Merchant in a Storm at Sea, and what he values most he will be sure to throw over-board last; every Man, when he is exposed to any great and imminent Danger, marshals his Enjoyments just as Jacob did his Family, when he was to meet his Brother Esau, whom he was in such Fear of, (Gen. xxxiii. 2.) the Hand-maids and their Children he put fore-most; Leah and her Children next; but Rachel and her her Children the hindermost of all. The Reason of which was, because he had set his Heart most upon her, and therefore would have her farthest from the Danger, if it might be escaped, and last in the Suffering, if it proved unavoidable. A Father will be rather stripp'd of his Estate, than bereaved of his Children, and if he cannot keep them all, he will (though with the Loss of the rest) redeem the Son of his Affections.

It is possible indeed, that a Man himself may not always perfectly know what he loves most, till some notable Tryal comes, which shall separate between him, and what he has, and call for all his Enjoyments one after another; and then presently his Eyes shall be opened, and he shall plainly find, that the Garment which fits nearest to him, shall, by his Good-Will, be last torne from him. Bring a Man under Persecution, and that shall tell him, whether the Peace of his Conscience, or the Security of his Fortune, be the Thing which he prefers and values most. That shall tell him, whether he had rather be plundered, or perjured: And whether the Guilt of Rebellion and Sacrilege does not strike a greater Horror into him, than all the Miseries of an Ejection or Sequestration.

tion. But if, at the critical Time of Tryal, such an one shall surrender up his Conscience, that he may continue warm in his House, and his Estate, let him no longer doubt what it is, that is his Treasure, and what lies deepest in his Heart. For it is that which he can most hardly be without. But his Conscience (it seems) he can easily shake Hands with; and therefore wheresoever he may place his Religion, it is certain that he places his Happiness somewhere else.

Skin for Skin, and all that a Man has will he give for his Life, (commonly speaking;) but let a Man love any thing better than his Life, and Life itself shall be given for it. And the World has seen the Experiment; for some have loved their Country better than their Lives, and accordingly have died for it: And some their Parents, some their Honour to that Degree, as to sacrifice their dearest Blood for the Preservation of one, and Vindication of the other. But still, this is the sure, infallible Test of Love, that the Measure of its Strength is to be taken by the Fastness of its Hold. Benjamin was apparently dearest to his Father, because he was still kept with him, while the rest of his

his Brethren were sent from him. He was to him as the Apple of his Eye; and therefore no wonder, if he could not endure to have him out of it.

And thus I have done with the first Consideration of the Words; namely, as they are an entire Proposition in themselves. I come now to the

II. To wit, As they are an Argument relating to, and Enforcing of the foregoing Precept in the 19th and 20th Verses, Lay not up for yourselves Treasures on Earth, where Moth and Rust do corrupt, and Thieves break through and steal. But lay up for yourselves Treasures in Heaven, where neither Moth nor Rust do corrupt, nor Thieves break through and steal. For where your Treasure is, there will your Heart be also. The Force of which Argument is founded upon this clear and convincing Ratiocination; to wit, that it is infinitely foolish, and below a rational Creature to place his Heart upon that, which is, by no means, worth the placing of his Heart upon; and therefore, since it is undeniably evident, that a Man will place his Heart upon that, which he makes his Treasure; it follows, that he cannot without extreme Folly make any thing his Treasure, which can neither be secured from Rapine, nor preserved from Corruption; as it is certain, that nothing in this World can.

This, I say, is the Sum and Force of our Saviour's Argument: In Pursuit of which, we are to observe, that there are two Things which offer themselves to Mankind, as Rivals for their Affections; to wit, God and the World: The Things of this present Life, and of the future. And the whole Strength of our Saviour's Discourse bears upon this Supposition, That it is impossible for a Man to fix his Heart upon both. No Man can make Religion his Business, and the World too: No Man can have two Chief Goods. It is indeed more impossible, than to serve two Masters: Forasmuch as the Heart is more laid out upon what a Man loves, that upon what he serves. Besides that the Soul is but of a stinted Operation; and cannot exert its full Force and Vigour upon two diverse, and much less contrary Objects. For that one of them will be perpetually Counter-working the other; and so far as the Soul inclines to one, it must in Proportion leave, and go off from the other; so that an equal Adhesion to them them both, implies in it a perfect Contradiction. For why else should the Word of Truth so positively tell us, That if we love the World, the Love of the Father is not, cannot be in us? 1 John ii. 15. Men, I know, think to join both, but it is because they understand neither. For a Man must first have two Hearts, and two Souls, and two Selves, before he can give an Heart to God, and an Heart to the World too. And therefore, Christ does not state this Matter, upon a bare Priority of Acquisition, as if he had bid Men first lay up Treasures for themselves in Heaven, and after that, allowed them, with the same Earnestness, to provide themselves Treasures here on Earth likewise, (and so, by that Means successively grasp the full Happiness of both Worlds :) For he knew, that the very Nature of the Thing itself made this impracticable, and not to be effected; forasmuch as the Acquisition of either World would certainly engage and take up the whole Man, and consequently leave nothing of him to be employed about acquiring the other.

Whereupon Abraham speaking to the rich Man in the Gospel, who had flourished in his Purple, and fine Linen, and far'd deliciously liciously every Day, tells him, That he, in his Life-time, had received his good Things. His they are, called emphatically, His by peculiar Choice. They were the Things he chiefly valued and pitched upon, as, the most likely to make him happy; and consequently, having actually enjoyed them, and thereby compassed the utmost of his Desires, his Happiness was at an end; he had his Option; and there was no farther Provision for him in the other World: Nor indeed was it possible that he should find any, where he had laid up none. Those Words of our Saviour being most assuredly true, whether applied to Mens Endeavours after the Things of this Life, or of another: That verily they have their Reward. That is to say, the Result and Issue of their Labours will still be suitable to the End, which governed and directed them. For where Men sow, there they must expect to reap; it being infinitely absurd to bury their Seed in the Earth, and to expect a Crop in Heaven. And accordingly, in the 11th of the Hebrews, we find, that at the same time, the Saints of Old (there spoken of) declared themselves Expectants of a Land of Promise hereafter; they also declared themselves Strangers and Pilgrims here. And therefore, let not Men mock and deceive themselves, by thinking to compass Heaven with one Hand, and Earth with the other; and so to reign as Princes in both. For the Wisdom of God has decreed it otherwise; and judged one World enough for one Man, though it gives him his Choice of Two.

It being clear therefore, that a Man cannot set his Heart both upon God, and the World too, as his Treasure, or Chief Good; let us, in the next place, see which of these two bids highest for this great Prize, the Heart of Man. And since there are but these two, there cannot be a more expedite Way to evince, that it belongs to God, than by proving the Absurdity of placing it upon the World. And that will appear upon a double Account.

1. If we consider the World in Comparison with the Heart, or Mind of Man. And,

2. If we consider it absolutely in itself. And,

1. If we consider it in Comparison with the Heart of Man, we shall find that the Heart has a superlative Worth and Excellency above any thing in this World besides; and therefore, therefore, ought by no means, to be bestowed, or laid out upon Things so vastly inferior to itself. For it is that noble Part of Man, which God has drawn and imprinted a lively Pourtraiture of his own Divine Nature upon; that Part which he has designed for his own peculiar Use. For God made the Heart for no other Purpose but that he might dwell in it; giving us Understandings able to pierce into, and look through the fairest and most specious Offers of the World, together with Affections large enough to swallow, and take down all that the whole Creation can set before them, and yet remain hungry and unsatisfy'd still. And are such Faculties as these (think we) fit to be entertained only with Froth and Wind, Emptiness and Delusion? And those things can be no more, which are always promising Satisfaction, but never give it. For surely, such low Enjoyments, as Meat, Drink, and Cloaths, are not sufficient to satisfy, or make a Man happy; and yet all the Necessities of the natural Life are fully answered by these; and whatsoever, upon that Account, is desired more, is but the Result of a false Appetite founded in no real Want, but only in Fancy and Opinion. Neverthe-

And therefore, the great and good God, who gave us our very Being, and so can need nothing, that we either are, or have, yet vouchsafes to solicit, and even court our Affections; and sets no other Price upon Heaven, Glory, and Immortality, nay, and upon himself too, but our Love; there being nothing truly Great and Glorious, which a Creature is capable of enjoying, but God is ready to give it a Man in Exchange for his Heart.

How high is Reason, and how strong is Love! And surely, God never gave the Soul two such Wings, only that we might creep upon the Ground, and place our Heart, and our Foot upon the same Level. Let the Epicure therefore, or voluptuous Man, from amongst all his Pleasures, single out that one, which he reckons the best, the fullest, and most refined of all the rest: and to offer it to his Reason and Affections; and see, whether it can so acquit itself to the searching impartial Judgement of the one, and the unlimited Appetite of the other; that when he shall have took his utmost Fill of it, and gone off from the Enjoyment, he shall be able to say, Here have I found all the Satisfaction that could be thought of, or imagined; or his Affections be able to tell him, Here have we had all the Sweetness that could be wished for, or desired. But, on the contrary, do they not rather depart thirsty and melancholy, and abashed with the present Sense of their Disappointment, and still casting about for something or other, to piece up the Flaws and Defects of such broken Fruitions? So vast a Difference is there in these Matters, between Surfeit and Satisfaction.

The Heart of Man is intimately conscious to itself of its own Worth and Prerogative; and therefore, is never put to search for any thing of Enjoyment here below, but it does it with a secret Regret and Disdain, Scorn and Indignation; like a Prince imprisoned, and forced to be ruled and fed by his own Subjects; for so it is with that Divine Being, the Soul, while depressed by the Body to a Condition so much below itself.

But God sent not Man into the World, with such mighty Endowments, so much to enjoy it, as to have the Honour of despising it; and upon a full Experience of its woful Vanity, to find Cause in all his Thoughts and Desires to return and fly back to his Maker; like the Dove to the Ark, when it could rest no where else. But,

2. We are to consider the World absolutely in itself; and so we shall find the most valued Enjoyments of it embased by these two Qualifications: (1.) That they are perishing. And, (2.) That they are out of our Power: One of them expressed by Moths and Rust corrupting them, and the other by Thieves breaking through, and stealing them. The first representing them, as subject to decay from a Principle within; the second, as liable to be forced from us, by a Violence from without; and so, upon both Accounts utterly unable to make Men happy, and consequently, unworthy to take Possession of their Hearts.

(1.) And first, For the perishing State and Quality of all these worldly Enjoyments: A thing so evident, or rather obvious to common Sense and Experience, that no Man in his right Wits can really doubt of it, and yet so universally contradicted by Mens Practice, that scarce any Man seems to believe it. No, though the Spirit of God in Scripture is as full and home in the Character it gives of these Things, as Experience itself can be; sometimes expressing them by Fashions, which we know are always changing; and sometimes by Shadows, which no Man can take any hold of; and sometimes by Dreams, which are all Mockery and Delusion: Thus degrading the most admired Grandeurs of the World from Realities to bare Appearances, and from Appearances to mere Nothings.

Nor do they fail only, and lose that little Worth they have, but they do it also by the vilest and most contemptible Things in Nature; by Rust and Cankers, Moths and Vermis, Things which grow out of the very Subject they destroy, and so make the Destruction of it inevitable. And how can any better be expected, when Men will rather dig their Treasure and Comforts from beneath, than fetch them from above? For it is impossible for such Mortals to put on Immortality, or for Things, in the very Nature of them, calculated but for a few Days, to last for ever. All sublunary Comforts imitate the Changeableness, as well as feel the Influence of the Planet they are under. Time, like a River, carries them all away with a rapid Course; they swim above the Stream for a while, but are quickly swallowed up, and seen no more. The very Monuments Men raise to perpetuate their Names, consume and moulder away themselves, and proclaim their own Mortality as well as testify that of others. In a word, all these earthly Funds have Deficiencies in them, never to be made up.

But now, on the other side, the Enjoyments above, and the Treasures proposed to us by our Saviour, are indefectible in their Nature, and end'less in their Duration. They are still full, fresh, and entire, like the Stars and Orbs above, which shine with the same undiminished Lustre, and move with the same unwearied Motion, with which they did from the first Date of their Creation. Nay, the *Joy*s of Heaven will abide, when these Lights of Heaven shall be put out; and when Sun and Moon, and Nature itself shall be discharged their Stations, and be employed by Providence no more; the Righteous shall then appear in their full Glory; and being fixed in the Divine Presence, enjoy one perpetual and everlasting Day; a Day commensurate to the unlimited Eternity of God himself; the great Sun of Righteousness, who is always rising, and never sets.

(2.) The other degrading Qualification of these worldly Enjoyments, is, that they are out of our Power. And surely, that is very unfit for a Man to account his Treasure, which he cannot so much as call his own; nor extend his Title to, so far as the very next Minute; as having no Command, nor Hold of it at all, beyond the present actual Possession; and the Compass of the Present (all know) is but one Remove from Nothing. A rich Man to Day, and a Beggar to Morrow, is neither new, nor wonderful in the Experience of the World: For he, who is rich now, must ask the Rapacity of Theives, Pyrates, and Tyrants, how long he shall continue so; and rest content to be happy for just so much Time, as the Pride and Violence, the Cruelty and Avarice of the worst of Men shall permit him to be so; a comfortable Tenure, doubtless, for a Man to hold his chief Happiness by.

But now, on the contrary, nothing is so absolutely and essentially necessary to render any thing a Man's Treasure or Chief Good, as that he have a Property in it, and a Power over it; without which, it will be impossible for him to be sure of any Relief from it, when he shall most need it. For how can he be sure of that, of which he has no Command? And how can he command that, which a greater Force than his own shall lay Claim to? For let those puny Things, called Law and Right, say what they will to the contrary, if the Matter comes once to a Dispute, all the good Things a Man has of this World, will be his, who has the strongest Arm, and the sharpest Sword, or the corruptest Judge on his Side. They are the Prey of the Mighty, and the Prize of victorious Villany; subject to be torn and ravished from him upon all Occasions.

Nor has the Providence of God thought it worth while to secure and protect the very best of Men in their Rights to any Enjoyment under Heaven; and all this, to depress and vilify these Things in their Thoughts; that so they may, every Day, find a Necessity of placing them above, and of bestowing their Pains upon that, which if they pursue, they shall certainly obtain; and if they obtain, they shall impregnably keep. My Peace I leave with you, my Peace I give unto you, (says our Saviour) not as the World giveth, give I unto you. Why? What was the Difference? He tells us in John xvi. 22. Your Joy no Man taketh from you. It was such a Joy or Peace, as was to be above the Reach of either Fraud or Force, Artifice or Assault;

Assault; which can never be said of any Earthly Enjoyment whatsoever; either as to the Acquisition, or Possession of it: God having made no Man any Promise, that by all his Virtue and Innocence, all his Skill and Industry, he shall be able to continue in Health, Wealth, or Honour; but that after his utmost Endeavour to preserve those desirable Things, he may, in the Issue, lose them all.

But God has promised and engaged to Mankind, that whosoever shall faithfully and constantly persevere in the Duties of a Pious, Christian Life, shall obtain an eternal Crown of Glory, and an Inheritance that fadeth not away. A Man cannot, indeed, by all his Piety secure his Estate, but he may make his Calling and Election sure; which is infinitely and unspeakably more valuable, than all the Estates, Pleasures, and Greatness of the World. For all these are without him, and consequently may be taken from him, and which is yet worse, may do him no Good, even while they stay with him. But the Conscience is a sure Repository for a Man to lodge and preserve his Treasure in, and the Chest of his own Heart can never be forced open.

Now,

Now, the Use and Improvement of the foregoing Particulars shall be briefly to convince us of the extreme Vanity of most Mens Pretences to Religion. A Man's Religion is all the Claim he has to the Felicities of another World: But can we think it possible in Nature, for a Man to place his greatest Happiness, where he does not place his strongest Affections! How little is the other World in most Mens Thoughts, and yet they can have the Confidence to pretend it to be the grand Object of their Desires! But why should Men, in their greatest Concern, be so false to their own Experience, and those constant Observations which they make of themselves in other Matters? For let any Man consult, and ask his own Heart, whether having once fixed his Love upon any Thing or Person, his Thoughts are not always running after it? Strong Love is a Byass upon the Thoughts; and for a Man to love earnestly, and not to think almost continually of what he loves, is as impossible, as for him to live, and not to breathe.

But besides this, we have shewn several other Marks and Properties, by which Men may infallibly judge of the Truth and Firmness of their Love to God, and to Religion;

as for Instance, can they affirm Religion to be that, which has got such Hold of their Hearts, that no Time, Cost, or Labour, shall be thought too much to be laid out upon it? Is it the Prize they run for? Is it the Thing they delight in? The Thing, with which in all their Distresses they support, and keep up their sinking Spirits? And lastly, is it that, which they value to such a Degree, as to be willing to part with all the World, rather than lose, or renounce it? These are great Things I confess, and yet nothing less will reach the Measures of Christianity.

But the Lives of Men (unanswerable Arguments in this Case) are a sad Demonstration, how few they are who come up to these Terms. Men may, indeed, now and then bestow some scattering Thoughts upon their Souls, and their Future Estate, provided they be at full Leisure from their Business, and their Sports, (which they seldom or never are;) and if, at any time, they should be so, this could amount to no more, than their being religious, when they have nothing else to do. Likewise, when the solemn Returns of God's Publick Worship, and the Law and Custom of the Nation shall call them off from their daily Employments to better Things, Things, they may perhaps, by a few devout Looks and Words; put on something of an Holy-Day-Dress for the present; which yet, like their Sunday-Cloaths, they are sure to lay aside again for the whole Week after. All which, and a great deal more, is far short of making Religion a Man's Business; though yet if it be not so, it is in Effect nothing.

And this, Men know well enough, when they are to deal in Matters of this World, in which, no Pains nor Importunity shall be thought too great, no Attendance too servile, nothing (in a word) too hard to be done or suffered, either to recruit a broken Fortune, or to regain a disgusted Friend; though after all, should a Man chance to recover both, he cannot be sure of keeping either. In like manner, let the trading Person suffer any considerable Damage in the Stock with which he trades; what Care, what Parsimony, what Art shall be used to make up the Breach, and keep the Shop still open? And the Reason of all this is, because the Man is in earnest in what he does, and accordingly acts as one who is so. Whereas, in Mens spiritual Affairs, look all the World over, and you shall every Day see, that the Sins which wound and waste, and make Ha-

vock of the Conscience, which divide and cut it off from God, are committed easily, and passed over lightly, and owned confidently; with a bold Front, and a brazen Face, able to look the Pillory itself out of Countenance; nor does any one, almost, think himself so mortally struck, even by the foulest Guilt, as to need the Balsam of an immediate Repentance; and a present suing out of Pardon at the Throne of Grace. And yet, if a Man dies, as to his temporal Condition, poor and bankrupt, he is not at all the worse; but if he goes out of the World unreconciled to God, it had been good for him, that he had never come into it. For what can it avail a Man to pass from Misery to Misery, and to make one wretched Life only a Preparative to another?

In fine, this we may with great Boldness venture to affirm, that if Men would be at half the Pains to provide themselves Treasures in Heaven, which they are generally at to get Estates here on Earth, it were impossible for any Man to be damned. But when we come to earthly Matters, we do; when to heavenly, we only discourse: Heaven has our Tongue and Talk; but the Earth our whole Man besides.

Neverthe-

Nevertheless, let Men rest assured of this, that God has so ordered the great Business of their eternal Happiness, that their Affections must still be the Fore-runners of their Persons, the constant Harbingers appointed by God to go, and take Possession of those glorious Mansions for them; and consequently, that no Man shall ever come to Heaven himself, who has not sent his Heart thither before him. For where this leads the Way, the other will be sure to follow.

Now to him, who alone is the great Judge of Hearts, and Rewarder of Persons, be render'd and ascrib'd, as is most due, all Praise, Might, Majesty, and Dominion, both now and for evermore. Amen.
